Hi Deb,
 Below are the details of what we're doing for ATEP on Nov 14. There is an overall release, along with 12 site-specific ones, including the Penticton one (which is where we'd like to have a photo op (as opposed to a full-on event)).
 Can you advise on anything special we need to do/provide for Penticton? It's at the Penticton Indian Band's Footprints to Technology office.
 Thanks!
 Alison

Hi Rishi: as discussed, MJY will be doing the Aboriginal Training for Employment (ATEP) program event in Penticton on Nov. 14th, our team will work to set up the event and issue a NR to summarize this and all other funding.

In order to maximize communications opportunities, we recommend regional NRs, that AEIT will distribute (see 11 draft attachments).

Can you please work with caucus comm. as appropriate to coordinate this? We are simply asking for MLA quotes – AEIT will coordinate the service providers. However, we would be seeking back approved quotes in the attached no later than Monday Nov 12, so that we can tee these releases up to be distributed to media on November 14th, the date selected corporately for the announcement. Please ensure they are sent to Alison Antrobus on my team directly, as she will coordinate their distribution. Also, if there is not a desire for a localized release/quote please let Alison know that too.

Should MLAs wish to plan their own regional events associated with this announceable, we have provided suggested talking points that they can use. We can provide contact info, as necessary.
 Hope this helps,
 Thanks!
 Marc.

More Aboriginal training opportunities in Fraser Valley

ABBOTSFORD – Aboriginal learners in the Fraser Valley will have more opportunities to develop in-demand job skills thanks to an expansion of the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program (ATEP).

A partnership between government and Stó:Lō Aboriginal Skills & Employment Training will support hands-on learning in two diverse fields. The health care assistant certificate program teaches a variety of health care skills to individuals so they can assist in patient care activities, while the road builder certificate program will train students for upcoming road-building projects in contracts between BC Hydro and various First Nations groups. Both programs have seats for 15 Aboriginal students.

Under the BC Jobs Plan, government is committed to providing funding for community-based delivery of programs that meet Aboriginal learners' needs. ATEP service providers deliver job-related training in essential skills and introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and support, through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations around B.C.

The program was introduced in 2010 with an investment of $4 million through the Canada-British Columbia Labour Market Agreement. By January 2012, more than 500 Aboriginal people had graduated from ATEP programs offered by 17 Aboriginal organizations. Earlier this year, 11 service providers' contracts were renewed and another $2.9 million invested. In the summer, a third Request for Proposals was posted on BC Bid seeking more service providers to bring training and employment opportunities to Aboriginal individuals throughout the province.

As a direct result of federal LMA funding, thousands of British Columbians are receiving training that will advance their careers, assist in securing new employment, and ultimately improve the economic outcomes of individuals, B.C. and Canada. The current agreement will expire on March 31, 2014, and B.C. is preparing to enter discussions with the federal government to renew this important agreement and ensure our province has the skilled workforce required to support long term labour market needs and economic growth.

Quotes:

John Yap, Minister of Advanced Education, Innovation and Technology –

"British Columbia is forecast to have more than a million job openings in the next decade. It's critical to ensure that we are prepared with a job-ready labour force that includes Aboriginal people. The Aboriginal Training for Employment Program provides a valuable resource for students. It has changed students' lives and opened doors – helping them develop a foundation for their future success."

Anna Celesta, Manager, Stó:Lō Aboriginal Skills & Employment Training –

"XXXX."

Quick Facts:

- To be eligible for ATEP, participants must be of Aboriginal heritage, 18 years or older, unemployed and not receiving EI benefits, or employed but without a high school diploma.

- Over 21,000 students a year who enrol in public post-secondary education identify themselves as Aboriginal, a 17 per cent increase since the Aboriginal Education Strategy was launched in 2007.

MLA TALKING POINTS:

- Thank emcee/organizers for event.
- I'm honoured to be here with you today at [community].
- B.C.'s Aboriginal population is dynamic and growing; filled with bright minds and terrific potential.
- Finding ways and means of engaging, nurturing, and encouraging that potential will play an important role in their success and that of their families and communities.
- To meet their needs as learners, we are focusing on creating an integrated system – one where Aboriginal institutes, post-secondary institutions, and the business community work together.
- Our goal is to enhance Aboriginal people's participation in the social, cultural and economic life of their communities, the province, and global society.
- To find ways to meet this goal, we have worked closely with our Aboriginal post-secondary education and training partners to develop an education framework and action plan for the future.

