Hello

I used to have fairly comprehensive editing capabilities on the GCPE 411 SharePoint site. Recently, I went to make some edits to WES's 411 pages and found that neither Grant Kerr nor I had the ability to change fonts, update links, and a few other crucial formatting tasks. I'm not sure why this changed, but are you able to give me (and Grant) back full editing permissions please? If you aren't the right people to ask, can you point me in the right direction? HR maybe?

Thanks,

Hi Tiffany,

As mentioned, could you send us a few more bullets on both Electoral reform, as well as the Human Rights Commission asap this afternoon.

Why they are important, more on public consultation (on electoral reform), how they differ from previous systems, etc.

This is a request from exec to flesh out these sections as they are important priorities for this administration. Can you get these to us by 2 p.m.?

Thanks much,

Good morning!

Budget 2018 is coming up quickly and part of the annual budget package will be the legally required strategic plan document. As a guide, last year's version is available here: http://bcbudget.gov.bc.ca/2017/stplan/Strategic_Plan_2017-18_2020-21.pdf
We need your teams to draft updates/look-aheads on your ministry's sections and send them to me and Shannon Horlor by end of day, Wednesday, Jan. 31. Shannon will collate and draft this year's strategic plan document.

I've listed below where you can find each new section in the linked doc. I have also attached a draft graphic from Finance that will help you determine where your shop fits. You can add new sections if you have overarching goals that the below bullets don't cover. If you share areas of responsibility with other ministries, please co-ordinate the update with your partner ministry (or ministries).

Date: Tuesday, January 16, 2018 9:13:00 AM

So here is what I wrote down as some of the points to think about when Dana and I write:

- Look at the words on the page rather than focussing solely on how they sound aloud
- Think about the speech's arc. Stick to three arc points for the short speeches
- Eliminate articles and conjunctions from sentences wherever possible
- In fact, do not start lines with "and" ever
- No ellipses or dashes for emphasis and reduce all punctuation where possible
- Stick to action items. Keep the language simple and direct
- Analyze what the benefit is to the audience/listener

Did I miss anything that either of you heard and I'm forgetting?

I've selected two folders of samples for Cara. One is an Asia tour 2014 and the other is budget tour background. I think these demonstrate the fact sheet element I spoke about. Should I include a list of the types of speeches we've done in the past? She seemed surprised that we used to do keynotes, etc. They might be interested to know we edited the throne and budget speeches/PowerPoint too.

1. As long as the total number (the 2nd part) keeps increasing one by one, I believe it's not a problem.
2. Yes, they probably could – especially now that Everything goes through the HUB - but would not count things like revisions to factsheets. Some years ago, we almost stopped the spreadsheet except for media advisories and 3rd-party items, but decided to carry on with it. Also, it really helps when searching for something when the HUB search function can't find it.

Two questions about this:

1. Is this numbering a problem for us that I'm missing or just curiosity?
2. Is there a reason we are still maintaining the spreadsheet? I'm pretty sure that we can ask the HUB team for the number of releases we send in a year for estimates. They would just pull a report from the database.

Good morning, Techie Friends –

Our automatic numbering for releases appears to have re-set to 1 or 2, like it does at the beginning of the calendar year.

AEST is the best example I can find:

Our most-recent FYF on Feb. 19 had a number that looked like this:

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0040-000217

Then the three for this morning's run all apparently flipped back to number 2 for the year, even though the 'total' number at the end increased:

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000242

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000244

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000245

Advanced Ed wasn't the only one -

The FLNR IB for 9 a.m. started over at 1 for NEWS-16438 /85201

Understanding winter feeding of wild ungulates

TAC and TRAN flipped back to number 2

The good news is it looks like we still have a unique identifier, because the total – the second part of the queue number, keeps increasing.

(I would not have noticed if I had not pasted the three for AEST into the spreadsheet, and thought that perhaps you now have the ability to turn back time.)

Nothing here is really wrong -

In the lede – added Tuesday

We'll let them have caps on Parliament Buildings, even tho' it's not CP style.

6th graf – don't need comma after video-conferencing

7th paragraph with quote – good on you for leaving the caps on.

End of 2nd-last graf – how about "moving to a university."

Added a comma in the last graf after colleges.

In Bowman quote, how about an "s" on credential? But it is an approved quote and it's not wrong.

Ministry of Advanced Education, Skills and Training

NEWS RELEASE

Celebrating BC Colleges Day

VICTORIA - Tuesday, Feb. 27 is a day to recognize the diverse range of affordable, accessible and applied education programs that B.C. colleges offer students in every corner of the province.

Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training Melanie Mark was joined by post-secondary students and college presidents at the Parliament Buildings in Victoria to celebrate the second annual BC Colleges Day. The provincial proclamation recognizes the vital role that colleges have in the post-secondary system.

"Our colleges are an important part of our education ecosystem," said Mark. "Education is a powerful tool that puts people on pathways to opportunity, employment and better lives. I'm proud to help celebrate BC Colleges Day."

B.C. is home to 11 public colleges, with more than 60 campuses and learning centres throughout the province. With over 250 academic, trades, technology and vocational programs, public colleges serve more than 125,000 students annually, plus thousands more through continuing education.

"B.C. college graduates are highly skilled by the time they complete their credential because of the depth of experience they get through their program, which includes applied learning, and real-world, hands-on experience," said John Bowman, BC Colleges chair. "Over 90% of our graduates are employed within six months of graduation."

B.C. colleges have also responded to demand for flexible delivery options by offering options such as online delivery, video conferencing, and hands-on learning through practicums and apprenticeships.

"As a single mom, it was important for me to be able to go to school in my home community," said Jaimie Davis, a Gitksan/Nisga'a second-year student in Northwest Community College's Freda Diesing School of Northwest Coast Art. "Northwest Community College offered me a way to do both. Because I can take care of my family and still get an education, it helps me build my career as an Indigenous woman."

Over the next decade, 917,000 job openings are expected due to a combination of retirement and economic growth. About eight out of 10 jobs will require some post-secondary education or training: 42% will require a diploma, certificate or apprenticeship training, while 36% will require a bachelor, graduate, or first-professional degree and/or significant work experience. Many of those bachelor degrees are started at B.C. colleges, where students can take their first two years of university-transfer credits before moving on to a university.

BC Colleges is an association of British Columbia's public, post-secondary colleges. The role of the organization is to facilitate collaboration between the colleges, so they can more effectively produce a well-educated and highly skilled workforce for British Columbia.

The task force will be responsible for providing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources with recommendations on the following areas:

- Establishing baseline metrics (e.g. cost of production, carbon intensity, employment statistics, expenditures and revenues, etc.) to measure the current state of the industry and provide an economic impact analysis of the mining sector in B.C.;
- Skills training and development, so that British Columbians can enter and grow careers in the sector;
- A co-ordinated provincial approach to geoscience;
- Potential financial incentive programs and the Province's competitiveness and approach to attract mining investment into BC;
- Potential government actions to ensure the sustainability of existing mines and job protection during commodity cycles;
- Identify innovation and partnership opportunities that ensure an environmentally sustainable mining sector;
- Identify best practices in mining jobsite health and safety;
- Increasing public awareness of the importance of the mining sector to the Province and its role in a low-carbon future; and

All good. I didn't see it til later and it's just a couple of hyphens, so nothing for the shop to worry about. Nobody will notice.

Was just send everyone a note that I just talked to Kate, she had edits and the NR is now out of the queue. I can babysit it as there may be a change in a quote as well.

I didn't realize there was a kerfuffle, but I go ahead and change that if you'd like. The shop wants changes again now too, so obviously I haven't left for lunch.

Can I ask that, going forward, if you and Linda have edits to a release that you raise them prior to me sending back the final copies—so alongside Robin's edits? I was under the impression we set this procedure up this way so we avoid editing things after the shop has received their finals (and printing them off as they were in this case).

Thank you!
Shannon

Robin and I had a good debate about the lede on this one.

I took out a couple pf hyphens in the lede as I have never seen the "low- to moderate-income" all hyphenated before: was "low-to-moderate-income".

Linda agrees.

Now: The Government of British Columbia is investing in people in the Downtown Eastside with approximately 450 units of affordable rental housing being constructed for low- to moderate-income households.

I'll add this to our internal editing list.

NEWS RELEASE

Province investing in affordable homes in the Downtown Eastside

VANCOUVER - The Government of British Columbia is investing in people in the Downtown Eastside with approximately 450 units of affordable rental housing being constructed for low-to-moderate-income households.

"We are building a mix of housing here that will help people who have been struggling to find homes they can afford in their community," said Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "People in the Downtown Eastside shouldn't have to leave their community because of a lack of appropriate housing. Our government cares about making sure people can transition from shelters to supportive housing to affordable, independent housing within their own communities. That's how we foster healthy communities."

These units will have rental rates ranging from $375 to $1,272 and are being funded through the government's Budget 2017 Update, which included a commitment of $208 million to build 1,700 affordable rental-housing units over the next four years. The Province is working in partnership with the City of Vancouver, Vancouver Coastal Health and four non-profit service providers to ensure the appropriate housing and support services will be made available.

The B.C. government is committing approximately $83 million for the following four projects:

- * 58 W. Hastings St., operated by the Chinatown Foundation
- * 23-51 Cordova St., operated by the PHS Community Services Society
- * 616 Cordova St., operated by Union Gospel Mission-Women and Families Centre
- * 301 E. Hastings St., operator still being determined

Vancouver Coastal Health plans to operate community health centres at the 58 W. Hastings St. and 301 E. Hastings St. projects. Health-care services at these centres will be made available to the broader community.

The Province, through BC Housing, continues to work with partners to determine other operating details for each project.

Quotes:

Judy Darcy, Minister of Mental Health and Addictions -

"I've met some incredible, resilient people who live and work in the Downtown Eastside, and heard firsthand how crucial affordable housing is to help them focus on every aspect of their health and safety - including mental health and addictions treatment. We know that for too long, people have struggled without the proper supports. These four projects will help build stronger communities, so we can help the most vulnerable people in our community get the hope and healing they need."

Abi Bond, director of affordable housing, City of Vancouver -

"Increasing the supply of affordable housing in Vancouver is a top priority for the city; we are extremely pleased with this significant funding announcement for 450 new units of affordable rental housing in the Downtown Eastside. We've heard loud and clear from the community that more affordable housing options are needed in this neighbourhood, and even deeper affordability can be achieved when we work across different levels of government on developments like the ones announced today."

Bonnie Wilson, director, inner city and mental health and substance use, Vancouver community, Vancouver Coastal Health -

"The 58 and 301 Hastings developments support Vancouver Coastal Health's vision for two purpose-built community health centres in the Downtown Eastside, where a new health-service model of care will be incorporated. This new model will offer more integrated and co-ordinated health care that is easy to access, covers a broad spectrum and intensity of needs, and will be available 12 hours a day, seven days a week, with on-call, after-hours support. Of course, none of this would be possible without the support and commitment of our government and community partners, which means our most marginalized citizens will benefit from a facility and services designed to improve their health and ultimately their lives."

Barb Atkins, manager, Union Gospel Mission Women and Families Centre -

"This announcement opens the door to Union Gospel Mission's largest expansion in more than 75 years of history. The new Women and Families Centre will not only help us save lives, but change the trajectory of entire families for generations. It means fewer women on the street, fewer children in poverty and more thriving families. We're overjoyed to be part of turning the tide for countless women and children."

Joy McPhail, volunteer chair, advisory board at 58 W. Hastings St. -

"The new homes and community health services at 58 W. Hastings will be an anchor of much-deserved stability, well-being and healthiness for the neighbourhood. The Vancouver Chinatown Foundation is committed to making this happen."

Quick Facts:

- * The B.C. government has set a target to build 114,000 new units of affordable housing throughout B.C.
- * As part of the Budget 2017 Update, the Province announced that it will invest:
 - * $291 million to support the construction of 2,000 modular housing units for people who are homeless and more than $170 million over three years to provide 24/7 staffing and support services.
 - * $208 million over four years to support the construction of more than 1,700 new units of affordable rental housing in communities around the province.
 - * $6.8 million over three years to increase resources in the Residential Tenancy Branch.
- * The Province will be working with communities to develop a homelessness action plan. As part of the plan, the B.C. government will conduct a provincewide homeless count to gain a better understanding of the situation in communities.

Hi Caroline,

Thanks for the info.

The short answer is no, there's no time for reviews as our timelines are so tight.

Materials are trickling in very slowly, so it would be impossible to get everything edited, back to the shops for approvals, through exec approvals here at HQ and have any hope of getting this out on time.

I held the pen on a couple of these and everything worked out just fine without going back to the shops.

Thanks,

Grant

Agrifood and Seafood

British Columbia's agrifood and seafood sectors are more important than ever, both in helping us address our province's food security needs, and as key components of our economy that provide employment and livelihoods to more than 63,000 British Columbians.

The B.C. government is working to support the farmers, ranchers, producers and processors that grow or make the food we enjoy every day, and to increase opportunities for the entrepreneurs, family-owned businesses and larger companies with a B.C. workforce that form the sector.

