NEWS RELEASE

Musicians set to electrify audiences at Bass Coast Festival

MERRITT - Thousands of visitors are expected in Merritt, as local and internationally acclaimed musicians perform at the 10th-annual Bass Coast Festival, July 6-9, 2018.

The popular festival features live electronic music on five stages, performance art, large interactive art installations, local artisans, and workshops on topics ranging from event consent culture to music production.

The festival is expected to attract 5,500 people, and generate more than $450,000 in economic benefits for the community. The government has provided $45,000 to help organizers promote the festival.

"This special event is a great asset for the City of Merritt, and I'm proud our government is supporting it," said Lisa Beare, Minister of Tourism, Arts and Culture. "The Bass Coast Festival is helping make Merritt's reputation as a top destination for visitors who love music, art, and nature - and it provides an important boost for local tourism."

The festival will showcase top musical acts like Nadia Rose, MNDSGN and Funk Hunters. Festival participants can also enjoy roving performance art by Calypsa Agency, Made in Alchemy and Freestyle Focus Group.

"We really appreciate government's support for the Bass Coast Festival," said festival organizer Anna Hilliar. "It has allowed us to advertise widely, and sell out the event. We hope our out-of-town visitors will extend their stay in the beautiful Nicola Valley, and try some of the many great outdoor activities the region has to offer."

Government funding for the Bass Coast Festival is being provided through the Tourism Events Program. The program supports events that raise awareness of B.C.'s tourism experiences, and inspires people from around the world to visit the province. These events also generate tourism and economic activities in regions throughout British Columbia.

Quick Facts:

- * Tourism is an important economic driver for B.C., generating more than $17 billion in revenues in 2016.
- * Tourism is one of the province's biggest employers. More than 133,000 people work in this industry.
- * Tourism is growing in importance for B.C.'s economy. In 2016, the industry contributed $7.9 billion in added value to the province's gross domestic product (GDP). This is an increase of over 5.6% over the previous year.
- * The Government of British Columbia invests over $123 million in the tourism sector annually.
- * In 2017, 5.7 million international visitors came to B.C. - a 3.3% increase (181,700 more visitors) over 2016.

NEWS RELEASE

New hospital will help people in the Cowichan Valley access quality health care

NORTH COWICHAN - To provide better health care for a growing region of the province, the B.C. government has greenlit a new hospital for the Cowichan Valley.

"People who live in the Cowichan Valley have waited a long time for the hospital they deserve, and that wait will soon be over," said Premier John Horgan. "The new hospital we're announcing today will serve people in the valley for decades to come, meaning better health care in their own backyard."

The existing Cowichan District Hospital was opened in 1967, and has 134 beds. Since the hospital's opening, the valley's population has more than doubled, and is expected to grow by another 20% over the next few decades.

"Cowichan District Hospital is 50 years old. The capacity issues it faces on a daily basis are frustrating for patients and the hospital's dedicated health-care workers. It was critical that we take action," said Adrian Dix, Minister of Health. "We received a concept plan, and approved it within months, so work could get going as soon as possible, and people could have a new hospital."

In February 2018, a concept plan for the new hospital was submitted to the Ministry of Health. It was approved in June 2018, clearing the way for further work.

Construction of the new hospital is expected to begin in 2021, and is expected to be nearly triple the size of the current one.

The details, such as scope, budget and procurement method, will be finalized in the business plan stage. This stage will take approximately 12 to 18 months. Upon approval of the business plan, the project will proceed to procurement, and then to construction.

The planning for a replacement hospital has been a collaborative effort between the Government of B.C., Island Health, Cowichan Valley Regional District, Cowichan Valley Regional Hospital District, the municipalities of Duncan and North Cowichan, local First Nations and local stakeholder groups.

Quotes:

Doug Routley, MLA for Nanaimo-North Cowichan -

"Cowichan District Hospital holds a special place in my heart, as well as many other people and health-care workers throughout the region. The new, modern hospital will continue the tradition of providing quality care for generations to come."

Jon Lefebure, chair, Cowichan Valley Regional Hospital District -

"We are pleased to see this important project move forward and will continue to work with the Province and Island Health to see it come to fruition. A new hospital is a major investment, by both the Province and local taxpayers, in the long-term sustainability and resiliency of our region."

Leah Hollins, board chair, Island Health -

"Having a new hospital, with modern technology and advancements, will do a great deal to support patients and their families in the Cowichan Valley. It will also help attract quality medical professionals, who are in high demand across the province and the country."

Quick Facts:

* Opened in 1967, the current Cowichan District Hospital has 134 beds, and provides a range of inpatient and outpatient services: emergency care, surgery, obstetrics/gynecology, pediatrics, medical imaging, acute psychiatric services, Indigenous health services.

* All new hospitals in B.C. are planned to a LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) Gold standard.

NEWS RELEASE
Internship programs help spark innovation for students, industry

BURNABY - Students throughout the province are benefiting from a provincial investment of $10 million in internship programs that connect budding researchers with industry partners to solve real-world problems.

"Research internship programs are giving our students and researchers the skills, knowledge and experience they need to advance our knowledge-based economy and build the best B.C.," said Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training. "These students are doing innovative work that will support technology, health and business sectors, so that everyone can prosper and thrive. Partnerships between students, industry and our post-secondary institutions are helping to support a strong, sustainable 21st-century economy."

The investment promotes innovation in British Columbia by funding internships through Mitacs, a national not-for-profit organization that builds partnerships between undergraduate and graduate students and researchers, post-secondary institutions, and industry and community partners. Mitacs interns are able to apply their expertise to challenges that are affecting business and communities today, in fields such as technology, health, business and engineering.

"Our $10 million investment in Mitacs will advance B.C. innovation by providing students with unique opportunities to apply their research in the real world," said Bruce Ralston, Minister of Jobs, Trade and Technology. "Whether finding ways to make bicycle helmets safer or understanding how to meet future food needs, B.C. students participating in Mitacs internships are unlocking new discoveries to improve people's lives and expand our economy."

One example is the work of Mitacs post-doctoral intern Myriam Juda. Her research aims to improve patient outcomes at Burnaby Centre for Mental Health and Addiction by syncing artificial lighting to natural rhythms of the sun and the body.

Juda is partnering with the centre, Simon Fraser University's department of psychology and BC Hydro, to explore whether improvements to the physical environment - specifically matching lighting to circadian rhythms - can help make the physical environment more conducive to recovery.

Mitacs has designed and delivered research and training programs in Canada for 19 years. Mitacs works with 60 post-secondary institutions, thousands of companies, and both federal and provincial governments to build partnerships that support industrial and social innovation in Canada.