- The new framework and action plan will help to guide and inform the direction of post-secondary education and training for Aboriginal learners in B.C., along with their transition to the labour market.
- It encompasses all post-secondary education and training programs, including adult basic education, vocational, career, business, trades, undergraduate and graduate degree programs, –
- And it addresses our B.C. Jobs Plan commitment to provide funding for additional partnerships between post-secondary institutions and Aboriginal communities, –
- Through formal agreements under the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program, or “ATEP” [aay tep] as it’s often known.
- Today I’m pleased to announce: [name the partnership].
- Today, we are working on new agreements with more service providers to ensure Aboriginal learners can access opportunities that will give them the skills they need to access training and jobs.
- Strengthening our communities and helping to create a workforce that can compete in the new global economy is important because, –
- Forecasts tell us that B.C. is expected to have more than one million job openings in the next ten years.
- And that’s great news in terms of our potential for success, –
- But it also presents us with a challenge because we need to ensure we have enough workers, with the right skills, in every region of the province to maximize B.C.’s economic potential.
- That’s what our new Skills and Training Plan is about – getting British Columbians the right skills, in the right regions at the right time.
- B.C. post-secondary institutions are leading the way, with relevant skills that help build our skilled workforce for current and future job opportunities.
- Today, B.C. is benefiting from a number of major projects that are under development and construction – projects that need highly skilled workers with specialized, as well as general skills.
- Our labour force is ready to take on the challenge, and that is why our government is investing $75 million to improve training facilities and equipment, and ensure the availability of technical education teachers.
- We believe post-secondary education and skills development will enable British Columbians to secure the kinds of jobs needed to support their families, and help B.C. compete successfully in the global economy.
- Initiatives like ATEP help to support the BC Jobs Plan and enable Aboriginal British Columbians to gain the knowledge and skills they need to take care of their families, build their communities and be successful in their work and personal lives.
- We need to continue working together to ensure that Aboriginal people are ready and able to take full advantage of the opportunities that are there now, and in the future.
- Thank you.

KEY MESSAGES

- Ensuring that Aboriginal learners have access to post-secondary education and skills training is essential to our labour needs and an important part of B.C.’s Jobs Plan.
- We’re working with Aboriginal communities and post-secondary education partners so they can take advantage of economic opportunities – today and into the future.
- B.C.’s Aboriginal population is both young and our fastest growing population – their access to more post-secondary education and skills training is key to meeting B.C.’s labour market needs and is an important part of the B.C. Jobs Plan.
- We want to build on the success of our 2007 Strategy by making sure that Aboriginal people are comfortable coming to, and staying in, our public post-secondary institutions.
- Community-based delivery of training will help to ensure Aboriginal communities are positioned to take advantage of economic opportunities.
- We’re increasing the focus on Aboriginal student transitions from the K-12 system to post-secondary education.

- Our vision is an integrated system where Aboriginal institutes and public post-secondary institutions work together to meet the needs of Aboriginal students and communities.

Canada-BC Labour Market Agreement

As a direct result of federal LMA funding, thousands of British Columbians are receiving training that will advance their careers, assist in securing new employment, and ultimately improve the economic outcomes of individuals, B.C. and Canada.

The current agreement will expire on March 31, 2014, and B.C. is preparing to enter discussions with the federal government to renew this important agreement and ensure our province has the skilled workforce required to support long term labour market needs and economic growth.

Hi Alison,

I've attached our guest list template, which you or your program can fill with those you'd like invited to the event. I'll do up the invite and will send it out once your MO gives the materials the ok.

Do you have a contact I can call at the retirement centre to talk about the space and set-up?

I'll also start an itinerary, and will plug in the information you're collecting regarding timing and speakers from the Indian Band and training program.

Thanks, and please call anytime.