Lucky for you, Labour fits in the “Sustainable/shared prosperity” pillar. The min wage and possibly the fair wages commission stuff would all be great to get a few blurbs about.

Budget 2018 is coming up quickly and part of the annual budget package will be the legally required strategic plan document. As a guide, last year's version is available here:

http://bcbudget.gov.bc.ca/2017/stplan/Strategic_Plan_2017-18_2020-21.pdf

We need your teams to draft updates/look-aheads on your ministry's sections and send them to me and Shannon Horlor by end of day, Wednesday, Jan. 31. Shannon will collate and draft this year's strategic plan document.

I've listed below where you can find each new section in the linked doc. I have also attached a draft graphic from Finance that will help you determine where your shop fits. You can add new sections if you have overarching goals that the below bullets don't cover. If you share areas of responsibility with other ministries, please co-ordinate the update with your partner ministry (or ministries).

Hi Shannon - so, here are the steps to be able to approve an external org release or MA etc. under the advisory news type:

1. Once you've created a draft using your normal steps 2. Select a ministry 3. Save 4. Approve the release 5.

Unselect the ministry

NOTE: if you send it to yourself at any point after this, the email (like below) will have that ministry as the lead 4. manually change that in the email to match what's in the org block field 5. the PDF does not show the ministry 6. the distributed version does not show the ministry (see attached):

Hope that helps..

We'll advise on the ETA on a permanent fix once we know.

Thanks,
Anne

I'm working on the CP for the BC HOME review Cab Sub. We are looking to have a couple validators lined up for the announcement, and wondering if you would know who we could reach out to in this case?

We would be looking for a potential home buyer as well as an organization rep who could speak to supporting the review and bringing in the new Affordable Homes Office.

Hoping to have a couple names by EOD if possible.

Good morning Shannon,

Cara has added notes where she thinks transitions could be added (I told her this was a rough cut that hadn't been smoothed out yet), where content could be reordered or re-categorized. I know you're doing that, which is awesome.

Please nuke the bullets that go into specific detail about how much minimum wage is rising and when.

Hoping I can get the edits from the rest of exec, which are being done together, today. I may have to do those myself as they may be done on paper.

I'll be in and available around 9:30 if you have any questions.

First question of the day from Cara's feedback.

In the shared/sustainable prosperity section she said it's hard to connect resources, tourism, finance, etc. The info from those ministries only fit there, so I felt obliged to just stick them altogether, but if it was up to me, I'd cull the ones that this gov isn't as focused on at the moment. That would be forests, tourism, film, energy.

Thoughts?

Hi Shannon,

Nice work.... General content is good and well organized.

I have some general comments, acknowledging this is just the rough content draft.

- Would like to see seniors' care under health care.

OK

- Infrastructure: take out dollar figures for health infrastructure like hospitals, etc. as per direction we received from Kristy Anderson yesterday.

Already done.

- Watch out for referencing a "ministry", such as top of p. 5 under Safe Communities. We should change all these to "government" as everything is under one roof. Also a reference to TRAN in transportation section.

Already done.

- Under Strong Sustainable Economy could you throw in some lines about small business? Anything about communities or people you can add?

We have from JTT and I already added it, but this morning you said to leave that out and have it in our pocket if we need more. I also added TAC already too. So should I ignore what you said this morning and keep them in? I think it's easier to cut and harder to add, personally.

- Let's put Education together with AEST stuff as it's a continuum, either under services or economy

OK

- Please put some of Lisa Leslie's homeless bullets in anti-poverty section

Already done.

All I've got for now.

Not much time for you. It's been a busy day for all!

I appreciate all your work on this.

Send me your final, best drafty version whenever you're satisfied you have hit all the marks for content.

B.C. government seeks leave to appeal National Energy Board ruling

VICTORIA - The provincial government has applied for leave to appeal a Dec. 7, 2017 ruling by the National Energy Board (NEB), allowing Kinder Morgan to bypass specific City of Burnaby bylaws related to construction work at the Burnaby Terminal and the Westridge Marine Terminal.

The Province's position is that the NEB erred by too broadly defining federal jurisdiction over interprovincial pipelines. The Federal Court of Appeal will now consider the application.

British Columbia first appeared as an intervener in the October 2017 Federal Court of Appeal hearing over the NEB's approval of the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion project.

INFORMATION BULLETIN

Thinking of running for local office?

VICTORIA - People considering running in local elections now have access to resources that provide information about the roles and responsibilities of elected local officials.

Educational videos and a brochure are available online, at local government candidate information sessions and at orientations for newly elected officials. These new resources will help people to make informed decisions about running for local government offices.

General information about expectations of locally elected officials, their roles and responsibilities and about how local governments make decisions is available through these new resources.

The informative videos feature current local government officials and staff from throughout the province providing their perspectives in five areas:

- * What is local government?
- * Characteristics of an effective local official
- * Roles and responsibilities of staff and elected officials
- * Testing readiness to be an elected official
- * What contributes to effective decision making?

In an effort to create awareness, the Local Government Management Association, Local Government Leadership Academy, Union of B.C. Municipalities and the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing worked to develop the materials for a diverse audience of prospective candidates.

Otherwise, yes to ethnic and province-wide media.

Can I get a final with the link so I can start my social media.

Thanks for your help.

Hi again Jennifer.

Here is your draft NR for review. Of note:

- I changed the lede so it wasn't a quote from the minister and then added her name and full title in the second paragraph.
- I also added "Tuesday" and "2018" to the date in the lede, as I see that BC Colleges Day is not on the same day as last year.
- I broke up the last sentence in Jaimie Davis' quote in two. I think it reads more clearly.

Other changes are just CP/style edits.

On approval, we'll send this out on Tuesday at 12:15 p.m. Would you like this to go provincewide with ethnic media?

NEWS RELEASE
Celebrating BC Colleges Day

VICTORIA - Tuesday, Feb. 27, 2018 is a day to recognize the diverse range of affordable, accessible and applied education programs that B.C. colleges offer students in every corner of the province.

Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training Melanie Mark was joined by post-secondary students and college presidents at the parliament buildings in Victoria to celebrate the second annual BC Colleges Day. The provincial proclamation recognizes the vital role that colleges have in the post-secondary system.

"Our colleges are an important part of our education ecosystem," said Mark. "Education is a powerful tool that puts people on pathways to opportunity, employment and better lives. I'm proud to help celebrate BC Colleges Day."

B.C. is home to 11 public colleges, with more than 60 campuses and learning centres throughout the province. With over 250 academic, trades, technology and vocational programs, public colleges serve more than 125,000 students annually, plus thousands more through continuing education.

"B.C. college graduates are highly skilled by the time they complete their credentials because of the depth of experience they get through their program, which includes applied learning, and real-world, hands-on experience," said John Bowman, BC Colleges chair. "Over 90% of our graduates are employed within six months of graduation."

B.C. colleges have also responded to demand for flexible delivery options by offering options such as online delivery, video conferencing and hands-on learning through practicums and apprenticeships.

"As a single mom, it was important for me to be able to go to school in my home community," said Jaimie Davis, a Gitksan/Nisga'a second-year student in Northwest Community College's Freda Diesing School of Northwest Coast Art. "Northwest Community College offered me a way to do both. Because I can take care of my family and still get an education, it helps me build my career as an Indigenous woman."

Over the next decade, 917,000 job openings are expected due to a combination of retirement and economic growth. About eight out of 10 jobs will require some post-secondary education or training: 42% will require a diploma, certificate or apprenticeship training, while 36% will require a bachelor, graduate, or first-professional degree and/or significant work experience. Many of those bachelor degrees are started at B.C. colleges, where students can take their first two years of university-transfer credits before moving to a university.

BC Colleges is an association of British Columbia's public, post-secondary colleges. The role of the organization is to facilitate collaboration between the colleges, so they can more effectively produce a well-educated and highly skilled workforce for British Columbia.

Will do for Syer.

The second one, I think I missed that is was spelled out way up in the release. It should be spelled in full with the abbreviation after the first time, and abbreviated thereafter. I'll change that for you.

We have a few other edits and I'll send you some revised drafts for approval.

Can we change one of the member titles? Tom Syer is 'Head, Government Affairs..'

MABC is abbreviated twice - the second time in the quote. That's standard process when it's in a quote?

NEWS RELEASE

Government takes action to create and sustain exploration and mining jobs

VICTORIA - Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Michelle Mungall has established a B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force that will review exploration and mining in the province and find ways to strengthen this important industry.

"Over the coming months the B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force will work with First Nations, the mining industry and communities to develop recommendations on possible actions government could take to bring more certainty to the mining sector and create good jobs for people today, tomorrow and beyond," said Mungall. "One of our goals with this review is to find ways to ensure mines in B.C. remain viable when commodity prices fluctuate, so that people can keep working and communities can thrive."

The 12-member task force will include representatives from industry, First Nations, municipal government, an environmental non-governmental organization, labour, post-secondary/training and the financial sector. The task force will submit its final report, including recommendations for legislative and/or regulatory amendments to the minister by Nov. 21, 2018.

Mungall announced the Mining Jobs Task Force in conjunction with Mining Day events at the parliament buildings. Organized by the Mining Association of B.C. (MABC), the annual Mining Day in Victoria brings together 40 delegates from major mining companies, proponents and supplier companies, and provides an opportunity for industry and government to discuss the importance of the sector, while identifying responsible opportunities for growth.

"We look forward to working with the government, First Nations and other important stakeholders on the task force to ensure our industry is globally competitive and well positioned to sustain the mining jobs of today and, importantly, create the mining jobs of tomorrow," said Bryan Cox, president & CEO of the Mining Association of British Columbia (MABC). "A strong and thriving B.C. mining industry can continue to play a pivotal leadership role in Canada's transition to a clean tech, lower-carbon future, for the benefit of B.C. families and workers."

"We fully support the provincial government's commitment to the future of mining in British Columbia and the employment it supports," said Michelle Laurie from the United Steelworkers. "The Mining Jobs Task Force will help government find ways to strengthen the sector, so it's able to sustain good, accessible jobs and training opportunities for British Columbians, workers and their families throughout the province."

At today's announcement, Mungall also highlighted the B.C. mining flow-through share tax credit, which was extended in Budget 2018. The previous tax credit expired Dec. 31, 2017.

"In an era when we will need minerals for an electrified economy and for transportation, we want B.C. to be the most attractive jurisdiction in Canada for exploration investment," said Mungall. "The mining flow-through share tax credit is one of the tools we can use to get there."

The Mining Jobs Task Force will look at all aspects of mineral exploration and mining in British Columbia, and provide recommendations to government on measures it might implement to make B.C. the most attractive jurisdiction for investment in this important industry.

Quick Facts:

* Mineral exploration, mining and related sectors in B.C. provide jobs for more than 30,000 people in communities throughout the province and adds over $6 billion to B.C.'s GDP.

* Currently, more than 1,100 businesses in British Columbia provide supplies or services to mining operations in this province.

* With rich mineral deposits, B.C. is Canada's largest producer of copper, largest exporter of steelmaking coal and only producer of molybdenum (a key component in steelmaking).

* Mining is the largest private-sector employer of Indigenous people in Canada and B.C. shares mineral tax revenue with First Nations.

BACKGROUNDER

Mining Jobs Task Force to review B.C.'s exploration and mining sector

Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Michelle Mungall has established the 12-member B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force. The task force is mandated to work with First Nations, the mining industry and mining communities to make jobs secure and mines viable as commodity prices fluctuate.

The task force will be responsible for providing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources with recommendations on the following areas:

* Establishing baseline metrics (e.g. cost of production, carbon intensity, employment statistics, expenditures and revenues, etc.) to measure the current state of the industry and provide an economic impact analysis of the mining sector in B.C.;

* Skills training and development, so that British Columbians can enter and grow careers in the sector;

* A co-ordinated provincial approach to geoscience;

* Potential financial incentive programs and the Province's competitiveness and approach to attract mining investment into BC;

* Potential government actions to ensure the sustainability of existing mines and job protection during commodity cycles;

* Identify innovation and partnership opportunities that ensure an environmentally sustainable mining sector;

* Identify best practices in mining jobsite health and safety;

* Increasing public awareness of the importance of the mining sector to the Province and its role in a low-carbon future; and

* In consultation with the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources, any other matters arising over the course of the review that the Task Force considers significant.

Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources assistant deputy minister Peter Robb will chair the task force. The other members of the task force include:

Edie Thome, president & CEO of the Association for Mineral Exploration (AME):

Thome brings a wealth of experience in government relations, permitting and public affairs as well as on-the-ground experience working with stakeholders, First Nations, elected officials and land owners on projects in the resource sector. Through her work, she is familiar with advocacy efforts at both the provincial and federal levels and, specifically, how the legislative and regulatory framework can support or hinder productive, responsible resource development within British Columbia and Canada.

Most recently, Thome was director of Environment, Permitting and Compliance, Aboriginal Relations and Public Affairs at BC Hydro, responsible for permitting and compliance, Aboriginal relations and public affairs for the Site C Clean Energy Project. Prior to that she worked in risk management, environment, operations and customer service for BC Hydro. Her management experience also includes four and a half years as vice-president, Customer Service, Airport Operations and Corporate Communications for Harmony Airways. Thome has brought to AME a keen understanding of leadership in an industry association, gained through her service from 2013 to 2017 as chair of the board of the Canadian Hydropower Association (CHA), a national, non-profit organization, comprised of nearly 50 members - spanning hydropower producers, manufacturers, developers and engineering firms to individuals.