Quotes:

Alejandro Adem, CEO and scientific director of Mitacs -

"The support announced today by the Government of British Columbia will help connect top talent from the province's post-secondary institutions to businesses and not-for-profit organizations. Through Mitacs internships, students are able to transfer their knowledge into action, turning their research into successes that lead towards greater innovation in Canada."

Myriam Juda, Mitacs intern -

"Being able to work collaboratively with BC Hydro, SFU and the Burnaby Centre for Mental Health and Addiction has helped me bring my research to a real-world problem. My hope is that by making the environment more supportive for recovery, we can improve patient outcomes."

Quick Facts:

Government funding will support three Mitacs programs to benefit students and industry:

- * Mitacs Accelerate: Offers minimum four-month collaborative research internships with industry for graduate students and post-doctoral researchers.
- * Mitacs Elevate: Provides two-year collaborative post-doctoral fellowships with industry, with special focus on advancing research management and professional skills.
- * Mitacs Globalink: Offers research internships for top international undergraduates to study in Canada, or for Canadian students to conduct research in a Mitacs partner country.

Subject: New Geoscience mineral BC RFPs announced

I am writing to let you know that Geoscience BC has released six Requests for Proposals (RFPs) for new projects relating to our minerals focus area. I encourage you to review these opportunities and share them with your network to generate new high quality and unbiased earth science research and data to be shared publicly for the benefit of all British Columbians.

Projects resulting from the RFPs will deliver new earth science and baseline data for prospectors, explorers, mine developers, governments, community leaders and Indigenous groups to make informed, evidence-based decisions about mineral resources. They will also help to identify and mitigate risks, answer specific environmental and social questions and stimulate investment, jobs and socio-economic development in British Columbia.

Anyone can submit a proposal up to the deadline on Monday October 1, 2018 at 12:00 pm Pacific Standard Time for the following topics:

- RFP 2018-01: Exploring the Big Gap in Copper-Gold Deposits of BC’s Central Interior
- RFP 2018-02: New Tools for Discovery
- RFP 2018-03: Unlocking Value – A Smarter Look at Big Data
- RFP 2018-04: Understanding Water
- RFP 2018-05: Competitive, Responsible Mines for the Future
- RFP 2018-06: Capturing, Preserving, and Capitalizing our Heritage of Geoscience

Each RFP topic has been selected using feedback received during the development of Geoscience BC’s Strategic Plan 2018-2022, as well as expert input from Geoscience BC’s volunteer Minerals Technical Advisory Committee (TAC).

You can find full details about the application process and each RFP on the Geoscience BC website here.

We appreciate your support in generating new ideas for earth science projects. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Bruce Madu

NEWS RELEASE

Province, Dan's Legacy Foundation to provide counselling support to more youth

VICTORIA - The Government of British Columbia is taking action to support young people struggling with mental health and addiction.

To ensure that more at-risk youth in Metro Vancouver have access to the mental health and addictions services they need, the Province is working with the Dan's Legacy Foundation to add four new therapists, and expand their successful therapeutic programs.

Judy Darcy, Minister of Mental Health and Addictions, and representatives from the Dan's Legacy Foundation, made the announcement in New Westminster at Queen's Park Arena.

"Creating a mental health and addictions system of care that is seamless and connected, and that works for children and youth, and partners with Indigenous peoples, is a top priority for this government," Darcy said. "Dan's Legacy Foundation has helped hundreds of young people living with mental health and addictions challenges access the services they need to find their pathways to hope. Today's announcement will help more youth access services, resulting in positive life changes for families throughout Metro Vancouver."

The $200,000 in funding from the Province will be used by the Dan's Legacy Foundation to improve access to its current therapeutic counselling and life-skills intervention programs. The programs are for young people 15 to 25 years old who are at significant risk of overdose, self-harm, homelessness and suicide. Specifically, funding will be used to hire four new therapists who specialize in trauma-based mental health and addictions counselling for youth.

The funding increase is anticipated to help an additional 125 youth over the next 12 months, doubling the foundation's capacity to serve at-risk youth.

"In the past, access to services has been a big barrier for many young people who struggle with mental health and addiction challenges," said Katrine Conroy, Minister of Children and Family Development. "Funding like this means more youth and young adults in Metro Vancouver will get the types of support they need - whether it's practical tools to help them live their best life, or just having someone they can talk with who can offer guidance without judgment."

The Ministry of Mental Health and Addictions is committed to working with its partners to create a mental health and addictions system of care that works for everyone. As part of the ministry's mandate, a mental health and addictions strategy is being developed to guide the transformation of B.C.'s mental-health-care system, and will include a strong focus on prevention and early intervention and child and youth mental health and addictions.

Quotes:

Guyle Clark, president, Dan's Legacy Foundation -

"We'd like to thank Minister Darcy and the Government of B.C. for providing us with much-needed funding for our programs. The funds will help us hire more therapists to meet the needs of hundreds of youth who are asking for our help. By moving upstream and placing a focus on harm prevention, we can help young people find recovery before mental health and addictions challenges become more severe, and assist them in working towards their educational, employment and life goals."

Kaylie, youth client, Dan's Legacy Foundation -

"Dan's Legacy Foundation has provided me with the opportunity to maximize my health in all aspects - food security, stable housing and a new perspective on life. Since Tom Littlewood (program director, Dan's Legacy Foundation) and his team have been working with me, I have gained employment, started a workout routine and have gained control over my mental health. I never thought I'd live to see my 20s, and here I am living them to the fullest, thanks to Tom, and Dan's Legacy Foundation."

Quick Facts:

- * Counsellors from the Dan's Legacy Foundation work in partnership with allied community-based organizations that provide wraparound services to youth, by offering a blended model of cognitive behavioural therapy and life-skills programs.
- * Dan's Legacy Foundation's programs complement the other organizations' programs, which focus on youth mental health and addiction, culturally appropriate and culturally based supports, fetal alcohol spectrum disorder (FASD) and helping young mothers and youth in foster care access supportive housing.
- * Approximately 30% of the young adults that receive supports through the foundation identify as Indigenous.
- * Dan's Legacy Foundation's therapists work with youth representing a wide range of cultural and socio-economic backgrounds. The majority of its clients are youth who are aging out of care.
- * Bursaries to cover the costs of programs are provided by the foundation for those who need it, ensuring everyone has access to the programs.

NEWS RELEASE
Highway 19A resurfacing improves busy Nanaimo roadway

NANAIMO - People travelling on Highway 19A in Nanaimo will soon experience an easier drive, as a portion of the route will be resurfaced in summer 2018.

A nine-kilometre-long section of Highway 19A that sees approximately 40,000 vehicles per day will be improved, with resurfacing between Brechin Road and Norwell Drive, and repairs between Norwell Drive and Mary Ellen Drive.