Hi Tiffany,
If you could, that would be terrific. I'm wrangling 13 news releases and a set of speaking notes at the moment.
Mindy sent me a list of people they want to invite. Not sure if I sent to you yesterday, so have attached her note to me.
Thank you thank you for your help on this event! ☺

Hi Alison,

I've attached our guest list template, which you or your program can fill with those you'd like invited to the event. I'll do up the invite and will send it out once your MO gives the materials the ok.

Do you have a contact I can call at the retirement centre to talk about the space and set-up?

I'll also start an itinerary, and will plug in the information you're collecting regarding timing and speakers from the Indian Band and training program.

Thanks, and please call anytime.

Let's do the second (Kelowna) option. The event starts at 10 a.m. so that should be lots of time to get to Kelowna for a 3:30 p.m. flight.

Is airport parking covered if I drive my own car to the Victoria airport for this trip?

Thanks again.

I need you to choose a return flt on the 14th... there are 2 options.

OR

Drive to Kelowna after your event (drop your rental car there) and fly back on the AC flt at 3:30 pm (if you think you could make it) arriving Victoria at 5:24 pm

That's it...nothing else available.

Subject: Questions and draft itinerary: Nov. 14

Hi Mindy,

I had a good chat with Jane yesterday. We talked about what the students might do after the formal speaking portion to show some of the work they've been involved with at the centre. Please take a look at the itinerary I've started to draft and let me know what you think. You'll see we have the students leading the Minister to the kitchen to watch as they assist with lunch prep. Would this work?

In terms of a student offering remarks, Jane has suggested S22 speak, who she said was very keen about the program and with a great story to tell. Would you mind asking S22 if she would be interested in speaking for one minute? Please also let me know if an elder will be attending to offer an opening prayer, and if you have any other suggestions for the itinerary.

I will send you the invite to share with your guest list as soon as it's ready. This is the list I've been keeping for your invites – please let me know if I've missed anyone.

Guest list for Nov. 14 event:

Penticton Indian Band Chief Jonathan Kruger
Penticton Indian Band Council: Clint Gabriel, Joan Phillip, Joanie Gabriel, Joseph Pierre, Kevin Gabriel, Laurie Wilson, Tim Lezard, Travis Kruger
Penticton Indian Band Manager, Greg Gabriel
Students of Footprints to Employment Program: S22

Minister Yap will be announcing $1.8M for the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program. After remarks, he and the Penticton Indian Band Chief will be taken on a tour by six Aboriginal students in the program who are working at the retirement centre. They'll show their skills in the kitchen preparing lunch with the Minister helping out.

Thank you for the photos today. That activity sounds great. I've booked our a/v support so we won't need to use any of your equipment. We'll be arriving at the centre at 8 a.m. Nov. 14. I get in late the night before so won't need to come by to see the space on the 13th.

I'm still waiting to hear from Mindy about the student speaker and elder providing opening prayer, but will follow up with her Tuesday morning.

Hi Tiffany

We will accommodate your needs as best as we can-We have a sound system – but just a mic and stand and a jack for music– this sets up with podium.

Lunch that day is Chicken Devine –veggies and yogurt for dessert. So we thought that they could be getting the veggies into the steamer trays or be dishing out the yogurt- does that work for you?

The students and staff are okay with your plans as well- we will do some pictures and email them to you. Cindy Regier who is the manager for Residential care in the South Okanagan will also be attending as she is a positive supporter to this program.

Hello Jane and Daryl,

Thanks again for talking yesterday Jane, and I hope

s22

I chatted with Mindy about our ideas for the event and all is looking good. Mindy is asking s22 if she'll provide brief remarks, and is checking that the other students are happy to participate in a demonstration after the speaking portion of the event. Again, at about 10:14 a.m., the students would lead the Minister to the kitchen to show some of the work they've been involved with at the centre. I'm hoping they could help your staff with a few steps in the lunch preparation, with the Minister maybe doing one task as well. Will this timing work with your lunch prep schedule? Do you have any details on what will be in preparation at that time?

I'm also wondering if you have an in-house sound system (with a mixer and/or press box)? I'll be hiring SW Audio to help with the event but they were just wondering what you might have to determine equipment needs.

Do you have any photos of the bistro area or a floor plan? It's fine if not.

Thanks again for all your help so far!