Bryan Cox , president & CEO of the Mining Association of British Columbia (MABC):

As the preeminent voice and advocate for the mining industry in B.C., Cox leads a team actively working with governments, business leaders, First Nations, communities, and the broader public to advocate for and communicate the economic and social value of mining. MABC is focused on keeping the interests of its members and the value of mining forefront in the minds of British Columbians, especially regarding society's transition to a lower carbon economy.

Don McPherson, mayor of Tumbler Ridge:

McPherson moved to Tumbler Ridge in 1981, two years before it ever became a community. Working on the Province's North East Coal Project at the 1,000 person camp, he contracted to Quintette and Bullmoose Mines. In 1986, he moved his business into the downtown core and saw the community rise up around him.

The mayor was first elected to council in 2000 during a by-election. The circumstances surrounding this election has given the mayor deep insight into both the strengths and vulnerabilities of a mining community. As the town emptied during the shutdown of the two mines then councillor McPherson fought to ensure the community did not close, retained its infrastructure and attracted new residents through a first of its kind mass housing sale. McPherson will bring a unique perspective to the task force as its only municipal representative on issues such as community needs, sustainability, and how government can work with industry to ensure the success of all.

Regina Saimoto, associate dean for Northwest Community College (NWCC), Eastern Region:

Saimoto has played an instrumental role in NWCC's award-winning School of Exploration & Mining and collaborated on curriculum development of the Environmental Monitoring Assistant Program (EMAP) since 2006. Previously, she developed curricula for a number of courses and programs related to the natural resource sector, working with government and industry to identify key competencies. Saimoto has also served as the executive director for the Centre of Training Excellence in Mining (CTEM), the dean of instruction and has taught in numerous natural resources related programs and courses.

Alan Young, director, Materials Efficiency Research Group:

Since 1990, Young has worked as a facilitator and strategist for a wide range of conservation groups, Indigenous organizations, progressive companies and governments across Canada and internationally. His primary focus has been on implementing sustainability and leadership strategies for the extractive sector in North America, Latin America, Europe and Scandinavia. His work includes ethical practices certification programs in the forestry and mining sectors, cross sector collaboration design and facilitation, large-scale conservation strategies, as well as various legislative reform initiatives in the extractive sectors nationally and internationally. He is chairperson of the International Institute for Sustainable Development, Steering Committee member of the Initiative for Responsible

Mining Assurance, and is a former chair of the Forest Stewardship Council of Canada.

Tom Syer, director of Government Affairs, Teck Resources Limited:

Syer has 20 years of experience in leadership roles within the public and private sectors, working on policy development with specific focuses on natural resource development, climate change and Indigenous relations. He has been involved in the development and roll-out of numerous provincial and federal policy initiatives and, in the private sector, has been responsible for advancing resource development policies and Indigenous relationships, including successfully negotiating comprehensive agreements for the largest wind farm and run-of-river projects in Western Canada.

Additionally, Syer has actively led and participated in numerous multi-lateral initiatives, policy committees and reviews including chairing the Energy and Indigenous Affairs Committees at the Business Council.

Richard Tremblay, Taseko Gibraltar Mine vice-president and general manager:

Tremblay is a seasoned mining professional who has 29 years of experience in the mining industry. He is currently vice president and general manager of the Gibraltar Mine located north of Williams Lake, B.C. and previous to that was vice president of Operations at Coalspur. Tremblay has also been general manager of Teck Coal's Fording River and Line Creek Operations, located in the Elk Valley in south east British Columbia.

Tremblay holds an MBA from Simon Fraser University and is a professional engineer with a bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Queen's University. He and his wife Sue have been married for twenty-eight years and have three adult children, all of whom work in the mining industry. The Tremblays live in Williams Lake with their 14 dogs, 2 cats and 3 horses.

Michelle Laurie, staff representative for the United Steelworkers - Western Canada:

Laurie has lived and worked throughout British Columbia: on the coast, Vancouver Island, the far northern portion of the province, and in the east central region. She is a red-seal certified electrician, having served her apprenticeship in a coal mine in Tumbler Ridge B.C. Prior to that, she was employed in Cassiar, B.C., in the asbestos mine as a labourer, drill oiler and truck driver. Laurie has been trained in mine rescue (surface) and has also worked as a paramedic in central and southern B.C.

Currently, Laurie is primarily involved in collective bargaining and dispute resolution matters in various sectors of the Steelworkers, as well as delivering training to workers on those issues and others. She is married, with four adult children and five grandchildren, all living in various parts of B.C., and clearly has an ongoing interest the economic security and development of our province.

Earl Graham, staff representative for the United Steelworkers:

Earl Graham is employed as a Staff Representative for the United Steelworkers and services through-out the lower mainland, Vancouver Island, Sunshine Coast, as the Interior of British Columbia, and also goes as far north as to include the Yukon. Graham, at a young age, started in the logging industry on Vancouver Island, then transferred to the manufacturing side of the business back on the mainland. He then moved on to serving as a business agent with the IWA in 1996. In 2006 the IWA merged with the United Steelworkers where he then became a USW staff representative. In his capacity of staff representative, he has been involved in many sectors from agriculture, forestry and mining.

More importantly, with respect to this task force, he has serviced in the mining sector for over 10 years at the Quinsam Coal Mine in Campbell River, and Texada Quarrying (A Division of LaFarge), Imperial Limestone Company, and Blubber Bay Quarry (Ash Grove Cement Company), all of which are located on Texada Island. In 2017, Graham was appointed from labour to the Health and Safety Review Sub-Committee for the review of the Health, Safety and Reclamation Code for Mines in British Columbia. Graham is married and has three adult girls who live and work in greater Vancouver and Surrey region. He continues to support working families to make their lives a better place to live in the wonderful province of British Columbia.

Mark Podlasly, senior advisor, First Nations Energy and Mining Council:

Podlasly, member of the Cook's Ferry Indian Band (Nlaka'pamux Nation), is a consultant with over 20 years of experience in corporate strategy, strategic partnerships and revenue sharing mechanisms related to extractive industries.

A graduate of Harvard University, he is currently a Trustee of the NLX Legacy Trust, managing and operating a seven-figure mining-based, sovereign wealth fund shared by eight Indigenous communities in South Central B.C. He also serves as chair of the First Nations Limited Partnership (FNLP), a 16 First Nations commercial entity allied to Chevron Canada's Kitimat LNG Project.

Podlasly previously ran a successful executive education and consulting practice in Asia, USA and Europe where he designed and delivered corporate strategy, leadership, and globalization programs for a client list that includes GE, Unilever, General Mills, Clorox, Goldman Sachs and Praxair. Podlasly is a regular contributor in the Kellogg School of Management's mining leadership programs in Chicago, and an active participant to global business and indigenous engagement for the International Finance Corporation's Sustainability Exchange and DPI Mining.

Neil Pogany, partner, Deloitte and Touche LLP:

Pogany is a tax partner with a big four accounting firm, and has over 22 years of experience serving major and junior mining companies. He has provided a variety of taxation services to these companies including Canadian/Provincial income tax and mining tax consulting, tax compliance and government audit defence services. Pogany is recognized as one of the leaders in mining taxation in Canada for his firm and has significant experience in the mining industry.

Pogany has presented at the BC Mining Forum, Federated Press Understanding Natural Resources Taxation Seminar and the Canadian Institute's Global Mining Finance & Law Seminar.

Codie Morigeau, Ktunaxa Nation Council:

Morigeau is the director of Education and Employment for the Ktunaxa Nation Council in Cranbrook B.C. The education and employment sector is one of five sectors that strive to achieve the Ktunaxa Nation vision of: "Strong, healthy Citizens and communities, speaking our languages and celebrating who we are and our history in our ancestral homelands, working together, managing our lands and resources, within a self-sufficient, self-governing Nation." Morigeau has also served as an elected Band Councillor for her community of ʔaqam for the past five years.

Morigeau has worked for the Ktunaxa Nation for over 15 years. In Ktunaxa ʔamakʔis (Ktunaxa Territory), also known as the East Kootenay region, where there are numerous large scale mining operations. Through her work, she has been very involved in the negotiations and contribution to Impact Management Benefits Agreement (IMBA) between the Ktunaxa Nation and Teck Coal. Morigeau works to establish formal and informal educational and employment relationships and partnerships to leverage opportunities for Ktunaxa Citizens and Indigenous people who are underrepresented in both the mining industry and post-secondary education. Codie is passionate about advancing opportunities by being solution oriented for all that call Ktunaxa ʔamakʔis or the East Kootenay region home.

Hi Tania,

Here is your draft for review. I'm wondering if there's a reason you want to send this provincewide when there is no call-in for media outside the lower mainland. Normally we would just send this type of MA to local or regional media. I would recommend we send to Burnaby, lower mainland, majors and ethnic media.

On approval, I'll set this up to go out at 9:50 a.m.

Thanks,
Shannon

Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing

NEWS RELEASE
New homes and withdrawal centre for people in Vancouver

VANCOUVER - The Province is working with the City of Vancouver and Vancouver Coastal Health to build approximately 100 affordable rental homes, as well as a new withdrawal management centre for people seeking treatment for addictions.

"Addressing both the urgent housing needs of British Columbians and the health needs of people living with addiction issues requires new partnerships and a new approach," said Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "This model of creating a mixed-use development means we're able to provide homes for the people who need it most, while also reaching out to the larger community with essential addictions services, resulting in long-term and comprehensive solutions for people in Vancouver."

A new evidence-based withdrawal management centre within the planned complex will replace Vancouver Coastal Health's current withdrawal management services facility on East 2nd Ave. It will include a range of enhanced services such as inpatient and outpatient withdrawal management, and sobering and at-home withdrawal management, which are trauma-informed and culturally appropriate.

Approximately 20 new spaces of short-term transitional housing are also included in the plans for people who have completed detox, so they can continue receiving access to supports and health services while they transition into longer-term housing and treatment for substance use.

"It's exciting to see this forward-thinking plan for delivering addiction treatment services to those in need, while also providing affordable and transitional housing," said Judy Darcy, Minister of Mental Health and Addictions. "We recognize the social factors, like poverty and housing, contribute to mental health and addictions, and are critical to a person's pathway to hope and recovery. I expect this centre will make a difference in many people's lives. "

The proposed mixed-use redevelopment, located at 1636 Clark Dr. and 1321-1395 East 1st Ave., is a collaborative response to the housing crisis and the health-care needs of the community. It will serve low-to moderate-income people, and include a social enterprise space for local residents, focusing on Indigenous healing and wellness through employment and alignment with culturally informed treatment.

"The city is a proud partner for this innovative project that combines urgently needed, affordable housing with new addictions support services for our most vulnerable residents. This is yet another example of how we are helping people with the greatest needs," said Gregor Robertson, mayor of Vancouver. "Whether it's the 600 new modular homes for the homeless, hundreds of affordable homes for low-income residents at 58 W. Hastings, and now this major project at 1st and Clark, we are making significant headway on helping Vancouver residents rebuild their lives through affordable-housing options and addiction treatment support."

The Province, Vancouver Coastal Health and the City of Vancouver will work with existing tenants on site and the surrounding community to share project details. The proposed project is subject to a rezoning approval by Vancouver city council and a development permit approval process.

Quotes:

Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training, MLA Vancouver-Mount Pleasant -

"It's good to see projects like these that serve a range of needs being planned in Vancouver. It's through strong partnerships that our government will begin to make real progress in a city that has been struggling with an affordability and addiction crisis for far too long. The trauma-informed and culturally appropriate services that will be available mean that we are providing care that respects and integrates people's cultural values and practices, while treating people with compassion."

Laura Case, CEO, Vancouver Community, Vancouver Coastal Health -

"The human cost of addictions is great, but this is something we can do to help more people struggling with substance use disorders to get connected to services that will help them on their road to recovery. This future development offers a significant opportunity for Vancouver Coastal Health to create greater capacity for and access to withdrawal management and other treatment services at one location."

Kevin Barlow, CEO, Metro Vancouver Aboriginal Executive Council -

"Metro Vancouver Aboriginal Executive Council supports this innovative work that will allow for new income-generating opportunities, while promoting healing and wellness. Our organization is looking forward to assisting non-profits to take full advantage of this space."

Quick Facts:

- * The Government of B.C. is investing approximately $20 million in the project.
- * The withdrawal management centre will feature academic teaching and research, and provide a learning hub to support staff development, knowledge transfer, and sharing of best practice in withdrawal management and substance use treatment.
- * Rezoning of the land and design of the facility is anticipated to take approximately one year, with construction anticipated to take between three and four years.
- * The Province is developing a comprehensive provincial housing strategy to make housing more affordable for British Columbians.
- * The B.C. government has set a target to build, in partnership, 114,000 new units of affordable housing throughout B.C.

Here is your draft for review. On approval, we'll get this out the door to provincewide and Indigenous media.