"Thousands of people drive this busy stretch of Highway 19A every day to get around Nanaimo, and there is some wear and tear as a result," said Claire Trevena, Minister of Transportation and Infrastructure. "This route is the primary access to Nanaimo's shopping centres and connection point for businesses. People will notice a big difference with new pavement and repairs between Brechin Road and Mary Ellen Drive."

Construction on the project will be restricted to night-time work only (between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.) to minimize delays during peak-traffic periods. Drivers, cyclists and pedestrians are reminded to obey traffic-control personnel, construction speed limits and all signs. Notices will be posted on dynamic message boards, as well as on DriveBC.

Lafarge Canada Inc. of Nanaimo has been awarded the $3.5-million contract for the resurfacing project. Work is expected to begin next week, and finish by mid-September 2018.

INFORMATION BULLETIN

Highway 1 resurfacing to revitalize corridor for residents and travellers

CHILLIWACK - People travelling near Chilliwack and Hope, along Highway 1, soon will enjoy an easier drive with 42 kilometres of resurfacing work starting next week.

The project will include resurfacing three main sections of the highway:

- * from the Young Road Overpass to Annis Road, through Chilliwack;
- * from the Bridal Falls Underpass to the Yale Tunnel, through sections in Hope; and
- * a segment of Dogwood Valley Road, south of Yale.

On Highway 1, the work will involve milling and filling sections of the highway, including associated passing lanes, as well as resurfacing the Hunter Creek Rest Area and scales. Dogwood Valley Road will be rehabilitated by replacing the existing surface.

The majority of work will be done outside of peak traffic periods to minimize delays for commuters. Construction is expected to be completed by late summer.

Key West Asphalt Ltd., based out of Surrey, has been awarded the $3.5-million contract.

Drivers, cyclists and pedestrians are reminded to obey all traffic-control personnel, construction speed limits and signs.

Subject: Re: For approval - MMM quote - Hydro fast-charging network NR

FYI this the final version and is scheduled for release by BCH tomorrow at 5am.

BC Hydro adds fast charging stations to its network, connecting B.C. east to west
Next phase to include north-south network

VANCOUVER: BC Hydro announced today that it has completed the second phase of its electric vehicle fast charging network, allowing drivers to travel across B.C. from the Alberta border to Tofino – and the next phase will connect drivers north.

The second phase includes 28 new stations, in addition to the 30 that were completed in 2016. There are 13 new stations in the Lower Mainland and two new stations at the Britton Creek rest area on the Coquihalla Highway, allowing drivers to quickly charge up before heading to the Southern Interior – or to the Kootenays. The stations also connect drivers from Horseshoe Bay to the west coast of Vancouver Island.

BC Hydro is planning its next phase, which will connect drivers to the north from Kamloops to Prince George – and eventually to Prince Rupert.

“Our government is making zero emission transportation choices more accessible for all British Columbians,” said Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Michelle Mungall. “B.C. already has one of Canada’s largest charging networks, but now motorists can travel all the way from Golden to Tofino using these new fast chargers.”

BC Hydro’s fast charging network can charge an electric vehicle’s battery to 80 per cent in 30 minutes or less. The network is designed to provide drivers with charging options when they need them – helping reduce the ‘range anxiety’ many drivers feel about long road trips.

“We’re very pleased to provide this network of fast chargers to encourage electric vehicle drivers to get out and explore B.C. this summer,” said Chris O’Riley, BC Hydro President and Chief Operating Officer. “Electric vehicles are a great option for British Columbians looking to reduce their impact on the environment because we generate 98 per cent clean electricity. They also help lower their driving costs by around 75 per cent.”

As the number of electric vehicles on B.C. roads grows, charging sessions at BC Hydro’s existing stations have increased 63 per cent over the last year year. Between May 2017 and May 2018 there were over 22,000 charges at these stations. This represents around 542,000 kilometers of driving and the equivalent of approximately 138,000 kilograms in carbon dioxide emissions savings. There are currently around 9,000 electric vehicles on the road in B.C. and that number is expected to rise to 300,000 by 2030.

BC Hydro has been installing charging stations throughout the province since 2012 with support from the provincial and federal governments and in partnership with municipalities, regional districts and others, like Loblaws and Accelerate Kootenays. The stations completed in phase two include:

Lower Mainland:

- Coquitlam Superstore (east)
- Coquitlam Superstore (west)

- Horseshoe Bay - 6000 block of Bruce Street
- Mission Superstore
- Peace Arch Superstore
- Richmond Superstore
- Surrey - Esso Tynehead (to be energized in mid-July)
- UBC Wesbrook Place
- Vancouver - 500 block of Homer Street in Vancouver (two stations)
- Vancouver - 5000 block of West Boulevard
- Vancouver Superstore - Grandview Highway (to be energized in mid-July)
- Vancouver Superstore - South East Marine Drive

Vancouver Island:

- Campbell River community centre
- Courtenay Superstore
- Nanaimo Superstore
- Pacific Rim Visitor Centre
- Port Alberni No Frills
- Qualicum Quality Foods
- Sidney City Hall

Interior:

- Britton Creek rest area along the Coquihalla Highway (two stations)

East Kootenay:

- Canal Flats Arena
- City of Cranbrook municipal parking lot on Cranbrook Street N
- District of Sparwood municipal office
- Golden - end of 9th Avenue (to be energized in mid-July)
- Jaffray Pump & Pantry
- Radium Hot Springs community centre

Dear Sirs and Madams

My sisters and I are really at our wits end. Yesterday we had a telephone conference with Greg Clegg, Dwayne Werle and Ashly Scriba all of CNRL.

They are proposing a pipeline across our property (north of Fort St John).

Among other things, we questioned whether there would be a permit given for the project. Mr Clegg announced that it would be a "slam dunk". We mentioned that if a permit were issued, we would go to the tribunal. Again, he said he had no doubts that it would be a slam dunk, and that work would commence in the near future.

This raised many concerns:

We filed a submission (which I have attached) raising several problems ranging from past trespassing, lack of communication, altered documents after signatures, questioning the timing and scope of the environmental study that was done, the area taken up by the proposed line, and the lack of offers of compensation for some of the above. Emails and phone calls go unanswered for weeks or months. You will find all of this documented in the submission.

How can the BCOGC in good conscience grant a permit with so many outstanding unresolved issues? We have not heard from anyone at that office concerning this submission.

Who advocates for the landowners? Where do we go for unbiased help? Please at least have someone read the list of problems and have a discussion with us.

With BC being a green province, I would hope that we can get some feedback from someone please before CNRL are granted their "slam dunk"

We look forward to hearing from one of your offices. We are running out of time to alter the path of the proposal.

Thank you in advance

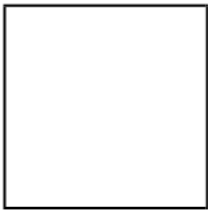

Yours,

Subject: Meeting Request with Minister Mungall re the SOP "on hold" status.

