Hi Sarah,

As discussed, here is an org chart for JTT (sorry it is so late). I was hoping the corporate folk would post a version that shows the recent changes. This hasn't happened yet so the major change is that CJ Ritchie has moved to CITZ to be the GCIO, and Christine Little has taken her place. So Christine is leading two division at the moment.

Hi Sarah, a partial update here:

I just talked with the EDU program expert (advising their GCPE). Unfortunately he says they do not have an itemized tally, as there were few strings attached to funding. Given that nobody collected the data on how it was used, I asked if they could look up a subset or example to profile (I.e. did Vancouver or another school district report on how the money was spent there?). They are looking into this.

In any event, this is the response by email. I'll touch base again when I hear more:

> Over 120 teachers were trained as part of the train-the-trainer program. The $6 million has all been spent and it was left up to individual school districts to make decisions around equipment purchases based on local need. They spent it on a variety of things from iPads, laptops to Sphero's. We do not have an exact breakdown, unfortunately.
> I'll hunt down a few success stories from districts that could be profiled.

I saw that in the background of the release you sent – I'm looking for more detailed info on how many teachers participated in the training, equipment purchased and funds remaining. Can you get that?

Hi Sarah,

Here is a bit more information from EDUC, with the breakdown.

Money sent directly to school districts and a portion was held by the Ministry of Education to run the Train-the-Trainer program. The breakdown of the $6 million is as follows:

9

- $2 million for teacher training, specifically for the coding curriculum,
- $2 million to help school districts purchase equipment and resources to support coding instruction, and
- $2 million to help teachers bring the new curriculum to life in their classrooms

Hi Sarah,

As requested, we've checked with program who received the following from Education:

- The $6 million committed in 2016 has gone out to school districts for curriculum coding and equipment.
- Ongoing initiatives include Train the Trainer workshops (teachers training teachers to teach coding) and coding is a module with the Applied Design Skills (ADST) courses.
- At this point, coding is not mandatory and it will be up to the new government if they want to implement mandatory coding in Grade 9.

As you will be aware, there are two NRs from 2016:

Hope this reaches you well – please let me know if there is anything else.