I made a small change from "aunties" to "aunts" as it seems more formal, but can happily change that back.

I have confirmation with Sage the IRR is lead and contact and that this is approved by the PO to go immediately.

STATEMENT

Statement on the annual Women's Memorial March for murdered and missing women

Premier John Horgan, MLA for Vancouver-Mount Pleasant Melanie Mark, and Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation Scott Fraser have issued the following statement to acknowledge the annual Women's Memorial March in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside:

"On February 14th, thousands gather on the streets of the Downtown Eastside, on the unceded territories of the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh people, to remember and honour the lives of women and girls from this community who have died or have gone missing, and to support their loved ones. It is with heartfelt regret that we cannot physically be there with you today. We stand with you in heart and spirit.

"The annual Women's Memorial March is a chance to come together, grieve the loss and honour the lives of beloved sisters, mothers, daughters, aunts, community members and friends. For us, it is also a call to action and why we have committed to fully adopt and implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the calls to action of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada.

"This memorial march - led by families, community members, activists and organizations working tirelessly over the past 27 years - has ensured that we do not forget the women and girls, stolen sisters who were lost from the Downtown Eastside and other parts of B.C. We honour this commitment and passion for justice, shining a light on an issue too long unresolved.

"Too many women and girls from vulnerable communities have died in our province. In particular, Indigenous women in B.C. are nearly three times more likely to be victims of domestic violence, murder, and other violent crimes than non-Indigenous women. This must change. Gendered violence, poverty and racism are issues we all must confront in our communities.

"We want to affirm that these women and girls are not forgotten. Their lives matter and their legacy matters. Every woman and child deserves to feel safe and protected. We will continue to walk beside all of you, working to create a future free of racism and violence."

Thanks Shannon, "aunties" is a term that is used in Indigenous circles that means a specific thing, not necessarily specifically a blood-related aunt. Can we please keep it as it was?

There is also one thing I just need to check a previous draft on to make sure a small revision was incorporated as requested.

STATEMENT

Statement on the annual Women's Memorial March for murdered and missing women

Premier John Horgan, MLA for Vancouver-Mount Pleasant Melanie Mark, and Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation Scott Fraser have issued the following statement to acknowledge the annual Women's Memorial March in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside:

"On February 14th, thousands gather on the streets of the Downtown Eastside, on the unceded territories of the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh people, to remember and honour the lives of women and girls from this community who have died or have gone missing, and to support their loved ones. It is with heartfelt regret that we cannot physically be there with you today. We stand with you in heart and spirit.

"The annual Women's Memorial March is a chance to come together, grieve the loss and honour the lives of beloved sisters, mothers, daughters, aunts, community members and friends. For us, it is also a call to action and why we have committed to fully adopt and implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the calls to action of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada.

"This memorial march - led by families, community members, activists and organizations working tirelessly over the past 27 years - has ensured that we do not forget the women and girls, stolen sisters who were lost from the Downtown Eastside and other parts of B.C. We honour this commitment and passion for justice, shining a light on an issue too long unresolved.

"Too many women and girls from vulnerable communities have died in our province. In particular, Indigenous women in B.C. are nearly three times more likely to be victims of domestic violence, murder, and other violent crimes than non-Indigenous women. This must change. Gendered violence, poverty and racism are issues we all must confront in our communities.

"We want to affirm that these women and girls are not forgotten. Their lives matter and their legacy matters. Every woman and child deserves to feel safe and protected. We will continue to walk beside all of you, working to create a future free of racism and violence."

NEWS RELEASE

Student success continues to build in B.C.

VICTORIA - High-school completion rates continue to improve for all B.C. students, as confirmed by the latest Ministry of Education data released today.

The six-year completion rates from 2016-17 throughout the province show that more students overall are completing high school, with the greatest increases for Indigenous students and students with special needs.

"As a new government, our vision is to boost student achievement and grad rates. High school completion is a key that opens doors for people, no matter what path they choose," said Education Minister Rob Fleming.

"These consistent increases mean more students are able to take advantage of those opportunities. We will keep working to raise the six-year completion rate. We've seen positive improvements for students with diverse needs and Indigenous learners, but there is more work to be done to ensure all students can recognize their full potential."

The completion rate for Indigenous students in 2016-17 increased 2.1% over 2015-16, to 65.9%. Over the last 10 years, the rate for Indigenous students has increased by 19%, up from 46.9% in 2007-08.

Students with special needs are completing high school at a rate of 69.4%, up 2.4% from the year before. These students have seen a 25.3% increase in completion rates over the last 10 years, up from 44.1% in 2007-08.

Overall completion rates increase steadily each year; 84% this year, up from 83.6% last year. The overall completion rate has increased 5.2% over the past 10 years, from 78.8% in 2007-08.

The six-year completion rate calculates the number of students who graduated within six years from the time they enrolled in Grade 8.

INFORMATION BULLETIN

Thinking of running for local office?

VICTORIA - People considering running in local elections now have access to resources that provide information about the roles and responsibilities of elected local officials.

Educational videos and a brochure are available online, at local government candidate information sessions and at orientations for newly elected officials. These new resources will help people to make informed decisions about running for local government offices.

General information about expectations of locally elected officials, their roles and responsibilities and about how local governments make decisions is available through these new resources.

The informative videos feature current local government officials and staff from throughout the province providing their perspectives in five areas:

- * What is local government?
- * Characteristics of an effective local official
- * Roles and responsibilities of staff and elected officials
- * Testing readiness to be an elected official
- * What contributes to effective decision making?

In an effort to create awareness, the Local Government Management Association, Local Government Leadership Academy, Union of B.C. Municipalities and the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing worked to develop the materials for a diverse audience of prospective candidates.

STATEMENT

Premier Horgan's statement on Lunar New Year

VICTORIA - Premier John Horgan has released the following statement in celebration of Lunar New Year on Feb. 16, 2018:

"On Lunar New Year, families throughout British Columbia celebrate by sharing a meal, exchanging red envelopes, and preparing for a new year with new opportunities and hope for the future.

"As the Year of the Rooster comes to an end and the Year of the Dog begins, British Columbia has much to look forward to.

"This year, B.C. will strengthen existing friendships and build trust in new partnerships. We will grow our economy by improving our relationships with our international trade partners, and supporting B.C. businesses. We will make life better for people, and provide opportunity and a better future for our children.

"I wish all those celebrating the Lunar New Year - including Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, Singaporean and many other communities - a prosperous Year of the Dog.

"May the new year bring you and your family good luck, good health and prosperity."

Across B.C. in Ralston's quote.

Add an Oxford comma in the last bullet, after October:

* B.C. continues to foster an entrepreneurship culture, including the declaration of Small Business Week in October, and supporting programs that connect women and youth to business training so they can become the entrepreneurs of tomorrow.

Province continues gender equity focus with support for We for She VICTORIA - The B.C. government is supporting the advancement of women in the workplace and the global economy with its involvement in this year's We for She conference.

The Province has signed on as one of three organizing partners of the 2018 conference - to be held in Vancouver in November - joining the Women's Enterprise Centre and the Greater Vancouver Board of Trade. The announcement was made at a Greater Vancouver Board of Trade-sponsored event, A Conversation with Michelle Obama.

Now in its fifth year, We for She annually attracts close to 1,000 young women from throughout B.C. to learn about career opportunities, gender equality and mentorship.

"We are proudly contributing $350,000 in support of this fall's We for She conference to create greater awareness of job possibilities for women across B.C.," said Bruce Ralston, Minister of Jobs, Trade and Technology. "Your government is working hard to encourage more young women to pursue careers in science, technology, engineering and math, which are predominantly occupied by men. We value this event because it connects young women to successful and inspiring role models, motivating them to follow their lead and helping them become active participants in B.C.'s economy."

Premier John Horgan set the tone for gender equality in B.C. by appointing 11 women to his 22-member cabinet, and on Feb. 15, 2018, appointed Esquimalt-Metchosin MLA Mitzi Dean as Parliamentary Secretary for Gender Equity.

"We are thrilled by today's announcement by the B.C. government that it has made this substantial funding commitment to We for She 2018," said conference co-chairs Jill Earthy and Lois Nahirney. "It will ensure that professional men, women and girls from around B.C. can meet again for a day of inspiration, learning, mentorship and action to support gender equity for current and future generations."

Participants in We for She gain a greater understanding of their career options and potential, expand their confidence in what they can achieve, and are provided with the opportunity to meet successful role models. The one-day conference features a number of workshops led by inspiring speakers, leaders of private companies and representatives from women's business organizations.

"We for She has been building momentum over the past four years. Now, with this essential funding commitment from the Province, We for She 2018 will continue to bring together women and B.C. students for a fifth annual one-day forum, with the ultimate goal of making gender equality in leadership a priority," said Iain Black, CEO of the Greater Vancouver Board of Trade.

"We are delighted to work with proactive business and government leaders in B.C. on their commitment to leading the way in diversity and sharing best practices," said Laurel Douglas, CEO of the Women's Enterprise Centre and co-founder of the WEB Alliance of Women's Business Networks in B.C. "Through exposure and resources shared at We for She, we aim to empower participants throughout the province."

The We for She movement started in 2014 to advance gender equality and grow the Canadian economy by championing gender diversity in leadership as a business necessity.

Quick Facts:

- * With more than 900,000 job openings expected in B.C. by 2027, women will play an increasingly important role in keeping the province's economy diverse, strong and growing.

- * B.C. has more than one million women working - the most in B.C.'s history and nearly half of the current provincial labour force.

- * Approximately 38% of all business owners in B.C. are women, above the national average of 36%.

- * Women comprised 38% of all self-employed people in B.C. in 2017, ranking B.C. third among all provinces and above the national average of 37%.

- * B.C. continues to foster an entrepreneurship culture, including the declaration of Small Business Week in October, and supporting programs that connect women and youth to business training so they can become the entrepreneurs of tomorrow.

In the past, we have capitalized the full name of the tour, Find Your Fit Tour. Although there are few things in the entire universe I probably care less about than that capital T, I feel we should bump it up, to be consistent with the other FYF releases.

In the lede, I am thinking hyphens in "hands on" and "career planning"

4th paragraph – no comma after “industries” – this edit is now sort of like an old friend to me.

I think that’s all I have to add.

Find Your Fit tour reaches Agassiz to inspire future career choices

AGASSIZ - The Find Your Fit tour stop in Agassiz is a great opportunity for students to get valuable, hands on experience with helpful career planning tools.

WorkBC's Find Your Fit tour will be at Agassiz Elementary-Secondary school on Thursday, Jan. 11, 2018, and open to the public from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

"It can be intimidating for students and parents when trying to plan for an education and future career," said Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training. "The Find Your Fit tour gives students a taste of a number of rewarding careers that are needed on the coast and throughout our province. Attend the tour stop in Agassiz and find your future."

Students can visit up to 16 career activity stations where they can take part in a hands-on activity related to a specific career, like taking someone's blood pressure. These activities will help students uncover their strengths and interests, giving them the knowledge they need to get started with their career planning. They can then move on to a labour-market information station, where they can dig deeper into a career of their choice.

Industries, such as tourism, tech and health care will need a broad range of skilled British Columbians. The Find Your Fit tour stop in Agassiz is a unique opportunity to get insight into careers that are in-demand by a diverse range of industries that are important to building a strong, sustainable and innovative economy for the 21st century that works for everyone.

The Find Your Fit tour builds on the government's commitment to provide British Columbians with the services they need by providing them the information to help them make decisions about education and training.

The Find Your Fit tour and WorkBC.ca are first steps for all British Columbians on a journey to discovering information about a variety of exciting careers that will build a brighter future for individuals, families and communities, and help build a better B.C. for everyone.

Needs a placeline at the beginning.

Also, not really a change, but the wording on the 2nd paragraph seems a little odd to me. Like would it be better as "Following the kickoff, Premier Horgan will be available for general media questions"?

Also, I think a hyphen in "photo-op"

Robinson quote - maybe hyphenate "long term"

By contrast, in the sixth paragraph, "re-development" should have no hyphen. Shortly after that, I would add a comma after "1321-1395 East 1st Ave."

In the Robertson quote, nix the comma from "urgently-needed"

In the quotes section, should there be a wee space before the dash after the person's name and title?

Also, maybe a comma before MLA in the first one – MLA, Vancouver-Mount Pleasant-

Also, Mark quote needs a period at the end.

3rd quick facts – maybe "between three and four years"?

NEWS RELEASE

New homes and withdrawal centre for people in Vancouver

VANCOUVER - The Province is working with the City of Vancouver and Vancouver Coastal Health to build approximately 100 affordable rental homes, as well as a new withdrawal management centre for people seeking treatment for addictions.

"Addressing both the urgent housing needs of British Columbians and the health needs of people living with addiction issues requires new partnerships and a new approach," said Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "This model of creating a mixed-use development means we're able to provide homes for the people who need it most, while also reaching out to the larger community with essential addictions services, resulting in long term and comprehensive solutions for people in Vancouver."

A new evidence-based withdrawal management centre within the planned complex will replace Vancouver Coastal Health's current withdrawal management services facility on East 2nd Ave. It will include a range of enhanced services such as inpatient and outpatient withdrawal management, and sobering and at-home withdrawal management, which are trauma-informed and culturally appropriate.