Dear Minister Mungall,

I am writing to you on behalf of companies that have projects accepted by BC Hydro into the Standing Offer Program. The following companies are organised as a group and wish to meet with you.

The companies are:-

Bridge Power Holdings Ltd (owner of 7779615 Canada Ltd)
Canoe Pass Tidal Energy Corp
Ditidaht River Green General Partner Inc
English Hydro Power Limited Partnership
Fosthall Creek Power Ltd
McKay Creek Power Ltd
Rocky Mountain Solar Ltd
Synex Energy Resources Ltd

Wartenbe Wind Project Limited Partnership.

The SOP was designed for small BC developers to have access to a market. BC Hydro accepted projects into the Standing Offer Program and allocated Commercial Operations Dates, electricity prices and GWh they would purchase. These small local companies have spent millions of dollars to get into the queue and have spent millions more since. They have been providing work within communities that have projects and across the wider consulting industry in BC. BC Hydro putting the negotiation of EPAs "on hold" is having serious repercussions on these projects, on the owners, on the consulting industry working on projects, on First Nations involved with the projects and on local communities who are expecting both economic and employment opportunities to arise from them. It is impacting over one third of a billion dollars of investment capital allocated to be spent in BC. It is also impacting future procurement that could happen in BC as the uncertainty created by the "hold" is moving BC into the rank of a high risk investment jurisdiction.

We would like to meet with you to discuss our concerns and see if there is any way we can assist in finding a solution to this problem. We are able to come to Nelson to meet, or if you are unable to find time for a meeting in the short time remaining before your maternity leave starts, we are able to meet with the Premier's office wherever suits them.

Yours sincerely

Martin Mullany

Subject: Week in Review: July 2-5

Hi all,

Here are just a few things our government announced this week:

Province releases Employer Health Tax implementation details

- For over a decade, British Columbia has been the only province to maintain MSP fees. We are eliminating MSP premiums and introducing the Employer Health Tax (EHT), a more progressive system that will put money back into the pockets of British Columbians.
- The Ministry of Finance has released an Employer Health Tax (EHT) tax notice, as part of the next steps toward the elimination of Medical Services Plan (MSP) premiums and transition to the EHT. The transition to the EHT includes funding that ensures public services will not be impacted. This includes funding for colleges and teaching universities, research universities, community-health and social-service providers, school districts and health authorities. A full list of the implementation details can be found at the Ministry of Finance's EHT tax notice here.
- "Our government is working hard to make life more affordable for people in our province. We are proud to be eliminating regressive MSP premiums, and returning up to $1,800 each year to families across our province," said Carole James, Minister of Finance on Wednesday, July 4. "While other provinces scrapped MSP premiums, the former government doubled and downloaded these unfair fees onto middle-class individuals, families, and seniors. Replacing MSP premiums with the EHT follows the lead of other provinces, and is a much fairer and progressive approach."

B.C. expands program to keep youth away from gang life

- To help educate youth and to fight the lure of gangs and gang violence in British Columbia's communities, the Province is providing $1.12 million in additional funding to expand the Expect Respect and a Safe Education (ERASE) anti-bullying program. With gang and gun violence occurring in communities throughout British Columbia, the Province is committed to helping put an end to gang life. While enforcement measures have been successful, enforcement on its own is not enough. This is why government is taking action to better equip youth to resist getting involved in gang-related activity. Click here to learn more about this announcement.
- "Programs that address the circumstances that lead to gang involvement help to create positive community connections, and a better way of life," said Mike Farnworth, Minister of Public Safety and Solicitor General on Tuesday, July 3. "We're ensuring we provide the resources necessary for our youth, by partnering with the Ministry of Education to expand on their very successful provincewide ERASE program, to include new training modules focused on gang and gun violence prevention."

BC Arts Council sets course toward more support for arts

- British Columbia's diverse arts and cultural communities will benefit from a new strategic plan, the BC Arts Council has announced. The plan sets out the council's new commitments to enhance arts and cultural development throughout the province. New Foundations: Strategic Plan for the British Columbia Arts Council 2018-2022, lays out the framework for the goals and actions of the council for the next five years. Working in collaboration with arts and culture organizations around B.C., the strategy is aimed at improving delivery of arts and culture supports.
- "The strategy offers renewed vision, values and strategic direction for the BC Arts Council," said Lisa Beare, Minister of Tourism, Arts and Culture on Wednesday, July 4. "This plan will strengthen opportunities for British Columbians all across the province, to participate and thrive in the creative economy today, and in the future."

Applications accepted to expand high-speed internet access

- Reliable high speed internet in rural and remote areas is a valuable resource that enables people to connect with family and friends, do business, access to information and take advantage of all the opportunities afforded by the digital age. We understand the difference connectivity can make in people's lives and that is why we are working to improve the services that British Columbians depend on.

- Local governments, internet service providers and community organizations can now apply for grant funding to connect high-speed internet for British Columbians who need it the most – those living in rural, remote and Indigenous communities. Click here to learn more.
- “High costs are one of the main barriers to connecting communities,” said Jinny Sims, Minister of Citizens’ Services on Tuesday, July 3. “This funding will support last-mile projects that will help close the gap between urban and rural areas, and allow B.C.’s smaller communities to better participate in the digital economy.”

Researchers explore the potential of basic income in B.C.

- Our government understands that social programs were neglected for far too long and as a result, too many people are struggling to get by in our province. After years of neglect and indifference from the previous government, we have an opportunity to create a better province where everyone has a chance to succeed and that is why our government is taking steps to explore the concept of basic-income.
- As part of the Province’s efforts to reduce poverty and prepare for the emerging economy, three distinguished researchers have been appointed to lead a B.C.-focused exploration of basic income. The committee will oversee independent research to test the feasibility of a basic-income pilot in British Columbia. It will also look at how basic-income principles might be used to improve the existing income and social-support system. The committee will also consider the impact that advances in technology and automation, and other shifts, are predicted to have on the labour market over the next several decades.
- “The researchers will look at whether a basic income is a viable option to reduce poverty, build financial security, and increase inclusion and well-being,” said Shane Simpson, Minister of Social Development and Poverty Reduction on Tuesday, July 3. “This is a complex area of study, and our government looks forward to learning more about how to enhance the income-support system, to achieve measurable and lasting improvements for people living in poverty.”