NEWS RELEASE

Expanded program builds Aboriginal learners' future

PENTICTON - Aboriginal learners in British Columbia will have more opportunities to access skills training programs to help them on their career paths, thanks to a further investment of $1.8 million in the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program (ATEP).

This latest investment means an additional 12 service providers are delivering job-related training in essential skills and introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and support through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations throughout B.C.

"We are working to ensure Aboriginal people in British Columbia get the post-secondary education and training that will enable them to access good jobs and fulfil B.C.'s labour needs of the future," said John Yap, Minister of Advanced Education, Innovation and Technology. "The skills that learners develop in the ATEP programs will be the key that opens doors to employment and creates success for individuals, their families and their communities."

ATEP was introduced in 2010 with an investment of $4 million through the Canada-British Columbia Labour Market Agreement (LMA). By January 2012, more than 500 Aboriginal people had graduated from ATEP programs offered by 17 Aboriginal organizations. Earlier this year, contracts for 11 service providers were renewed and another $2.9 million was invested.

"Since starting at BCIT, my skills have developed more than I ever thought possible. If there was anything I would say to somebody who was thinking of joining a trades program through ACCESS (Aboriginal Community Career Employment Services Society) is to just do it," said BCIT student Dylan Clifton. "It is the most rewarding program I have ever been in. When I finished high school and didn't graduate, I never imagined I could end up with such a great career. Thank you for the great opportunity."

As a direct result of federal LMA funding, thousands of British Columbians are receiving training that will advance their careers, assist in securing new employment and ultimately improve the economic outcomes of individuals in B.C. and Canada. The current agreement expires on March 31, 2014, and B.C. is preparing to enter discussions with the federal government to renew this important agreement and ensure our province has the skilled workforce required to support long-term labour market needs and economic growth.

"Through the LMA funding, students are experiencing incredible success in trades' foundation programs. Trainees are gaining the skills to successfully enter into first-year apprenticeships with our employer partners," said Helen Boyce, director of ACCESS Trades at BCIT. "Trainees in the current LMA-funded boilermakers program will be going to work after graduation as first-year, boilermaker apprentices. Programs like this not only change the lives of the individuals in these programs, but the community they live and work in."

Under the BC Jobs Plan, government is committed to providing funding for community-based delivery of programs that meet Aboriginal learners' needs. In the summer, a third request for proposals was posted on BC Bid seeking more service providers to bring training and employment opportunities to Aboriginal individuals throughout the province.

Quick Facts:

- * To be eligible for ATEP, participants must be of Aboriginal heritage, 18 years or older, unemployed and not receiving EI benefits, or employed but without a high school diploma.
- * Nearly 25,000 students a year who enrol in public post-secondary education identify themselves as Aboriginal, an 18 per cent increase since the Aboriginal Education Strategy was launched in 2007.

Key messages:

- B.C.’s Aboriginal population is both young and our fastest-growing population. Ensuring they can access post-secondary education and skills training is key to meeting B.C.’s labour market needs and is an important part of the B.C. Jobs Plan.
- We want to ensure that Aboriginal people get the training and education they want and need.
- By improving access to education, skills and trades training through community-based delivery, we can help to position Aboriginal communities to take advantage of economic opportunities.
- Our vision is an integrated system where Aboriginal institutes and public post-secondary institutions work together to meet the needs of Aboriginal students and communities, along with increasing the focus on transitions from the K-12 system.

ATEP funding overview:

- ATEP service providers deliver job-related training in essential skills and introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and support through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations around B.C.
- The program was introduced in 2010 with an investment of $4M through the Canada-BC Labour Market Agreement. By January 2012, more than 500 Aboriginal people had graduated from ATEP programs offered by 17 Aboriginal organizations. Earlier this year, 11 service providers’ contracts were renewed with another $2.9M invested.
- In summer 2012, a third RFP was posted on BC Bid for more service providers. The bid has closed and the Ministry is in the process of finalizing the evaluation of the request for proposal submissions and notifying proponents of the decision.

Canada-BC Labour Market Agreement

- As a direct result of federal LMA funding, thousands of British Columbians are receiving training that will advance their careers, assist in securing new employment, and ultimately improve the economic outcomes of individuals, B.C. and Canada.
- The current agreement will expire on March 31, 2014, and B.C. is preparing to enter discussions with the federal government to renew this important agreement and ensure our province has the skilled workforce required to support long term labour market needs and economic growth.