Approximately 20 new spaces of short-term transitional housing are also included in the plans for people who have completed detox, so they can continue receiving access to supports and health services while they transition into longer-term housing and treatment for substance use.

"It's exciting to see this forward-thinking plan for delivering addiction treatment services to those in need, while also providing affordable and transitional housing," said Judy Darcy, Minister of Mental Health and Addictions. "We recognize the social factors, like poverty and housing, contribute to mental health and addictions, and are critical to a person's pathway to hope and recovery. I expect this centre will make a difference in many people's lives. "

The proposed mixed-use re-development, located at 1636 Clark Dr. and 1321-1395 East 1st Ave. is a collaborative response to the housing crisis and the health-care needs of the community. It will serve low-to moderate-income people, and include a social enterprise space for local residents, focusing on Indigenous healing and wellness through employment and alignment with culturally informed treatment.

"The city is a proud partner for this innovative project that combines urgently-needed, affordable housing with new additions support services for our most vulnerable residents. This is yet another example of how we are helping people with the greatest needs," said Gregor Robertson, mayor of Vancouver. "Whether it's the 600 new modular homes for the homeless, hundreds of affordable homes for low-income residents at 58 W. Hastings, and now this major project at 1st and Clark, we are making significant headway on helping Vancouver residents rebuild their lives through affordable-housing options and addiction treatment support."

The Province, Vancouver Coastal Health and the City of Vancouver will work with existing tenants on site and the surrounding community to share project details. The proposed project is subject to a rezoning approval by Vancouver city council and a development permit approval process.

Quotes:

Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training, MLA Vancouver-Mount Pleasant-

"It's good to see projects like these that serve a range of needs being planned in Vancouver. It's through strong partnerships that our government will begin to make real progress in a city that has been struggling with an affordability and addiction crisis for far too long. The trauma-informed and culturally appropriate services that will be available mean that we are providing care that respects and integrates people's cultural values and practices, while treating people with compassion"

Laura Case, CEO, Vancouver Community, Vancouver Coastal Health-

"The human cost of addictions is great, but this is something we can do to help more people struggling with substance use disorders to get connected to services that will help them on their road to recovery. This future development offers a significant opportunity for Vancouver Coastal Health to create greater capacity for and access to withdrawal management and other treatment services at one location."

Kevin Barlow, CEO, Metro Vancouver Aboriginal Executive Council-

"Metro Vancouver Aboriginal Executive Council supports this innovative work that will allow for new income-generating opportunities, while promoting healing and wellness. Our organization is looking forward to assisting non-profits to take full advantage of this space."

Quick Facts:

- * The Government of B.C. is investing approximately $20 million in the project.
- * The withdrawal management centre will feature academic teaching and research, and provide a learning hub to support staff development, knowledge transfer, and sharing of best practice in withdrawal management and substance use treatment.
- * Rezoning of the land and design of the facility is anticipated to take approximately one year, with construction anticipated to take between 3-4 years.
- * The Province is developing a comprehensive provincial housing strategy to make housing more affordable for British Columbians.
- * The B.C. government has set a target to build, in partnership, 114,000 new units of affordable housing throughout B.C.

Headline and 2nd paragraph - it should be Roberts Bank, no?

In Stewart quote, need a hyphen in "vice president" and I think Infrastructure should be lowercased, as part of his title and have a comma after it - Cliff Stewart, vice-president, infrastructure, at the Vancouver Fraser Port Authority.

Also, in 2nd sentence of Stewart quote, I'd throw in a comma after impact - "...we're always looking at ways to reduce that impact, working with a wide variety of stakeholders."

In last paragraph, I'd add a comma after 1.7 million – contract valued at $1.7 million, awarded to Crown Contracting Limited from Surrey.

NEWS RELEASE

Intelligent signs to improve traffic flow along Robert Banks rail corridor

VANCOUVER - People in the Lower Mainland will soon experience reduced traffic delays thanks to six new motorist advisory signs that will be installed at key road and railway crossings in Langley, Surrey and the Township of Langley, as part of the Railway Crossing Information System project.

The signs will complement the railway overpasses constructed in the Langley and Surrey area along the Robert Banks rail corridor that were built to improve shipments and traffic flow, while enhancing trade with the Asia-Pacific region. Community consultation has shown strong support for the signs, as their purpose is to improve community liveability and help manage increased traffic along the corridor, which has as many as 22 train crossings per day.

"Our government is continuously working to build stronger, more efficient transportation corridors to international markets," said the Honourable Marc Garneau, Minister of Transport. "With this contribution of $300,000 to the intelligent transportation system, we are providing drivers with the information they need to choose the most efficient route, while making the trade corridor more reliable."

Intelligent by design, the advisory signs will operate through a central control system and will provide drivers with real-time train crossing information - indicating if the crossing is open or closed - so drivers can make informed decisions about their travel routes. The signs will specify the train's location and travel direction, enabling drivers to use alternate crossing options at adjacent railway overpasses in order to avoid traffic delays.

"These motorist advisory signs are a great example of how new transportation technology can improve the day-to-day lives of the people who live in high-traffic, trade-oriented communities," said Minister of Transportation and Infrastructure Claire Trevena. "The Province will continue to work with our partners when it comes to innovating beneficial transportation solutions."

In addition to reducing traffic congestion and minimizing greenhouse gas emissions due to decreased vehicle idling times, the signs will also increase travel efficiency and mobility for emergency vehicles.

"The Railway Crossing Information System is a critical piece of the Roberts Bank Rail Corridor program that will help drivers make informed choices when planning their route to minimize delays by rerouting to one of the eight new overpass crossings," said Kevin Desmond, CEO of TransLink. "This is another example of business and government coming together to improve travel on major road arterials."

"The Port of Vancouver is Canada's largest, keeping our country connected with the global economy," said Cliff Stewart, vice president, Infrastructure at the Vancouver Fraser Port Authority. "We recognize the movement of goods to and from the port can impact communities, and we're always looking at ways to reduce that impact working with a wide variety of stakeholders. The joint effort and support of all funding partners involved in this project will help to relieve traffic congestion and delays for drivers, while improving community safety and quality of life for daily commuters."

The Railway Crossing Information System project is jointly funded by the Government of B.C., Transport Canada and Vancouver Fraser Port Authority, each providing $300,000, in addition to $2.9 million from TransLink. The total project cost is $3.8 million, which includes development of the central control system and a recently issued civil-works contract valued at $1.7 million awarded to Crown Contracting Limited from Surrey. The project is expected to be complete and in operation by December 2018.

Good morning, Everybody –

I have been getting a great deal of feedback about our work-flow process lately. Referencing the bulleted list below, I am ready to take a bullet from all my WES Referees!

Before we get busy with the throne speech, budget and session, may I suggest a group-think chat to re-visit the process? And make sure everyone (especially me!) gets it?

If you think this would help us all, I can twist Grant's arm and ask him to set something up.

Whaddya think?

If the editor doesn't have questions for Linda and me, follow our normal process that we have long established. (see bullet one)

Hello team,

Thanks for the feedback this morning. Much appreciated!

Here is a brief synopsis of how we can serve the ministry shops even better in the future and be even more consistent in our work.

- Should an editor have a question about an edit that she/he is unsure of (capitalization, punctuation are good examples), the editor reaches out to Grant and Linda via messenger or old-fashioned phone to discuss. This does not need to happen for every release and will be at the editor's discretion. (Linda and I have many robust and spirited discussions every day about style and edits).
- Once the editor has finished the edits, the release is flipped to Robin for his edits. When he has had his initial edit, Robin then flips it back to the editor who sends it back to the ministry shop for a final approval.

- Once approved by the shop, it goes back to Robin, as per usual (during business hours) who pushes the buttons.

NOTE: Only Grant and Linda need be cced on the backing and forthing....

We can certainly tweak this as needed.

Thanks,
Grant

I was intrigued by your description of some of the work that was done in the past. While Grant has shared some work samples, I'd be interested in speaking with you about your past experience, and how that might translate to what is possible for the future.

Happy to talk over the phone, or over coffee if you are somewhere close to the office. Let me know what works for you.

Good morning,
Another dreary day in the capital.
Shannon is still strategic planning and s.22 so we're a wee bit thin on the ground.
Dana will be taking charge of all FYF releases from now on, so we can have optimum consistency. So, thanks to Dana for taking that on.
And, I need everyone to help out on one thing.
I have noticed that, on occasion, when a corp cal number is entered in the HUB, nothing autopopulates. No date, no ministry, nada. I get a big blank.
Has anyone else had this experience? Yes or no?
In future, if this happens to you, could you take a screen shot and send it on to Robyn Croft and cc me?
Thanks,
Grant

To all GCPE staff:

Good morning everyone,

OCIO is now loading new workstations with Windows 10 and Office 2016 as their default. Mac workstations also now come with Office 2016 and existing Mac service users have been asked to upgrade to Office 2016 already. I would like to request volunteers to upgrade their Windows version to 10 or MS Office version to 2016 as early adopters or testers to ensure full functionality for GCPE line of business applications.

Testing involves:

- Using the workstation as you normally would
- Ensuring the workstation is compatible with your business functions, including software and web applications
- Report any problems as they are identified

Some older workstations may not be compatible with Windows 10, but can still have Office 2016 on Windows 7, we'll let you know if your workstation cannot be upgraded to Windows 10. Older workstations will be replaced in 2018 as part of a workstation refresh project.

If you are interested in being a tester or early adopter, please contact the GCPE Service Desk with the following information:

1. Your workstation number (e.g.: DC060123, NC050123)
2. Your upgrade choice (one of the following):
 - Windows 10 and Office 2016
 - Office 2016 on Windows 7

If you are very non-technical or require a high degree of stability in your workstation, please do not volunteer.

The following models are eligible for Windows 10:

You may have to remap your drives to get your desktop back. 77000 can help, but those instructions from where the servers moved should work too. My personal drive is still hooped from that move, notwithstanding the issues today.

Hi Shannon,
Here is your info. that we spoke about this morning.

Budget is Feb. 20 but we'll need to have our part done at least a couple of weeks before that, which means that time is uber tight.

Here's link of last year's strategic plan. It's a guide for what to think about and include, but, as discussed, different government, priorities, messaging, etc:
http://bcbudget.gov.bc.ca/2017/stplan/Strategic_Plan_2017-18_2020-21.pdf

The attached infographic from Finance covers the new government's priorities and can act as a guide as to the content (though there are a couple of things missing – like Education and Climate Strategy); the previous strategic plan can act as a guide as to the format and expectations.

As mentioned, you will need to do a content review doc which provides an outline-direction of where this is going to go. Start thinking about that/planning this afternoon. That will need an approval, before you start the actual writing assignment. In the mean time, I'll nail down some deadlines and gather more info. for you and the shops which will have to send you/us the materials.

Going to try to get the all-shops email out today.

Let me know if you have any questions at all.

I'll let the team know you are on special assignment. 😊

Thanks,
Grant

Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources

NEWS RELEASE

Government takes action to create and sustain exploration and mining jobs

VICTORIA - Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Michelle Mungall has established a B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force that will review exploration and mining in the province and find ways to strengthen this important industry.

"Over the coming months, the B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force will work with First Nations, the mining industry and communities to develop recommendations on possible actions government could take to bring more certainty to the mining sector and create good jobs for people today, tomorrow and beyond," said Mungall. "One of our goals with this review is to find ways to ensure mines in B.C. remain viable when commodity prices fluctuate, so that people can keep working and communities can thrive."

The 12-member task force will include representatives from industry, First Nations, municipal government, an environmental non-governmental organization, labour, post-secondary/training and the financial sector. The task force will submit its final report, including recommendations for legislative and/or regulatory amendments to the minister by Nov. 21, 2018.

Mungall announced the Mining Jobs Task Force in conjunction with Mining Day events at the parliament buildings. Organized by the Mining Association of BC (MABC), the annual Mining Day in Victoria brings together 40 delegates from major mining companies, proponents and supplier companies, and provides an opportunity for industry and government to discuss the importance of the sector, while identifying responsible opportunities for growth.

"We look forward to working with the government, First Nations and other important stakeholders on the task force to ensure our industry is globally competitive and well positioned to sustain the mining jobs of today and, importantly, create the mining jobs of tomorrow," said Bryan Cox, president and CEO of MABC. "A strong and thriving B.C. mining industry can continue to play a pivotal leadership role in Canada's transition to a clean tech, lower-carbon future, for the benefit of B.C. families and workers."

"We fully support the provincial government's commitment to the future of mining in British Columbia and the employment it supports," said Michelle Laurie from the United Steelworkers. "The Mining Jobs Task Force will help government find ways to strengthen the sector, so it's able to sustain good, accessible jobs and training opportunities for British Columbians, workers and their families throughout the province."

At today's announcement, Mungall also highlighted the B.C. mining flow-through share tax credit, which was extended in Budget 2018. The previous tax credit expired Dec. 31, 2017.

"In an era when we will need minerals for an electrified economy and for transportation, we want B.C. to be the most attractive jurisdiction in Canada for exploration investment," said Mungall. "The mining flow-through share tax credit is one of the tools we can use to get there."