Fitch affirms British Columbia’s AAA credit rating and strong fiscal plan

- While the previous government said we could not afford to make life better for everyone, Fitch’s rating confirms that governments can choose to have a strong economy without sacrificing the services that people depend on. We’re committed to making life affordable, delivering services and creating a strong, sustainable economy by putting people first.
- Fitch Ratings has affirmed British Columbia’s AAA credit rating, citing the province’s strong economic performance, stable fiscal results and diversified economy. B.C.’s high credit rating means that the province has lower debt servicing costs, ensuring that more funding is available to dedicate to making life more affordable, and investing in services for people.
- “All three international rating agencies have looked at our government’s first full budget, recognized B.C.’s strength and confirmed our AAA credit rating,” said Carole James, Minister of Finance on Tuesday, July 3. “British Columbians and investors know our plan to put people first is affordable, prudent and sustainable.”

It’s official: Dawson Creek hospital redevelopment approved

- Under the previous government, British Columbians faced growing wait lists and overcrowded hospitals. Our government is taking action and investing in healthcare so people can get the quality services they need, where and when they need it.
- People in the South Peace region will benefit from a redeveloped and expanded Dawson Creek and District Hospital. The redeveloped hospital will include a new inpatient building, bigger emergency department, modern operating rooms and more beds.
- “I am proud to announce that the government has approved the concept plan to redevelop and expand the Dawson Creek and District Hospital. That means the project is a go and we are moving full steam ahead,” Minister Dix said on Wednesday, July 4. “This day has been a long, long, long time coming. Our government approved this project so patients can receive public health-care services in updated, state-of-the-art surroundings. The South Peace region, its patients and health-care workers deserves nothing less.”

INFORMATION BULLETIN
Progress report on clean up of contaminated sites released

VICTORIA - Government is protecting the health and safety of British Columbians and the environment, by continuing to remediate contaminated sites that were abandoned by their owners.

The 2018 report on the Crown Contaminated Sites Program, released on Thursday, July 5, 2018, details work done over the past two years to investigate and remediate sites that have been contaminated by historic industrial activities.

The program has investigated a total of 87 sites, which includes 19 sites where remediation is complete and 15 sites where investigation and remediation are ongoing. Most of the sites - including mine sites - reviewed by this program were active before modern environmental standards were in place.

The report highlights the remediation of the Bralorne-Takla site, which was completed in collaboration with Takla Lake First Nation. Other highlights include the remediation of the Atlin Ruffner mill and tailings site, as well as the investigation and remediation of the former Britannia mine site.

The program, established in 2003, manages the remediation of high-risk contaminated sites on Crown land in order to protect human health and the environment. The contamination generally dates back to the previous century, when impacts of industrial development were not well managed and before current environmental standards and regulations were in place.

The Environmental Management Act ensures that those that pollute are held responsible under a polluter pay principle, so that the taxpayer does not have to assume these clean-up costs.

Quick Facts:

* A site is contaminated if the soil, groundwater or sediment contains waste or a substance in an amount or concentration that exceeds environmental quality standards.

* The most common contaminants found at sites include heavy metals, such as lead, arsenic, cadmium and zinc.

INFORMATION BULLETIN

Quesnel residents to see Highway 97 improvements within the community

QUESNEL - Residents and visitors to the Cariboo will experience better safety and traffic flow with changes to a key intersection on Highway 97, as a result of the now-finalized Quesnel Transportation Study.

The study examined the traffic patterns and short-, medium- and long-term transportation needs for the community. As a result, the Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure will take the following actions:

- * Reconfiguring lanes on Highway 97 at Front Street in downtown Quesnel, to improve traffic flow and pedestrian safety, and upgrading to LED lighting at the intersections of Carson, Shepherd, McNaughton and St. Laurent avenues. This work will begin in the coming weeks and finish in fall 2018.
- * Advancing design work this fall for safety improvements in the Racing Road/Hydraulic Road area of Highway 97. This project will involve consolidating access to the highway and installing a traffic signal with full-access movement along this section of highway. Additional community engagement is planned as part of this design phase.
- * Engineering work to further investigate the proposed North-South Interconnector route, which received significant support in public engagement. This will help enable the ministry to build a business case for future funding.

The comprehensive study analyzed the corridor from the Highway 97/Barkerville Highway Junction to Basalt Road in the Quesnel area. Within 14 kilometres, conditions along Highway 97 change significantly as a result of the challenging geography and adjacent land uses.

The Quesnel Transportation Study included community engagement throughout the process, with open houses in April 2017 and February 2018. The engagement results are also posted on the project website.

Surrey Mayor's gang taskforce

Website translations

Summary of talk shows

CKYE RED 93.1 FM The Harjinder Thind Show 8:00 am – 11:00 am.

Major Topics discussed

- Surrey Mayors gang taskforce: Talking about Surrey Mayor's gang task force report that was released yesterday Mr. Thind says that the task force was formed when Hepner had all intentions to run again as Mayor. He wonders that now that she doesn't plan to run how effective these recommendations will be. He talked at length about the inadmissible patron program that the task force recommends saying that this has been in force for the last 10 years in Vancouver. He said that Surrey at that time was also given a choice to join the program but the city rejected the idea. he noted that Mike Farnworth has given an additional funding of $1.3 Million dollars but he wondered where this money will actually be used.

- Employment standards website translations- Mr. Thind talks about the Punjabi version of the employment standards website saying that not only has the website not been updated since 2016 the translation itself is so horrific that some words make no sense. He read out some of the words and sentences used saying these make absolutely no sense, even though the script is surely in Gurmukhi (Punjabi). He says governments usually do it perhaps to please the minorities and they do realize that Punjabis are a force to be reckoned with, and though it's a good thing that these websites are translated but they should at least make sense. He said he would like to bring this to the attention of Minister Harry Bains who is a Punjabi himself that this must be corrected immediately as it is bringing a bad name to the government. He appealed to the government to use good translators and not those who work in the government, because they might not be qualified to do this job.

Major topics discussed:

- New drinking and driving laws to be implemented – Guest on show: Lawyer Brij Mohan. Mr. Mohan talks about how the new changes will affect drivers, specifically the breath test which drivers can't refuse anymore. He says this will compromise the personal freedoms of people especially those of minorities who could be targeted because of their race. He says giving extra powers of police is not always the best course of action. Mixed reactions from the public.

Subject: Have You Registered Yet To Visit Gas Indonesia Summit & Exhibition From 1-3 August 2018

Dear Michelle ,

Have you registered to visit the exhibition for Gas Indonesia Summit & Exhibition 2018? From 1 – 3 August, the global oil and gas industry will once again converge in Jakarta Indonesia, Senior executives from local and regional organisations such as integrated energy companies, exploration and production companies, technology providers, utility companies and service companies will attend the event. It provides an excellent showcase for trade professionals from around the world to interact with exhibiting companies displaying the latest advancements and technology from the gas and LNG industry. Meet with companies such as Ministry of Energy and Mineral Resources (ESDM), Special Task Force for Upstream Oil and Gas Activities (SKK Migas) and Perusahaan Listrik Negara (PLN) PT Persero and is hosted by PT Perusahaan Gas Negara (Persero) Tbk (PGN), Schlumberger, Shell, SNC-Lavalin, Rieckermann and many more!