MINISTER YAP SPEAKING NOTES

- Thank Haven Hill organizers for hosting event.
- I'm honoured to be here with you today on the traditional territory of the Okanagan Nation and the Penticton Indian Band.
- On my way here this morning, I was thinking about how learning is not a finite thing – we can learn something new every day.
- For instance, I'm pretty new as Minister of Advanced Education, Innovation and Technology – so I'm learning a LOT every single day, and it's a steep learning curve.
- But I'm enjoying it, and excited to be involved in helping British Columbians reach their educational and career goals.
- B.C.'s Aboriginal population is dynamic and growing; filled with bright minds and terrific potential.
- Finding ways and means of engaging, nurturing, and encouraging that potential will play an important role in their success and that of their families and communities.
- To meet their needs as learners, we are focusing on creating an integrated system – one where Aboriginal institutes, post-secondary institutions, and the business community work together.
- Our goal is to enhance Aboriginal people's participation in the social, cultural and economic life of their communities, the province, and global society.
- To meet this goal, we have worked closely with our Aboriginal post-secondary education and training partners to develop an education framework and action plan for the future.
- The framework and action plan will help to guide and inform the direction of post-secondary education and training for Aboriginal learners in B.C., along with their transition into the labour market.
- It encompasses all post-secondary education and training programs, including adult basic education, vocational, career, business, trades, undergraduate and graduate degree programs, –
- And it addresses our B.C. Jobs Plan commitment to provide funding for additional partnerships between post-secondary institutions and Aboriginal

- communities, –
- Such as investments through the Canada-British Columbia Labour Market Agreement, –
 - For formal agreements under the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program, or “ATEP” [aay tep] as it’s often known.
 - Today I’m pleased to tell you that government is providing ATEP with a total funding of $1.8 million for 12 organizations to deliver job-related training for Aboriginal British Columbians.
 - This training will provide essential skills and job-related training, like introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and workplace supports.
 - Through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations around B.C., organizations like the Penticton Indian Band and their Footprints to Employment program, which provides training in career and personal development, and assists learners to understand wellness for work, and how to achieve life balance and improve self-esteem.
 - ATEP programs are helping learners explore skills and training they need to secure jobs in a variety of occupations, –
 - For example, in the health care field, which S22 [student speaker] will tell you about in a minute.
 - And that’s not all.
 - My ministry is working on new agreements with more service providers to ensure Aboriginal learners have opportunities that will give them the skills they need to get training and jobs.
 - Strengthening our communities and helping to create a workforce that can compete in the new global economy is important because, –
 - Forecasts tell us that B.C. is expected to have more than one million job openings in the next ten years.
 - But it also presents us with a challenge because we need to ensure we have enough workers, with the right skills, in every region of the province to maximize B.C.’s economic potential.
 - That’s what our new Skills and Training Plan is about – getting British Columbians the right skills, in the right regions at the right time.

- Today, B.C. is benefiting from a number of major projects that are under development and construction – projects that need highly skilled workers with specialized, as well as general skills.
- We believe post-secondary education and skills development will enable British Columbians to secure the kinds of jobs needed to support their families, and help B.C. compete successfully in the global economy.
- Initiatives like ATEP help to support the BC Jobs Plan and enable Aboriginal British Columbians to gain the knowledge and skills they need to take care of their families, build their communities and be successful in their work and personal lives.
- Let's keep working together to ensure that Aboriginal people are ready and able to take full advantage of the opportunities that are there now, and in the future.
- Thank you.

EVENT OVERVIEW: ATEP – $1.8M funding announcement

What: Announcement of $1.8 million for 12 proponents to provide training to Aboriginal learners

When: 10 am, Wednesday, November 14, 2012

Where: Haven Hill Retirement Centre
415 Haven Hill Road
Penticton

Contact: Tiffany Nelson, GCPE Events, cell: 250 508-3597

PROJECT OVERVIEW:

ATEP service providers deliver job-related training in essential skills and introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and support through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations around B.C.