The Mining Jobs Task Force will look at all aspects of mineral exploration and mining in British Columbia, and provide recommendations to government on measures it might implement to make B.C. the most attractive jurisdiction for investment in this important industry.

Quick Facts:

- * Mineral exploration, mining and related sectors in B.C. provide jobs for more than 30,000 people in communities throughout the province and add over $6 billion to B.C.'s GDP.

- * Currently, more than 1,100 businesses in British Columbia provide supplies or services to mining operations in this province.

- * With rich mineral deposits, B.C. is Canada's largest producer of copper, largest exporter of steelmaking coal and only producer of molybdenum (a key component in steelmaking).

- * Mining is the largest private-sector employer of Indigenous people in Canada and B.C. shares mineral tax revenue with First Nations.

BACKGROUNDER

Mining Jobs Task Force to review B.C.'s exploration and mining sector

Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Michelle Mungall has established the 12-member B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force. The task force is mandated to work with First Nations, the mining industry and mining communities to make jobs secure and mines viable as commodity prices fluctuate.

The task force will be responsible for providing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources with recommendations on the following areas:

- * Establishing baseline metrics (e.g. cost of production, carbon intensity, employment statistics, expenditures and revenues, etc.) to measure the current state of the industry and provide an economic impact analysis of the mining sector in B.C.;
- * Skills training and development, so that British Columbians can enter and grow careers in the sector;
- * A co-ordinated provincial approach to geoscience;
- * Potential financial incentive programs and the Province's competitiveness and approach to attract mining investment into B.C.;
- * Potential government actions to ensure the sustainability of existing mines and job protection during commodity cycles;
- * Identify innovation and partnership opportunities that ensure an environmentally sustainable mining sector;
- * Identify best practices in mining jobsite health and safety;
- * Increasing public awareness of the importance of the mining sector to the province and its role in a low-carbon future; and
- * In consultation with the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources, any other matters arising over the course of the review that the task force considers significant.

Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources assistant deputy minister Peter Robb will chair the task force. The other members of the task force include:

Edie Thome, president and CEO of the Association for Mineral Exploration (AME):

Thome brings a wealth of experience in government relations, permitting and public affairs as well as on-the-ground experience working with stakeholders, First Nations, elected officials and land owners on projects in the resource sector. Through her work, she is familiar with advocacy efforts at both the provincial and federal levels and, specifically, how the legislative and regulatory framework can support or hinder productive, responsible resource development within British Columbia and Canada.

Most recently, Thome was director of environment, permitting and compliance, Aboriginal relations and public affairs at BC Hydro, responsible for permitting and compliance, Aboriginal relations and public affairs for the Site C Clean Energy Project. Prior to that she worked in risk management, environment, operations and customer service for BC Hydro. Her management experience also includes four and a half years as vice-president, customer service, airport operations and corporate communications for Harmony Airways. Thome has brought to AME a keen understanding of leadership in an industry association, gained through her service from 2013 to 2017 as chair of the board of the Canadian Hydropower Association (CHA), a national, non-profit organization, comprised of nearly 50 members - spanning hydropower producers, manufacturers, developers and engineering firms to individuals.

Bryan Cox , president and CEO of the Mining Association of British Columbia (MABC):

As the preeminent voice and advocate for the mining industry in B.C., Cox leads a team actively working with governments, business leaders, First Nations, communities, and the broader public to advocate for and communicate the economic and social value of mining. MABC is focused on keeping the interests of its members and the value of mining forefront in the minds of British Columbians, especially regarding society's transition to a lower carbon economy.

Don McPherson, mayor of Tumbler Ridge:

McPherson moved to Tumbler Ridge in 1981, two years before it ever became a community. Working on the Province's North East Coal Project at the 1,000-person camp, he contracted to Quintette and Bullmoose Mines. In 1986, he moved his business into the downtown core and saw the community rise up around him.

The mayor was first elected to council in 2000 during a byelection. The circumstances surrounding this election have given the mayor deep insight into both the strengths and vulnerabilities of a mining community. As the town emptied during the shutdown of the two mines then-councillor McPherson fought to ensure the community did not close, retained its infrastructure and attracted new residents through a first of its kind mass housing sale. McPherson will bring a unique perspective to the task force as its only municipal representative on issues such as community needs, sustainability, and how government can work with industry to ensure the success of all.

Regina Saimoto, associate dean for Northwest Community College (NWCC), Eastern Region:

Saimoto has played an instrumental role in NWCC's award-winning School of Exploration & Mining and collaborated on curriculum development of the Environmental Monitoring Assistant Program (EMAP) since 2006. This only subscribes them to news releases, IBs, statements, etc. as published online. Media advisories are not published online and require that I sign you up. As I mentioned, if the three of you want MAs as well, you will get them for all the ministries as we can't separate out just MAH ones.

Should I go ahead and sign all three of you up to receive all MAs?

Thanks Lindsay – looping Shannon in – she will make the final ‘adds’ for you ☺

If you can please also send the answers to the questions that she asked we will make sure all is correct!
As below:

Hi Lindsay

Do Daniela and Matt want to receive all government news releases? If they only want to receive the news releases for your ministry or certain subjects, they should use the link that Dana sent you and sign up for what interests them. If they want everything we send, I can sign them up.

As for media advisories, it’s an all or nothing kind of thing. You guys will receive all the MAs for government if we put you on that list. Is that what you all want?

If yes to this, I need email addresses and phone numbers for each person. For some reason, I can’t find all this info in the global email list.

Thanks,

Shannon

Cheers!

I would like to add a couple of Minister Robinson's staffers to the NR dist. list. They haven't been getting them in their emails when we get them.

Daniela Gardea
Matt Djonlic

As well, they are wondering how long does it usually take for digital team to get the news up on the website – they want to tweet about announcements, without being pre-emptive.

Another question: How do I get the Media Advisories when they go out to media? This is fairly important for me. Do I subscribe to something or do you add me to a dist. list?

NEWS RELEASE

Government takes action to create and sustain exploration and mining jobs

VICTORIA - Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Michelle Mungall has established a B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force that will review exploration and mining in the province and find ways to strengthen this important industry.

"Over the coming months, the B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force will work with First Nations, the mining industry and communities to develop recommendations on possible actions government could take to bring more certainty to the mining sector and create good jobs for people today, tomorrow and beyond," said Mungall. "One of our goals with this review is to find ways to ensure mines in B.C. remain viable when commodity prices fluctuate, so that people can keep working and communities can thrive."

The 12-member task force will include representatives from industry, First Nations, municipal government, an environmental non-governmental organization, labour, post-secondary/training and the financial sector. The task force will submit its final report, including recommendations for legislative and/or regulatory amendments to the minister by Nov. 21, 2018.

Mungall announced the Mining Jobs Task Force in conjunction with Mining Day events at the parliament buildings. Organized by the Mining Association of B.C. (MABC), the annual Mining Day in Victoria brings together 40 delegates from major mining companies, proponents and supplier companies, and provides an opportunity for industry and government to discuss the importance of the sector, while identifying responsible opportunities for growth.

"We look forward to working with the government, First Nations and other important stakeholders on the task force to ensure our industry is globally competitive and well positioned to sustain the mining jobs of today and, importantly, create the mining jobs of tomorrow," said Bryan Cox, president and CEO of MABC. "A strong and thriving B.C. mining industry can continue to play a pivotal leadership role in Canada's transition to a clean tech, lower-carbon future, for the benefit of B.C. families and workers."

"We fully support the provincial government's commitment to the future of mining in British Columbia and the employment it supports," said Michelle Laurie from the United Steelworkers. "The Mining Jobs Task Force will help government find ways to strengthen the sector, so it's able to sustain good, accessible jobs and training opportunities for British Columbians, workers and their families throughout the province."

At today's announcement, Mungall also highlighted the B.C. mining flow-through share tax credit, which was extended in Budget 2018. The previous tax credit expired Dec. 31, 2017.

"In an era when we will need minerals for an electrified economy and for transportation, we want B.C. to be the most attractive jurisdiction in Canada for exploration investment," said Mungall. "The mining flow-through share tax credit is one of the tools we can use to get there."

The Mining Jobs Task Force will look at all aspects of mineral exploration and mining in British Columbia, and provide recommendations to government on measures it might implement to make B.C. the most attractive jurisdiction for investment in this important industry.

Quick Facts:

- * Mineral exploration, mining and related sectors in B.C. provide jobs for more than 30,000 people in communities throughout the province and add over $6 billion to B.C.'s GDP.
- * Currently, more than 1,100 businesses in British Columbia provide supplies or services to mining operations in this province.
- * With rich mineral deposits, B.C. is Canada's largest producer of copper, largest exporter of steelmaking coal and only producer of molybdenum (a key component in steelmaking).
- * Mining is the largest private-sector employer of Indigenous people in Canada and B.C. shares mineral tax revenue with First Nations.

BACKGROUNDER

Mining Jobs Task Force to review B.C.'s exploration and mining sector

Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources Michelle Mungall has established the 12-member B.C. Mining Jobs Task Force. The task force is mandated to work with First Nations, the mining industry and mining communities to make jobs secure and mines viable as commodity prices fluctuate.

The task force will be responsible for providing the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources with recommendations on the following areas:

- * Establishing baseline metrics (e.g. cost of production, carbon intensity, employment statistics, expenditures and revenues, etc.) to measure the current state of the industry and provide an economic impact analysis of the mining sector in B.C.;
- * Skills training and development, so that British Columbians can enter and grow careers in the sector;
- * A co-ordinated provincial approach to geoscience;
- * Potential financial incentive programs and the Province's competitiveness and approach to attract mining investment into B.C.;
- * Potential government actions to ensure the sustainability of existing mines and job protection during commodity cycles;

- * Identify innovation and partnership opportunities that ensure an environmentally sustainable mining sector;
- * Identify best practices in mining jobsite health and safety;
- * Increasing public awareness of the importance of the mining sector to the province and its role in a low-carbon future; and
- * In consultation with the Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources, any other matters arising over the course of the review that the task force considers significant.

Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources assistant deputy minister Peter Robb will chair the task force. The other members of the task force include:

Edie Thome, president and CEO of the Association for Mineral Exploration (AME):

Thome brings a wealth of experience in government relations, permitting and public affairs as well as on-the-ground experience working with stakeholders, First Nations, elected officials and land owners on projects in the resource sector. Through her work, she is familiar with advocacy efforts at both the provincial and federal levels and, specifically, how the legislative and regulatory framework can support or hinder productive, responsible resource development within British Columbia and Canada.

Most recently, Thome was director of environment, permitting and compliance, Aboriginal relations and public affairs at BC Hydro, responsible for permitting and compliance, Aboriginal relations and public affairs for the Site C Clean Energy Project. Prior to that she worked in risk management, environment, operations and customer service for BC Hydro. Her management experience also includes four and a half years as vice-president, customer service, airport operations and corporate communications for Harmony Airways. Thome has brought to AME a keen understanding of leadership in an industry association, gained through her service from 2013 to 2017 as chair of the board of the Canadian Hydropower Association (CHA), a national, non-profit organization, comprised of nearly 50 members - spanning hydropower producers, manufacturers, developers and engineering firms to individuals.

Bryan Cox , president and CEO of the Mining Association of British Columbia (MABC):

As the preeminent voice and advocate for the mining industry in B.C., Cox leads a team actively working with governments, business leaders, First Nations, communities, and the broader public to advocate for and communicate the economic and social value of mining. MABC is focused on keeping the interests of its members and the value of mining forefront in the minds of British Columbians, especially regarding society's transition to a lower carbon economy.

Don McPherson, mayor of Tumbler Ridge:

McPherson moved to Tumbler Ridge in 1981, two years before it ever became a community. Working on the Province's North East Coal Project at the 1,000-person camp, he contracted to Quintette and Bullmoose Mines. In 1986, he moved his business into the downtown core and saw the community rise up around him.

The mayor was first elected to council in 2000 during a byelection. The circumstances surrounding this election have given the mayor deep insight into both the strengths and vulnerabilities of a mining community. As the town emptied during the shutdown of the two mines then-councillor McPherson fought to ensure the community did not close, retained its infrastructure and attracted new residents through a first of its kind mass housing sale. McPherson will bring a unique perspective to the task force as its only municipal representative on issues such as community needs, sustainability, and how government can work with industry to ensure the success of all.

Regina Saimoto, associate dean for Northwest Community College (NWCC), Eastern Region:

Saimoto has played an instrumental role in NWCC's award-winning School of Exploration & Mining and collaborated on curriculum development of the Environmental Monitoring Assistant Program (EMAP) since 2006. Previously, she developed curricula for a number of courses and programs related to the natural resource sector, working with government and industry to identify key competencies. Saimoto has also served as the executive director for the Centre of Training Excellence in Mining (CTEM), the dean of instruction and has taught in numerous natural resources related programs and courses.