Why Visit?

Network with industry leaders from around the world who are driving change and progress

- Visit GIS to network with resource owners from Indonesia and South East Asia that are looking for partners to help them get the most from their assets through operational excellence, cost effectiveness and profitability
- Register to learn about cutting edge technologies and solutions that integrated energy companies are bringing to some of the most complex challenges facing the Asian gas and LNG sectors today
- Attend to explore products and services from specialised exhibiting companies including contractors, service companies and technology providers across the full stream natural gas value chain
- Join thousands of trade professionals to identify new business opportunities, Asian and Indonesian market trends, and potential business partners.
- Learn from global and local experts and benefit from thousands of senior executives conducting business during the 3 days of the event
- The All New Young Professionals Day – Connecting Future Leaders to Indonesia's Energy Industries – As part of our commitment to the Indonesian energy industry we have expanded our programme for 2018 to include a Young Professionals' Day. Its purpose is to connect aspiring oil and gas professionals with the major organisations driving Indonesia's energy industry.

- To Visit the exhibition is free of charge!
- Download the visitor brochure for more information

Every 100th Pre-Registered Visitor will receive a free delegate pass worth USD $1300 on site.

We look forward to welcoming you at GIS 2018

NEWS RELEASE
BC Arts Council sets course toward more support for arts

VANCOUVER - British Columbia's diverse arts and cultural communities will benefit from a new strategic plan, the BC Arts Council has announced.

The plan sets out the council's new commitments to enhance arts and cultural development throughout the province.

"The strategy offers renewed vision, values and strategic direction for the BC Arts Council," said Lisa Beare, Minister of Tourism, Arts and Culture. "This plan will strengthen opportunities for British Columbians all across the province, to participate and thrive in the creative economy today, and in the future."

New Foundations: Strategic Plan for the British Columbia Arts Council 2018-2022, lays out the framework for the goals and actions of the council for the next five years. Working in collaboration with arts and culture organizations around B.C., the strategy is aimed at improving delivery of arts and culture supports.

Key objectives include:

- * improving sustainability and creative development;
- * enhancing engagement with Indigenous arts and culture;
- * increasing equity, diversity and access; and
- * expanding regional arts and community arts.

"The BC Arts Council has heard a clear message that artists and cultural organizations are seeking new approaches to support sustainability and resiliency in B.C.'s arts and culture sector," said Susan Jackson, chair of the BC Arts Council. "This strategic plan reflects the council's strong commitment to renewal, artistic expression, equity and access, so that all people in British Columbia can participate in the arts and celebrate culture."

The BC Arts Council is British Columbia's lead agency for arts funding and development in the province. Funding provided by the council is done through a peer-review adjudication process. Grant recipients represent a diverse group of artists and arts organizations from every region of the province, including Indigenous groups, scholarship students and community arts councils.

Quick Facts:

- * This is the third strategic plan released by the BC Arts Council since 2009.
- * The new strategic plan was developed following a series of consultations with artists, cultural organizations and communities around the province over the past three years.
- * In the 2018 Budget, the Province increased its support of the BC Arts Council by $15 million over the next three years.

NEWS RELEASE

It's official: Dawson Creek hospital redevelopment approved

DAWSON CREEK - People in the South Peace region will benefit from a redeveloped and expanded Dawson Creek and District Hospital, announced Adrian Dix, Minister of Health.

"I am proud to announce that the government has approved the concept plan to redevelop and expand the Dawson Creek and District Hospital. That means the project is a go and we are moving full steam ahead," Dix said.

"This day has been a long, long, long time coming. Our government approved this project so patients can receive public health-care services in updated, state-of-the-art surroundings. The South Peace region, its patients and health-care workers deserves nothing less."

The redeveloped hospital will include a new inpatient building, bigger emergency department, modern operating rooms and more beds.

With support from the local community, Northern Health has identified the hospital for renewal, as a priority, since 2008. The Dawson Creek and District Hospital Master Program and Master Plan was completed in December 2013. Northern Health submitted a concept plan for a redeveloped hospital in September 2015, but it did not receive consideration for advancement in the capital planning process. Upon request of the government, Northern Health provided an updated plan in March 2018.

"We're so pleased to receive this announcement from the Province of B.C. that commits to improvements to our facility, services and care of patients at Dawson Creek and District Hospital," said Colleen Nyce, Northern Health board chair. "This project will support our pledge to take a person- and family-centred approach to everything we do in a modern and up-to-date setting."

"The Peace River Regional Hospital District joins in celebrating that the much-needed improvements to Dawson Creek and District Hospital are moving forward," said Brad Sperling, Peace River Regional Hospital District chair. "A redeveloped and expanded hospital in Dawson Creek will ensure that health-care services meet the needs of our residents well into the future. I would like to thank the City of Dawson Creek and the PRRD board of directors for working together with the Province to see this much-needed project come to reality."

Quick Facts:

- * Concept planning is an important part of the process for planning a hospital. It's an opportunity to make sure that the building meets community needs and future demands. The plan outlines a high-level vision, providing a framework for projected health services and infrastructure.
- * The business plan phase is now underway and will finalize details, such as scope and budget. This stage takes approximately 12 to 18 months. Upon approval of the business plan, the project will proceed to procurement and then construction. Shovels are expected to go in the dirt in early 2021.
- * Opened in 1960, Dawson Creek and District Hospital has 44 beds and serves a region with a population of approximately 28,000. Services include emergency, surgical, maternity, mental health and substance use and cancer care. There is also an intensive-care unit, laboratory and diagnostics.

Subject: Oil and Gas Development in the NE peace region is socially irresponsible in terms of human and environmental health

Please find attached a letter of opposition for a gas well multi pad to be constructed s.22

I have recently been given 21 days to write a response of opposition to Encana Corporations proposed Oil and Gas Project. Obviously this is not enough time for most people to respond or understand the risks of the project. I am alarmed that these multi location oil and gas projects do not fall under an Environmental Assessment. There has been no adequate baseline studies done by the proponent and there are no legal requirements for them to do so? When asked at the meeting where they were the response is they are not required.

Don't get me wrong we are not anti development but this process has many "Gaps" in regards to the impacts of both chronic exposure information to human health and the environmental impacts.

Encana has paid farmers around us a year in advance to place pipelines and made them sign non disclosure letters. The "imaginary" consultation circle leaves out a number of neighbours who will be directly impacted. At the meeting there was no technical documents no environmental documents or Emergency response plan. My family was consulted but we are not in the ERP. This is disturbing as we are talking about sour gas wells and H2S. The demographic of people at this meeting was 55 plus white farmers who wouldn't stand a chance of either responding or understanding the science. Plus we were given no information at the meeting. First Nations are not adequately informed because of Treaty 8 this is not good enough.