The program was introduced in 2010 with an investment of $4M through the Canada-BC Labour Market Agreement. By January 2012, more than 500 Aboriginal people had graduated from ATEP programs offered by 17 Aboriginal organizations. Earlier this year, 11 service providers' contracts were renewed with another $2.9M invested.

TALKING POINTS:

- Good morning.
- I am delighted to be here at the Haven Hill Retirement Centre today to take part in an announcement on improving access to education, skills and trades training through community-based delivery that will help to position Aboriginal communities to take advantage of economic opportunities.
- I'd like to begin by introducing everyone standing up here with me:
 - My colleague, Minister of Advanced Education, Technology and Innovation and Minister Responsible for Multiculturalism John Yap
 - Judy George, Penticton Indian Band Elder
 - Darrell Bennett, Support Services Manager, Haven Hill Retirement Centre
 - Jonathan Kruger, Penticton Indian Band Chief
 - Cindy Regier, Interior Health Authority, Residential Health Service Administrator
 - S22 Student, Footsteps to Employment Program
- I'd like to invite Judy George, Penticton Band elder to offer an opening prayer.
- Judy George offers prayer.
- Thank you Judy...now Darrell Bennett, Support Services Manager here at Haven Hill.
- Darrell Bennett welcomes guests.
- Thanks Darrell...I'd like to invite my colleague, Minister John Yap to say a few words on behalf of the Government of British Columbia and what this means for Aboriginal students, our region and our province.
- Minister Yap speaks.
- Thanks John... I'd now like to introduce Jonathan Kruger, Penticton Indian Band Chief, to say a few words.
- Chief Kruger speaks.
- Thank you Jonathan... Now, I'd like to invite Cindy Regier, Interior Health Authority, Residential Health Service Administrator to say a few words.
- Cindy Regier speaks.
- Thanks Cindy...

- And now, one of the learners – S22 – who is a student of the Footsteps to Employment program, would like to share some thoughts about what this all means to her.
- S22 speaks.
- Thanks S22
- B.C.'s Aboriginal population is both young and our fastest-growing population. Ensuring they can access post-secondary education and skills training is key to meeting B.C.'s labour market needs and is an important part of the B.C. Jobs Plan.
- We want to ensure that Aboriginal people get the training and education they want and need...
- I'd like to thank the whole team here at Haven Hill for your help in organizing this morning's announcement and for your hospitality.
- Thank you for coming out today.

Hi Mindy,

Great chatting with you just now. Fingers crossed that Havenhill will be able to host a little event next week!

As well as the overall event next Weds, we're doing a separate news release to announce Penticton Indian Band's ATEP training. Would love to include a quote from you.

I've attached a draft of the release for reference.

Thanks very much! Looking forward to hearing back from you.

Hi Deb and Tiffany,

We are a go for an event to announce the $1.8M overall funding for the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program next Weds at Haven Hill Retirement Centre (www.havenhill.ca) in Penticton. Penticton Indian Band has students from their Footprints to Employment Program working there already (success!)

I'm waiting on a time for MJY's visit.

Haven Hill - Jane Tench has approved the visit and has a location (the residents' bistro room in the recently opened new wing). So it is a go, please confirm times and I will convey to all on my end. I need to get a alternate contact for next week as S22 and is assigning the event day to a staff who supervises the students on the work experience.

Thank you.

You might want to invite Grand Chief Stewart Philip from the Union of BC Indian Chiefs as he was the Chief of PIB for many years. The following is an excerpt from their website:

In October 2008, Grand Chief Stewart Phillip concluded his fourth consecutive term as Chief of the Penticton Indian Band (PIB) after having served the Band as Chief for a total of 14 years. In addition, he served as an elected Band Councilor for a 10 year period and continues to serve as the Chair of the Okanagan Nation Alliance.

In October 2006, the Okanagan Nation, led by the Elders of the Penticton Indian Band, acknowledged his lifetime commitment to the defense of Indigenous Peoples' Title and Rights by bestowing on him and his family the rare honour of the title of Grand Chief.

Hi Alison,

I've attached our guest list template, which you or your program can fill with those you'd like invited to the event. I'll do up the invite and will send it out once your MO gives the materials the ok.

