Andrew Kurjata: The province and four post-secondary institutions are betting on a half-million dollar marketing strategy.

That's what they've spent on a three-month push to recruit students via a website called Study North, and a social media campaign. Advanced Education Minister Melanie Mark made the announcement at the University of Northern BC this morning.

UNBC, along with the presidents of three other northern colleges, CNC, Northern Lights, and Northwest Community College, helped launch Study North BC. [xrz, adv]

Colleagues:

I would like to apologize as there has been some confusion about which ministry should be identified as the lead for FLMM.

I understand that your respective ministries play (or have played) a role in delivering labour market initiatives.

Please note that Don is of the view that the Ministry of Advanced Education and Skills Training should be the lead for FLMM. In other words, AEST will represent B.C. at the FPT tables including the ministerial one. This being said, we encourage continued collaboration amongst ministries on these important initiatives.

Please inform your respective Ministers to ensure we are all on the same page.

I have copied Trevor as his ministry was wrongly identified as the lead for FLMM in this week's IGRS Update of upcoming FPT meetings.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions. Many thanks, oym

Subject: Update: Recognition of the Douglas College Bachelor of Social Work degree
Attachments: It Douglas College Sept 2017.pdf

Categories: Red Category

Hi Minister,

There has been some progress on this. On September 16, the BC College of Social Workers (BCCSW) provided provisional approval for the Douglas' Bachelor of Social Work degree on the condition that Douglas will undertake best efforts to obtain appropriate accreditation for their Bachelor of Social Work (BSW) degree at the earliest opportunity.

The provisional approval is good news as it indicates that BCCSW is open to recognizing the program, and we are cautiously optimistic that ultimately the graduates of the Douglas BSW program will be able to become registered social workers.

However, it is still unclear to us from the attached letter what other routes to accreditation Douglas could take besides BCCSW's current recognized accreditor, the Canadian Association of Social Workers Education (CASWE). Douglas is not eligible for their accreditation, because CASWE only accredits university programs (not college programs) – this is the issue. CASWE is currently reviewing their “university only” eligibility requirement, but as a professional association, there is no guarantee that they will change this policy.

As a next step, the Ministry of Children and Family Development and AEST will jointly write to BCCSW to request further clarification on:

1. What are the acceptable routes to accreditation, other than CASWE;
2. What “provisional approval” means in the context of their registration process for graduates of the Douglas College BSW program.

We have pursued a collaborative approach with the BCCSW to date <sup>s.13</sup> and have also offered our support to BCCSW to assist in identifying a workable pathway to accreditation for the Douglas social work program.

I will provide you with a further update once we have a response from the BCCSW.

Thanks,
Shannon

Subject: [Announce] Posters around campus

Early this morning, posters promoting hate speech were found at various locations around our Prince George campus. We have heard anecdotally that other institutions in Prince George were also targets.

Upon discovering the posters, security staff documented and then sought assistance from janitors to remove them. Much of this work was done before 6 a.m., so hopefully a limited number of UNBC community members saw the posters.

UNBC is a community that values social and cultural diversity; language and imagery regarding hate speech must not be tolerated.

We have filed a report with the RCMP, who are investigating.

If you see posters of this nature in the future or have any information pertaining to their distribution, please contact security at extension 3333 or via e-mail at security@unbc.ca

Message to Deans and Directors from the Provost:

Good afternoon,

Further to the Announce e-mail regarding the posters promoting hate speech, as a member of the Senior Leadership Forum, I'd ask that you have conversations with your employees about this issue, and make sure they know they can speak to you as their supervisor about any issues they may be encountering on campus, or speak with members of Human Resources if they are experiencing discomfort as a result of this act. Whether they witness odd behaviour, discover materials promoting hate speech, or have any other concerns, we want to provide the appropriate supports.

I would also like to recognize and thank those involved for the quick response to this issue, and I appreciate the action that was taken to remove the posters so quickly.

In addition, should further resources be required to help you or your employees, or if you have other concerns, please raise these matters with your Vice President or supervisor. UNBC strives to provide a safe work environment, and wants to ensure that help is available should you need it.

Thank you,

Dan Ryan