Alan Young, director, Materials Efficiency Research Group:

Since 1990, Young has worked as a facilitator and strategist for a wide range of conservation groups, Indigenous organizations, progressive companies and governments across Canada and internationally. His primary focus has been on implementing sustainability and leadership strategies for the extractive sector in North America, Latin America, Europe and Scandinavia. His work includes ethical practices certification programs in the forestry and mining sectors, cross-sector collaboration design and facilitation, large-scale conservation strategies, as well as various legislative reform initiatives in the extractive sectors nationally and internationally. He is chairperson of the International Institute for Sustainable Development, steering committee member of the Initiative for Responsible Mining Assurance, and is a former chair of the Forest Stewardship Council of Canada.

Tom Syer, head of Government Affairs, Teck Resources Limited:

Syer has 20 years of experience in leadership roles within the public and private sectors, working on policy development with specific focuses on natural resource development, climate change and Indigenous relations. He has been involved in the development and roll-out of numerous provincial and federal policy initiatives and, in the private sector, has been responsible for advancing resource development policies and Indigenous relationships, including successfully negotiating comprehensive agreements for the largest wind farm and run-of-river projects in Western Canada.

Additionally, Syer has actively led and participated in numerous multi-lateral initiatives, policy committees and reviews including chairing the Energy and Indigenous Affairs Committees at the Business Council.

Richard Tremblay, Taseko Gibraltar Mine vice-president and general manager:

Tremblay is a seasoned mining professional who has 29 years of experience in the mining industry. He is currently vice-president and general manager of the Gibraltar Mine, located north of Williams Lake and, previous to that, was vice-president of Operations at Coalspur. Tremblay has also been general manager of Teck Coal's Fording River and Line Creek Operations, located in the Elk Valley in southeast British Columbia.

Tremblay holds an MBA from Simon Fraser University and is a professional engineer with a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering from Queen's University. He and his wife Sue have been married for 28 years and have three adult children, all of whom work in the mining industry. The Tremblays live in Williams Lake with their 14 dogs, two cats and three horses.

Michelle Laurie, staff representative for the United Steelworkers - Western Canada:

Laurie has lived and worked throughout British Columbia: on the coast, Vancouver Island, the far northern portion of the province, and in the east-central region. She is a red-seal certified electrician, having served her apprenticeship in a coal mine in Tumbler Ridge. Prior to that, she was employed in Cassiar, in the asbestos mine as a labourer, drill oiler and truck driver. Laurie has been trained in mine rescue (surface) and has also worked as a paramedic in central and southern B.C.

Currently, Laurie is primarily involved in collective bargaining and dispute resolution matters in various sectors of the Steelworkers, as well as delivering training to workers on those issues and others. She is married, with four adult children and five grandchildren, all living in various parts of B.C., and clearly has an ongoing interest the economic security and development of the province.

Earl Graham, staff representative for the United Steelworkers:

Earl Graham is employed as a staff representative for the United Steelworkers and services through-out the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island, Sunshine Coast, as the Interior of British Columbia, and also goes as far north as to include the Yukon. Graham, at a young age, started in the logging industry on Vancouver Island, then transferred to the manufacturing side of the business back on the mainland. He then moved on to serving as a business agent with the IWA in 1996. In 2006 the IWA merged with the United Steelworkers where he then became a USW staff representative. In his capacity of staff representative, he has been involved in many sectors from agriculture, forestry and mining.

More importantly, with respect to this task force, he has serviced in the mining sector for over 10 years at the Quinsam Coal Mine in Campbell River, and Texada Quarrying (A Division of LaFarge), Imperial Limestone Company, and Blubber Bay Quarry (Ash Grove Cement Company), all of which are located on Texada Island. NEWS RELEASE

Intelligent signs to improve traffic flow along Roberts Bank rail corridor

VANCOUVER - People in the Lower Mainland will soon experience reduced traffic delays thanks to six new motorist advisory signs that will be installed at key road and railway crossings in Langley, Surrey and the Township of Langley, as part of the Railway Crossing Information System project.

The signs will complement the railway overpasses constructed in the Langley and Surrey area along the Roberts Bank rail corridor that were built to improve shipments and traffic flow, while enhancing trade with the Asia-Pacific region. Community consultation has shown strong support for the signs, as their purpose is to improve community liveability and help manage increased traffic along the corridor, which has as many as 22 train crossings per day.

"Our government is continuously working to build stronger, more efficient transportation corridors to international markets," said the Honourable Marc Garneau, Minister of Transport. "With this contribution of $300,000 to the intelligent transportation system, we are providing drivers with the information they need to choose the most efficient route, while making the trade corridor more reliable."

Intelligent by design, the advisory signs will operate through a central control system and will provide drivers with real-time train crossing information - indicating if the crossing is open or closed - so drivers can make informed decisions about their travel routes. The signs will specify the train's location and travel direction, enabling drivers to use alternate crossing options at adjacent railway overpasses in order to avoid traffic delays.

"These motorist advisory signs are a great example of how new transportation technology can improve the day-today lives of the people who live in high-traffic, trade-oriented communities," said Minister of Transportation and Infrastructure Claire Trevena. "The Province will continue to work with our partners when it comes to innovating beneficial transportation solutions."

In addition to reducing traffic congestion and minimizing greenhouse gas emissions due to decreased vehicle idling times, the signs will also increase travel efficiency and mobility for emergency vehicles.

"The Railway Crossing Information System is a critical piece of the Roberts Bank Rail Corridor program that will help drivers make informed choices when planning their route to minimize delays by rerouting to one of the eight new overpass crossings," said Kevin Desmond, CEO of TransLink. "This is another example of business and government coming together to improve travel on major road arterials."

"The Port of Vancouver is Canada's largest, keeping our country connected with the global economy," said Cliff Stewart, vice-president, infrastructure at the Vancouver Fraser Port Authority. "We recognize the movement of goods to and from the port can impact communities, and we're always looking at ways to reduce that impact, working with a wide variety of stakeholders. The joint effort and support of all funding partners involved in this project will help to relieve traffic congestion and delays for drivers, while improving community safety and quality of life for daily commuters."

The Railway Crossing Information System project is jointly funded by the Government of B.C., Transport Canada and Vancouver Fraser Port Authority, each providing $300,000, in addition to $2.9 million from TransLink. The total project cost is $3.8 million, which includes development of the central control system and a recently issued civil-works contract valued at $1.7 million, awarded to Crown Contracting Limited from Surrey. The project is expected to be complete and in operation by December 2018.

We aren't receiving email from within the HUB. It's exactly like when we had the last server failure. I hit the "Send Email" button and it looks like it's doing it, then nada in the inbox. It's happening for users both in-office and using VPN.

Hi Shannon,

Below is the email I'm going to send the shop this morning. Please review and let me know what you think or if I'm missing anything. Want to keep it short and sweet(ish). Most of the shops/managers/directors have done this before.

As discussed yesterday, here are timelines.

- Shops get us materials by end of day Jan. 31.
- Content draft from you to me: End of day Feb. 2... This is where you have all info gathered, not polished, under the categories provided. Bullets would be fine.
- Final draft to me: Feb. 6, noon. This will need a short intro about this government's priorities, which you can find in that update from last September and in the GCPE Style Guide, as discussed.

I understand these are super tight timelines but I'm confident that you will do a great job. And bear in mind, this will be a lot shorter than previous versions, maybe by 25-50%. But the content will determine that.

Thanks,
Grant

Good morning!

You can add new sections if you have new overarching goals. If you share areas of responsibility with other ministries, please co-ordinate the update with your partner ministry (ministries).

Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing

NEWS RELEASE

New homes for vulnerable people in Richmond

RICHMOND - The Province is partnering with the City of Richmond to build 40 new homes with 24/7 support services to address the immediate needs of people in the community struggling to find a stable place to live.

"Homelessness is a critical issue in Richmond and across the province, which has put a strain on our communities and our families for too long," said Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "Our government understands that housing is the heart of community. We are focused on working with local governments to build homes where people have the safe foundation they need to rebuild their lives."

Each studio home will include a self-contained kitchen and bathroom. The combination of housing and support services will give people the opportunity to transition from temporary housing to secure, longer-term options.

RainCity Housing will operate at the homes and will be onsite 24/7 to connect residents with support services, as well as provide them with daily meals, life-skills training, and access to primary health and mental health services. The homes will also feature accessible designs for people living with disabilities and provide residents with a shared amenity space.

"Since the inception of the Affordable Housing Strategy in 2007, the city has been instrumental in the creation of over 1,500 affordable units in the community," said Malcolm Brodie, mayor of Richmond. "The proposed modular, supportive housing fills a gap in the housing continuum and helps to support individuals in need to achieve stable and permanent housing."

The City of Richmond is contributing use of the land at 7300 Elmbridge Way for the proposed homes for up to five years.

Project partners will hold a community meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 28, 2018, from 3:30-7:30 p.m. at the Richmond Public Library - Brighthouse (Main) branch located at 7700 Minoru Gate.

Information and an online survey to hear community feedback will also be available on LetsTalkRichmond.ca from Monday, Feb. 19 until Sunday, March 4, 2018.

Quick Facts:

- * In the last Metro Vancouver homeless count, homelessness increased in the City of Richmond by 84% since 2014.
- * The Government of B.C. is providing approximately $5.9 million towards the project.
- * This is part of a provincewide investment of $291 million to build 2,000 homes around the province and more than $170 million over three years to provide 24/7 staffing and support services.
- * Through this program, more than 1,200 new homes for people most in need have started development throughout the province.
- * The Province will be working with local governments and community partners to develop a Homelessness Action Plan to reduce homelessness through permanent housing and services.

Hello,

I am a writer working on behalf of the office of the Honourable Darryl Plecas, Speaker and MLA for Abbotsford South. I'm prepping some materials for the upcoming Langley Firefighters' dinner and I'm hoping you could provide me with details:

1. A copy of the invitation sent to the Speaker's office with the date and time of the event
2. Any details (such as a theme of the dinner) or an itinerary that you may have, including a list of VIPs attending

Any information you can provide for me this morning would be much appreciated.

Hi all

We have fixed the bug found last week, where you could not approve a 3rd party media advisory or news release.

Subject: Advisory news types - approval work around....

Hi Shannon - so, here are the steps to be able to approve an external org release or MA etc. under the advisory news type:

1. Once you've created a draft using your normal steps 2. Select a ministry 3. Save 4. Approve the release 5. Unselect the ministry
NOTE: if you send it to yourself at any point after this, the email (like below) will have that ministry as the lead 4. manually change that in the email to match what's in the org block field 5. the PDF does not show the ministry 6. the distributed version does not show the ministry (see attached):

Hope that helps..

We'll advise on the ETA on a permanent fix once we know.

Thanks,
Anne

STATEMENT

Statement on the annual Women's Memorial March for murdered and missing women and girls

VANCOUVER - Premier John Horgan, MLA for Vancouver-Mount Pleasant Melanie Mark, and Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation Scott Fraser have issued the following statement to acknowledge the annual Women's Memorial March in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside:

"On February 14th, thousands gather on the streets of the Downtown Eastside, on the unceded territories of the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh people, to remember and honour the lives of women and girls from this community who have died or have gone missing, and to support their loved ones. It is with heartfelt regret that we cannot physically be there with you today. We stand with you in heart and spirit.

"The annual Women's Memorial March is a chance to come together, grieve the loss and honour the lives of beloved sisters, mothers, daughters, aunties, community members and friends. For us, it is also a call to action and one of the reasons we have committed to fully adopt and implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the calls to action of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada.

"This memorial march - led by families, community members, activists and organizations working tirelessly over the past 27 years - has ensured that we do not forget the women, girls and stolen sisters who have gone missing from the Downtown Eastside and other parts of B.C. We honour this commitment and passion for justice, shining a light on an issue too long unresolved.

"Too many women and girls have died in our province. In particular, Indigenous women in B.C. are nearly three times more likely to be victims of domestic violence, murder, and other violent crimes than non-Indigenous women. This must change. Gendered violence, poverty and racism are issues we all must confront in our communities.

"We want to affirm that these women and girls are not forgotten. Their lives matter and their legacy matters. Every woman and child deserves to feel safe and protected. We will continue to walk beside all of you, working to create a future free of racism and violence."

Right. But the problem is that when I add an element to the page, it's not applying the styles consistently. I'll select the text, apply the "normal" style, and nothing happens. For example, on this page: <https://gcpe.gov.bc.ca/411/Pages/Communication%20Templates.aspx?PageView=Shared&InitialTabId=Ribbon.WebPartPage&VisibilityContext=WSSWebPartPage&>

I've selected the text for the linked text "Briefing Note template" and try to apply the "normal" style to it and nothing happens. It's currently in Veranda 8 pt but should be Veranda 9 pt. The same happens when I select the body text in that cell. I can't change the font size or line spacing to look consistent with the rest of the page.

Who owns the SharePoint? Maybe I can get them to give the permissions back?

Hi Shannon,

For editing links, when you click into the link are you given the box to edit the link near the top of the page? Or is that tab not showing for you?

There should also be a similar tab visible when you have selected inside a table cell, that will give you options to change the table cell.

It appears that changing font face and size is disabled - likely to ensure that the sharepoint sites have a consistent look between pages. If you want to change the look of headings or text you would need to use the Styles or Markup styles options.