Do you have a contact I can call at the retirement centre to talk about the space and set-up?

I'll also start an itinerary, and will plug in the information you're collecting regarding timing and speakers from the Indian Band and training program.

Thanks, and please call anytime.

Expanded program builds Aboriginal learners' future

PENTICTON – Aboriginal learners in British Columbia will have more opportunities to access skills training programs to help them on their career paths, thanks to a further investment of $1.8 million in the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program (ATEP).

This latest investment means an additional 12 service providers are delivering job-related training in essential skills and introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and support through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations throughout B.C.

"We are working to ensure Aboriginal people in British Columbia get the post-secondary education and training that will enable them to access good jobs and fulfil B.C.'s labour needs of the future," said John Yap, Minister of Advanced Education, Innovation and Technology. "The skills that learners develop in the ATEP programs will be the key that opens doors to employment and creates success for individuals, their families and their communities."

ATEP was introduced in 2010 with an investment of $4 million through the Canada-British Columbia Labour Market Agreement (LMA). By January 2012, more than 500 Aboriginal people had graduated from ATEP programs offered by 17 Aboriginal organizations. Earlier this year, contracts for 11 service providers were renewed and another $2.9 million was invested.

"Since starting at BCIT, my skills have developed more than I ever thought possible. If there was anything I would say to somebody who was thinking of joining a trades program through ACCESS (Aboriginal Community Career Employment Services Society) is to just do it," said BCIT student Dylan Clifton. "It is the most rewarding program I have ever been in. When I finished high school and didn't graduate, I never imagined I could end up with such a great career. Thank you for the great opportunity."

As a direct result of federal LMA funding, thousands of British Columbians are receiving training that will advance their careers, assist in securing new employment and ultimately improve the economic outcomes of individuals in B.C. and Canada. The current agreement expires on March 31, 2014, and B.C. is preparing to enter discussions with the federal government to renew this important agreement and ensure our province has the skilled workforce required to support long-term labour market needs and economic growth.

“Through the LMA funding, students are experiencing incredible success in trades’ foundation programs. Trainees are gaining the skills to successfully enter into first-year apprenticeships with our employer partners,” said Helen Boyce, director of ACCESS Trades at BCIT. “Trainees in the current LMA-funded boilermakers program will be going to work after graduation as first-year, boilermaker apprentices. Programs like this not only change the lives of the individuals in these programs, but the community they live and work in.”

Under the BC Jobs Plan, government is committed to providing funding for community-based delivery of programs that meet Aboriginal learners’ needs. In the summer, a third request for proposals was posted on BC Bid seeking more service providers to bring training and employment opportunities to Aboriginal individuals throughout the province.

Quick Facts:

- To be eligible for ATEP, participants must be of Aboriginal heritage, 18 years or older, unemployed and not receiving EI benefits, or employed but without a high school diploma.
- Nearly 25,000 students a year who enrol in public post-secondary education identify themselves as Aboriginal, an 18 per cent increase since the Aboriginal Education Strategy was launched in 2007.

Footprints lead to employment for Aboriginal learners

PENTICTON – Aboriginal learners in British Columbia’s Penticton region will have more opportunities to develop in-demand job skills thanks to an expansion of the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program (ATEP).

An eighteen-month agreement with the Penticton Indian Band will provide employment training through the Footprints to Employment program for 24 participants. Training will focus on four primary areas: sales and services; trades, transport and related occupations; forestry and hunting; and art, culture and recreation. The agreement includes helping 10 participants secure employment at the conclusion of the program.

Under the BC Jobs Plan, government is committed to providing funding for community-based delivery of programs that meet Aboriginal learners’ needs. “We are focusing on creating an integrated system – one where Aboriginal institutes, post-secondary institutions, and the business community work together. Initiatives like ATEP help to support the BC Jobs Plan and enable Aboriginal British Columbians to gain the knowledge and skills they need to take care of their families, build their communities and be successful in their work and personal lives.”

Bill Barisoff, MLA, Penticton –

“Ensuring that Aboriginal learners are able to get the education they need to be able to join B.C.’s labour force is an important of B.C.’s Jobs Plan. ATEP is providing a vital link that will support economic growth in the Penticton area and keep our community strong and flourishing.”