I urge you to stop the further proposed development in oil and gas in Dawson Creek until the correct regulations are in place. Industry needs to be required to follow best management practices for industry. There needs to be big changes to this regulatory process so due diligence is a requirement. How can you legally do hydraulic fracturing beside a drinking well and have no baseline information? We are faced with non disclosure of the chemical mixture used in hydraulic fracturing? Maybe benzene or formaldehyde? Maybe not? What is actually in this liquid? No remediation required? No follow up and ongoing monitoring How do you know where you started if you have no scientific information.

Have we not learned our lesson from minings history? The severity of impacts to human health and the environment were not fully understood initially which for example the Golden Bear mine which left unregulated and leached arsenic in to surrounding fish bearing waters. Mining has become a socially responsible industry. The Oil and Gas industry needs to be also held accountable like all other industries. We have learned already from mining that there is potential for adverse effects if we do not understand the health and environmental landscape and long term chronic impacts and legally regulate activities.

I did as much research as I could in the short amount of time I was given to respond to Encana (21 days plus a mailing time of 2 days back to Calgary) the evidence was easily found through some internet research that there is potential for this development to have severe long term impacts. The other alarming fact is the lack of understanding of the long term impacts. If I can find this information can't Encana and the Government? Why are we being reactive instead of proactive?

I look forward to a response. Please forward to the minister of health as I could not locate his email address.

Kind Regards,
s.22

Subject: New study: Refining Margins and BC Fuel Policy

Dear Minister Mungall,

Please find attached our press release regarding a new study, 'Refining Margins and BC Fuel Policy 2018' commissioned by our organization and conducted by Navius Research. The author's Executive Summary is also attached.

The full study is here: <https://www.naviusresearch.com/publications/2018-refining-margins-british-columbia/>

Findings:

- The cost to consumers of elevated refining margins was $2.4 billion, or $1,730 per household between 2015 and the end of 2017. This is equivalent to an average 13 cent per litre premium on gasoline and diesel over this period for ~ 80% of BC's population
- Since 2015, both wholesale fuel prices and refining margins departed even further from underlying crude supply costs to the Vancouver market.
- These elevated refining margins and higher fuel prices appear to be the result of a lack of competition in the Vancouver fuel market, which was found to have adequate physical supply; no product shortages or scarcity pricing in this period were evident.
- A high degree of concentration in the supply of fuels, and associated barriers to bringing new fuel types into the market have contributed to artificially high prices
- Costs to consumers from elevated refiner margins in the Vancouver fuel market were five times the incremental cost of renewable and low carbon fuel regulations.
- Despite 2017 crude costs that were 15 cents per litre lower vs. those in 2010, Vancouver retail gasoline prices were 6 cents per litre higher, with 1 cent per litre of this amount coming from increased taxes.
- Policy or market responses that increase refined product or crude supplies – for instance, from an expanded Trans Mountain pipeline or from increases in local refining capacity – are unlikely to lower fuel prices as they do not introduce more competition into the fossil-fuel dominated market.

Elevated refining margins have been secured by fuel suppliers in BC for half a decade. To the extent that British Columbians are providing refiners with profit margins that are amongst the highest globally, we perceive that renewable and low carbon fuel regulations are an important tool to create needed competition. We also perceive that refiners have had ample financial resources to carry additional costs of the RLCFRR, and benefitted financially from undercompliance.

Hi James and Melissa,

Please see news release below regarding Enbridge's sale of our BC Natural Gas processing assets. As we shared in our meeting in May, the purpose of the transaction is to further streamline Enbridge's broader platform to focus on its core business. Enbridge will continue to own and operate pipeline assets in B.C., including the T-South and T-North pipelines, and the Alliance pipeline that starts in B.C.

Please feel free to call, text or email if any questions. Thanks, Donny

Hey Melissa,

So I know we booked that lunch briefing for MBR on July 11 from 11:30 AM to 1:00 PM.

We were going to do it in Vancouver at VCO, but we just got word that the Minister is required to attend cabinet in-person on that day.

As a result, we'd still like to do the briefing, but would do it here in the Minister's office in Victoria. Could that work for you and the people on your end? If so, can you confirm with Amanda cc'd here?

NEWS RELEASE

Researchers explore the potential of basic income in B.C.

VANCOUVER - As part of the Province's efforts to reduce poverty and prepare for the emerging economy, three distinguished researchers have been appointed to lead a B.C.-focused exploration of basic income.

This work relates to a commitment in the Confidence and Supply Agreement between government and the B.C. Green Party caucus.

David Green, from the Vancouver School of Economics at the University of British Columbia (UBC), will chair the expert committee. Joining him will be Jonathan Rhys Kesselman, from the School of Public Policy at Simon Fraser University, and Lindsay Tedds, from the School of Public Policy at the University of Calgary.

The committee will oversee independent research to test the feasibility of a basic-income pilot in British Columbia. It will also look at how basic-income principles might be used to improve the existing income and social-support system. The committee will also consider the impact that advances in technology and automation, and other shifts, are predicted to have on the labour market over the next several decades.

The research will also include simulations that will look at how various basic-income models work with B.C.'s population. These will identify the potential impacts and financial implications of different approaches and economic conditions on B.C. citizens.

The committee will begin work this summer, assisted by researchers at the University of British Columbia.

Quotes:

Shane Simpson, Minister of Social Development and Poverty Reduction -

"The researchers will look at whether a basic income is a viable option to reduce poverty, build financial security, and increase inclusion and well-being. This is a complex area of study, and our government looks forward to learning more about how to enhance the income-support system, to achieve measurable and lasting improvements for people living in poverty."

Andrew Weaver, B.C. Green caucus leader -

"Amidst trends like automation, part-time and contract work, the nature of our economy and the jobs within it are rapidly shifting. There is strong evidence that basic income can provide greater income security, while saving costs in other areas. We proposed exploring how basic income could work in B.C., because government should have a plan for the changes on the horizon. The panelists are highly qualified, knowledgeable and creative thinkers. I am excited to work with them on this innovative project."

David Green, chair of the Basic Income Expert Committee and professor, Vancouver School of Economics, UBC

"Much of my work centres on policies that can reduce inequality and create a more just society. I am pleased to have an opportunity to contribute to an in-depth examination of the implications and benefits of a basic income and enhanced income support structures here in B.C."

NEWS RELEASE

Applications accepted to expand high-speed internet access

VICTORIA - Local governments, internet service providers and community organizations can now apply for grant funding to connect high-speed internet for British Columbians who need it the most - those living in rural, remote and Indigenous communities.

