Minor changes for the MO below:

> I understand ministry officials reached out proactively to Mrs. Todd, to talk to her about the summit and why we were doing it. It was agreed that Education Minister Don McRae would be meeting with her in the coming days to review the summit.

> - I think everyone understands that Amanda's death has deeply affected many, many people.

> - Everything the ministry did I know was done with a view to respect for the Todd family and concern for the ongoing impact of Amanda's death particularly among the students and young adults attending the summit.

> -the Ministry ensured Mrs. Todd had a representative attend the summit.

> -Ministry officials look forward to following up with Mrs Todd today.

I thought she was invited?

Carol Todd, Amanda's mother, told The Vancouver Sun she had hoped to attend the conference but wasn't invited. She said she asked if she could attend, but the Education Ministry turned her down, saying her presence might upset young people who would be attending the all-day event and discussing their experiences with bullies.

"I didn't want to speak, I just wanted to listen," she said. No one from the ministry was immediately available for an interview Tuesday.