Jonathan Kruger, Chief, Penticton Indian Band –

“Since 2006, the Penticton Band Community has been witness to the excellent professional work and services provided by the Footprints Centre. The centre has been invaluable to Aboriginals seeking to enhance their education and training skills for long term employment opportunities and career development.

The Footprints to Employment program is helping members gain confidence and skills to decide on careers, find work and increase skills to maintain employment. We have an active employer network giving us input and are developing partnerships such as work experiences at a local businesses. We are moving forward in many areas of development and continuously encourage our members to seek training and education for future employment opportunities.”

MINISTER YAP SPEAKING NOTES

- Thank Haven Hill organizers for hosting event.
- I'm honoured to be here with you today on the traditional territory of the Okanagan Nation and the Penticton Indian Band.
- On my way here this morning, I was thinking about how learning is not a finite thing – we can learn something new every day.
- For instance, I'm pretty new as Minister of Advanced Education, Innovation and Technology – so I'm learning a LOT every single day, and it's a steep learning curve.
- But I'm enjoying it, and excited to be involved in helping British Columbians reach their educational and career goals.
- B.C.'s Aboriginal population is dynamic and growing; filled with bright minds and terrific potential.
- Finding ways and means of engaging, nurturing, and encouraging that potential will play an important role in their success and that of their families and communities.
- To meet their needs as learners, we are focusing on creating an integrated system – one where Aboriginal institutes, post-secondary institutions, and the business community work together.
- Our goal is to enhance Aboriginal people's participation in the social, cultural and economic life of their communities, the province, and global society.

- To meet this goal, we have worked closely with our Aboriginal post-secondary education and training partners to develop an education framework and action plan for the future.
- The framework and action plan will help to guide and inform the direction of post-secondary education and training for Aboriginal learners in B.C., along with their transition into the labour market.
- It encompasses all post-secondary education and training programs, including adult basic education, vocational, career, business, trades, undergraduate and graduate degree programs, –
- And it addresses our B.C. Jobs Plan commitment to provide funding for additional partnerships between post-secondary institutions and Aboriginal communities, –
- Such as investments through the Canada-British Columbia Labour Market Agreement, –
- For formal agreements under the Aboriginal Training for Employment Program, or “ATEP” [aay tep] as it’s often known.
- Today I’m pleased to tell you that government is providing ATEP with a total funding of $1.8 million for 12 organizations to deliver job-related training for Aboriginal British Columbians.
- This training will provide essential skills and job-related training, like introductory trades training, along with mentoring, coaching and workplace supports.
- Through partnerships with public, private and Aboriginal-controlled training organizations around B.C., organizations like the Penticton Indian Band and their Footprints to Employment program, which provides training in career and personal development, and assists learners to understand wellness for work, and how to achieve life balance and improve self-esteem.

- ATEP programs are helping learners explore skills and training they need to secure jobs in a variety of occupations, –
- For example, in the health care field, which S22 [student speaker] will tell you about in a minute.
- And that's not all.
- My ministry is working on new agreements with more service providers to ensure Aboriginal learners have opportunities that will give them the skills they need to get training and jobs.
- Strengthening our communities and helping to create a workforce that can compete in the new global economy is important because, –
- Forecasts tell us that B.C. is expected to have more than one million job openings in the next ten years.
- But it also presents us with a challenge because we need to ensure we have enough workers, with the right skills, in every region of the province to maximize B.C.'s economic potential.
- That's what our new Skills and Training Plan is about – getting British Columbians the right skills, in the right regions at the right time.
- Today, B.C. is benefiting from a number of major projects that are under development and construction – projects that need highly skilled workers with specialized, as well as general skills.

- We believe post-secondary education and skills development will enable British Columbians to secure the kinds of jobs needed to support their families, and help B.C. compete successfully in the global economy.
- Initiatives like ATEP help to support the BC Jobs Plan and enable Aboriginal British Columbians to gain the knowledge and skills they need to take care of their families, build their communities and be successful in their work and personal lives.
- Let's keep working together to ensure that Aboriginal people are ready and able to take full advantage of the opportunities that are there now, and in the future.
- Thank you.