"High costs are one of the main barriers to connecting communities," said Jinny Sims, Minister of Citizens' Services. "This funding will support last-mile projects that will help close the gap between urban and rural areas, and allow B.C.'s smaller communities to better participate in the digital economy."

Beginning on Sunday, July 1, 2018, Northern Development Initiative Trust is accepting applications for the Connecting British Columbia program, so homes, businesses and other institutions can connect to high-speed internet. Funding is also available to help communities plan for the future by creating regional infrastructure strategies for high-speed connectivity.

Successful applications could see last-mile projects receive up to a 50% contribution for eligible costs. Funding will also be available for improving connectivity to entire regions of British Columbia. Applications for transport fibre projects will be accepted beginning Sept. 1, 2018. A total of $16 million is available.

"Connecting British Columbia has helped our province accelerate the growth of our digital economy. By leveraging funds from the private sector and other levels of government, the program has been critical in helping deliver the infrastructure projects B.C. needs to compete, now and in the future," said Joel McKay, Northern Development Initiative Trust CEO.

Submissions will be reviewed and assessed on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants must demonstrate that their projects will be completed by March 31, 2020.

Quick Facts:

* This funding is part of $40 million that is committed in 2017 to expand the Connecting British Columbia program, which is administered by Northern Development Initiative Trust.

* An additional $83 million in funding from federal, provincial and local partners has been announced since January 2018, which will benefit an estimated 187 communities - including 69 First Nations and Indigenous communities.

Subject: FW: Camosun Substation Project - (i) Why has there been no consultation? (ii) wasn't the trail widened in 2015? (iii) have the fledgling Barred owls all gone?

This individual called this morning with this complaint and was insistent that the Minister call BC Hydro and get answers to his questions. I told him the best person to call would be his local MLA and he refuses to talk to them. Should I forward this along to Rob Hill?

I noticed the sign below today on the gate at King Edward Avenue and Crown Street.

I have a number of questions:

1. Why has there been no consultation on this project and the effect of trails, etc.?
2. Why does the trail need to be widened again – Hydro widened it in 2015?
3. Have all the fledgling Barred owls gone away from the vegetation?
4. Why does the description on the sign not match what the website says?

It would be helpful to receive a response before work starts on July 3rd.

Regards

Construction Notice

Camosun Substation Upgrade Project

In July we will be working in the trails around the substation in preparation for the start of the project in the fall.

Please be aware of potential hazards and follow the signs and directions of on-site crews.

Phase 1: July 3 to 16 – Trail Widening

This section of the trail will be closed between Crown Street and the substation. Please use alternate route during construction.

Phase 2: July 16 to 23 – Trail Re-alignment

Trail is open between Crown Street and W. King Edward Avenue. Please use existing trail during construction.

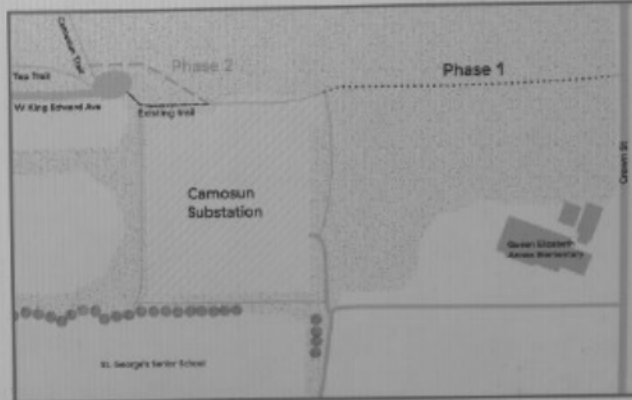

Thank you for your patience and understanding.

Dear Minister Mungall,

Hi Michelle, it's been a while, we miss you!

These are exciting times for us and for you! Please find attached a letter (also below) and two reports for your consideration as you and your colleagues undertake the work of developing the first ever poverty reduction plan for BC.

Please don't hesitate to get in touch if you have any questions. We would be more than happy to support your work.

Sincerely,
Trish

Honourable Michelle Mungall
Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources
Government of British Columbia

Dear Minister Mungall,

I am writing on behalf of the Community Action Network (CAN), a group of leaders living in poverty who have gone through our leadership development initiative and now lend their voice and expertise to the BC Poverty Reduction Coalition (BCPRC).

CAN members were excited about plans to speak to you in person before the legislative session was over, but unfortunately government staff were unable to find a day that worked with your busy schedule. We still plan to see you in Victoria in the fall but, in the meantime, CAN members want to make sure that two things remain in the forefront of your mind as you discuss government priorities for the next year: the devastation of poverty and the unprecedented opportunity you have before you in developing the first ever poverty reduction plan for BC.

"Life in the Downtown Eastside at times feels like a wasteland, and far too often, more so now than ever before, we're experiencing loss through death, loss of our homes, security and our income, even what we lack is taken away.

I want to be that voice that brings life, that ushers in the well-springs of life—an oasis."

Above is a quote from CAN member, Erica Grant, expressing that devastation of poverty but also the power of her voice in turning it around. She goes on to say: "The music of a beautiful sounding symphony is made up of many instruments and not just one clanging cymbal." While we may be the percussion section clanging away in the background, you as government are at the front singing the melody.

So we invite you, as Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources, to use your voice to bring life, to create an oasis. You have a central role to play in this historic moment. As you consider your government and Ministry priorities, how will you ensure that you are raising your voice to contribute to the success of British Columbia's poverty reduction strategy?

I have attached 2 reports to support you in this work: notes from a CAN community workshop; and the submission from the BCPRC. I wish you a happy and productive summer season with your family, friends and constituents.

Sincerely,

Trish Garner, Community Organizer, BC Poverty Reduction Coalition

TRAFFIC ADVISORY
Hedley Bridge replacement project underway

HEDLEY - Drivers are advised to expect periodic delays on Highway 3, starting this week, while the existing bridge in Hedley is replaced with a new, two-lane structure.

A temporary two-lane detour will be put in place while the old bridge is dismantled and removed, and the new 26 metre-long structure is built.

Drivers can expect short delays throughout this work to improve safety and reliability. Temporary lane closures will also be required at times, due to paving and road work, resulting in single-lane alternating traffic.

The replacement project, which is expected to be completed by fall 2018, is taking place 29 kilometres west of Keremeos.

Dorosh Construction from Langley was awarded the $2.3-million contract to replace the existing Hedley Bridge, which was built in the late 1940s, and was nearing the end of its serviceable life.

Drivers are reminded to obey construction speed zones, and follow traffic control signage at all times.

The ministry appreciates people's patience while this work is taking place, and encourages drivers to check DriveBC.ca and @DriveBC on Twitter for the most up-to-date highway information.
