Heidi – Oct 27

Here are the questions for tomorrow's interview. They may not be able to get to all of them during the 15 minutes.

It's been nearly one year since your diagnosis – how are you doing?

What are you looking forward to most about retirement?

Let's talk about your 30 year career in politics, you were leader of the NDP after the party was reduced to two seats in the early 2000s. You became leader in 2003. Can you talk about the role you played in building up the party?

When you enter public life, you have a lot of supporters. A lot of people who believe in your cause. Throughout your career, you have gained a great deal of respect and admiration. However, you also face a lot of criticism while working in politics. How have you dealt with all the criticism and negativity throughout all these years?

I'm sure there are lots of things you are going to miss about your job and being at the legislature. If you could pick one thing, what would it be?

What accomplishment are you most proud of?

Looking ahead to this next year as the province fights its way through the pandemic. What are your plans? Will you be sticking around as an advisor for whoever replaces you as Finance Minister?

What advice do you have for young politician's entering this career for the first time?