Thanks Thomas! Robyn Croft also said that there shouldn't be any permissions set, so thanks for looking into that for me. I'll try clearing the styles.

If the styles aren't applying to text - you will need to clear out any existing styles on that text and then try again.

You can do this with a button next to the text colour options.

This will reset the text to a default style. Then you will be able to apply the normal style, and it should show up as the same size as other items with the normal style.

The service desk manages the Sharepoint at this point, but as far as we are aware there shouldn't have been any permission changes recently. So we'll look into it further, and see if we can get those permissions restored or find the reason that they were changed..

<https://gcpe.gov.bc.ca/411/Pages/Writing%20and%20Editorial%20Services.aspx> (and any of the subpages/linked pages under this URL).

So I can do some editing, but I can no longer change things like fonts, format tables properly, update links properly, etc.

Here's the error I get when I try to change the font style:

So I can't reformat our page to appear uniform, the page decides how it can look and I can only choose from quick styles. It's super frustrating. This happens on any page I try to edit, not just the ones I linked above, but the ones above (and their subpages/links) are the ones I need to update. A few months ago, I was doing all of these formatting changes without any issue.

STATEMENT

Statement on the annual Women's Memorial March for murdered and missing women

Premier John Horgan, MLA for Vancouver-Mount Pleasant Melanie Mark and Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation Scott Fraser have issued the following statement to acknowledge the annual Women's Memorial March in Vancouver's Downtown Eastside:

"On February 14th, thousands gather on the streets of the Downtown Eastside, on the unceded territories of the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh people, to remember and honour the lives of women and girls from this community who have died or have gone missing, and to support their loved ones. It is with heartfelt regret that we cannot physically be there with you today. We stand with you in heart and spirit.

"The annual Women's Memorial March is a chance to come together, grieve the loss and honour the lives of beloved sisters, mothers, daughters, aunts, community members and friends. For us, it is also a call to action and why we have committed to fully adopt and implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the calls to action of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada.

"This memorial march - led by families, community members, activists and organizations working tirelessly over the past 27 years - has ensured that we do not forget the women and girls, stolen sisters who were lost from the Downtown Eastside and other parts of B.C. We honour this commitment and passion for justice, shining a light on an issue too long unresolved.

"Too many women and girls from vulnerable communities have died in our province. In particular, Indigenous women in B.C. are nearly three times more likely to be victims of domestic violence, murder, and other violent crimes than non-Indigenous women. This must change. Gendered violence, poverty and racism are issues we all must confront in our communities.

"We want to affirm that these women and girls are not forgotten. Their lives matter and their legacy matters. Every woman and child deserves to feel safe and protected. We will continue to walk beside all of you, working to create a future free of racism and violence."

There are a bunch of changes so a couple of us have looked it over. A draft for approval is coming shortly.

A couple questions:

1. Is the usage of East and West Hastings more as street addresses or will these housing units be known as that (as in is it a proper name for the unit) going forward?
2. Is the Portland Hotel Society is now known as PHS Community Services Society?

Thanks!

Can you clarify something for me?

This sentence: "As the minister responsible for WorkSafeBC, Bains requested that they consider the need for additional resources to support both workers and employers through the WAO and EAO, which resulted in the $3-million annual budget increase."

Who is "they" in this sentence? The ministry? Would it be simpler to say:

"As the minister responsible for WorkSafeBC, Bains requested additional resources to support both workers and employers through the WAO and EAO, which resulted in the $3-million annual budget increase."

Two questions about this:

1. Is this numbering a problem for us that I'm missing or just curiosity?
2. Is there a reason we are still maintaining the spreadsheet? I'm pretty sure that we can ask the HUB team for the number of releases we send in a year for estimates. They would just pull a report from the database.

Subject: FW: Somethng funny with automatic numbering

Good morning, Techie Friends –

Our automatic numbering for releases appears to have re-set to 1 or 2, like it does at the beginning of the calendar year.

AEST is the best example I can find:

Our most-recent FYF on Feb. 19 had a number that looked like this:

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0040-000217

Then the three for this morning's run all apparently flipped back to number 2 for the year, even though the 'total' number at the end increased:

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000242

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000244

Advanced Education, Skills and Training 2018AEST0002-000245

Advanced Ed wasn't the only one -

The FLNR IB for 9 a.m. started over at 1 for NEWS-16438 /85201

Understanding winter feeding of wild ungulates

TAC and TRAN flipped back to number 2

The good news is it looks like we still have a unique identifier, because the total – the second part of the queue number, keeps increasing.

(I would not have noticed if I had not pasted the three for AEST into the spreadsheet, and thought that perhaps you now have the ability to turn back time.)

STATEMENT

Premier John Horgan's statement on Lunar New Year

VICTORIA - Premier John Horgan has released the following statement in celebration of Lunar New Year on Feb. 16, 2018:

"On Lunar New Year, families throughout British Columbia celebrate by sharing a meal, exchanging red envelopes, and preparing for a new year with new opportunities and hope for the future.

"As the Year of the Rooster comes to an end and the Year of the Dog begins, British Columbia has much to look forward to.

"This year, B.C. will strengthen existing friendships and build trust in new partnerships. We will grow our economy by improving our relationships with our international trade partners, and supporting B.C. businesses. We will make life better for people, and provide opportunity and a better future for our children.

"I wish all those celebrating the Lunar New Year - including Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, Singaporean and many other communities - a prosperous Year of the Dog.

"May the new year bring you and your family good luck, good health and prosperity."

According to the WES style guide, Parliament Buildings is only capped in MAs. Are we now departing from both style guides on this?

Nothing here is really wrong -

In the lede – added Tuesday

We'll let them have caps on Parliament Buildings, even tho' it's not CP style.

6th graf – don't need comma after video-conferencing

7th paragraph with quote – good on you for leaving the caps on.

End of 2nd-last graf – how about "moving to a university."

Added a comma in the last graf after colleges.

In Bowman quote, how about an "s" on credential? But it is an approved quote and it's not wrong.

NEWS RELEASE

Celebrating BC Colleges Day

VICTORIA - Tuesday, Feb. 27 is a day to recognize the diverse range of affordable, accessible and applied education programs that B.C. colleges offer students in every corner of the province.

Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training Melanie Mark was joined by post-secondary students and college presidents at the Parliament Buildings in Victoria to celebrate the second annual BC Colleges Day. The provincial proclamation recognizes the vital role that colleges have in the post-secondary system.

"Our colleges are an important part of our education ecosystem," said Mark. "Education is a powerful tool that puts people on pathways to opportunity, employment and better lives. I'm proud to help celebrate BC Colleges Day."

B.C. is home to 11 public colleges, with more than 60 campuses and learning centres throughout the province. With over 250 academic, trades, technology and vocational programs, public colleges serve more than 125,000 students annually, plus thousands more through continuing education.

"B.C. college graduates are highly skilled by the time they complete their credential because of the depth of experience they get through their program, which includes applied learning, and real-world, hands-on experience," said John Bowman, BC Colleges chair. "Over 90% of our graduates are employed within six months of graduation."

B.C. colleges have also responded to demand for flexible delivery options by offering options such as online delivery, video conferencing, and hands-on learning through practicums and apprenticeships.

"As a single mom, it was important for me to be able to go to school in my home community," said Jaimie Davis, a Gitksan/Nisga'a second-year student in Northwest Community College's Freda Diesing School of Northwest Coast Art. "Northwest Community College offered me a way to do both. Because I can take care of my family and still get an education, it helps me build my career as an Indigenous woman."

Over the next decade, 917,000 job openings are expected due to a combination of retirement and economic growth. About eight out of 10 jobs will require some post-secondary education or training: 42% will require a diploma, certificate or apprenticeship training, while 36% will require a bachelor, graduate, or first-professional degree and/or significant work experience. Many of those bachelor degrees are started at B.C. colleges, where students can take their first two years of university-transfer credits before moving on to a university.

BC Colleges is an association of British Columbia's public, post-secondary colleges. The role of the organization is to facilitate collaboration between the colleges, so they can more effectively produce a well-educated and highly skilled workforce for British Columbia.

Hi Shannon,

Could you update the 411 with this newly tweaked narrative version of the NR-BG template please. Before you do that, can you tweak the BG to give it the B.C. sunrise logo? I attempted it but it came out with the second page of the NR (Quick Facts, Learn More sections) with the sunrise as well, which I didn't want.

If this is too tricky or impossible, don't spend much time on getting the sunrise on the BG. Attached here, as well as on the LAN in the templates folder.

NEWS RELEASE
Winning B.C.-led supercluster bid to create thousands of B.C. jobs

VICTORIA - British Columbia's innovation ecosystem received a huge boost today with the selection of a B.C.-based digital supercluster consortium to share a portion of $950 million in federal innovation funding, announced Jobs, Trade and Technology Minister Bruce Ralston.

"Innovation is the key to modernizing our traditional industries and keeping B.C. competitive on a global scale," said Ralston. "This digital supercluster will not only help grow our tech sector but also leverage the Province's strengths to advance economic opportunities in sectors like natural resources, health, education and manufacturing. The B.C. government is proud to have supported this winning bid which stands to create tens of thousands of good, family-supporting jobs for the people of B.C."

Led by TELUS, Microsoft, Teck, Canfor, Shoppers Drug Mart, Providence Health Care and the University of British Columbia, the bid is supported by the BC Tech Association and over 200 other partners including 25 post-secondary institutions. Canada's Digital Technology Supercluster has over $500 million in committed private sector innovation funding for the initiative.

"Our government is making a multi-million dollar investment in 2,900 additional tech spaces for students," said Melanie Mark, Minister of Advanced Education, Skills and Training. "More home-grown tech talent will help to meet the demand from the growing tech sector for a skilled workforce."

"This supercluster funding will reap numerous spin-off benefits for all people in B.C. so they can take part in the 21st-century digital economy," said Jinny Sims, Minister of Citizens' Services. "As committed in the BC Tech Strategy, we're taking steps to ensure that people in all areas of the province have access to high-speed internet so they can benefit from the educational, health, business and recreational opportunities available online that are essential in today's economy."

The supercluster intends to maximize B.C.'s world-class talent and geographic advantage as both the gateway to Asia and partner in the Cascadia Innovation Corridor with Washington State.

"Canada's Digital Technology Supercluster will help B.C. companies develop new technologies that will boost the innovation ecosystem by creating opportunities that benefit many sectors of our economy," said B.C. Innovation Commissioner Alan Winter. "This superb opportunity will also help our tech sector build and leverage a stronger network that will facilitate greater collaboration between industry and academia in our province."

"This is truly an exciting day for technology innovation in Canada and a game changer for B.C.," said BC Tech Association president and CEO, Jill Tipping. "The supercluster consortium will accelerate the development of innovation in key industries, will fast forward Canada's digital economy and puts B.C. on the map as a global leader. We are looking forward to working with the Province as an active investor and partner in this exciting endeavour."

Over a ten-year period, the supercluster is projected to fund more than 100 collaborative projects involving over 1,000 organizations to create thousands of new jobs that provide skilled and long-term employment opportunities for people across B.C. and Canada.

Quick Facts:

* The B.C. government has committed nearly $1.3 billion for research and innovation in B.C. over the last ten years through various ministries, programs and investments.

* In February 2018, the Province appointed Alan Winter as B.C.'s first Innovation Commissioner as an advocate for our tech and innovation sector in Ottawa and abroad.

* The Government of British Columbia and the State of Washington have signed a memorandum of understanding to develop the Cascadia Innovation Corridor to grow cross-border innovation.

Subject: Two HUB questions
Date: Tuesday, January 23, 2018 2:42:26 PM

Hello ladies!

Question 1: Back in October of last year, there was a known issue of the HUB going to sleep and not putting out scheduled releases if no one has logged into it for a certain length of time. While I have never experienced this, I've been informed that Linda has a few times, most recently, within the last month or so. Does this issue have an ETA for resolution? As I say, it seems that it has only happened to Linda and only on the weekends by all accounts.

Question 2: Before Christmas, I emailed Carolynn about getting access to the HUB's media lists. Is there a way to send those to me in Excel or Word or a searchable/copy-able format? First, I need them in order to do an update of those lists for our Outlook workaround when the HUB goes down or we need to send something outside the system. The lists we currently have are totally out of date now.

And second, I also wanted to do a crosscheck that when we send something to the PROVI list, it indeed goes to every media list we have for B.C. and that we aren't missing anyone. It seems that back when we used Marketwired, if we didn't specify that we wanted to add someone to both a community AND the PROVI list, they only got added to one or the other, not necessarily both. I'm not sure how we ported over those list from MW to the HUB when that transition took place, but I'd like to make sure that the PROVI list is complete.

Thanks in advance for your help!

Subject: WES comm materials list
Date: Wednesday, January 17, 2018 2:24:00 PM

The documents I sent were fact sheets requested for the 2014 Asia tour and the 2015 provincial budget tour. The purpose of both were to pare down and provide relevant information for the cities included on these tours. For the budget tour, I was also asked to research what announcements/investments had been made in the region by government. To note: our unit used to also provide speaking notes for the short speech events for all Asia tours prior to 2013.

Communication materials (a historical list)

- Keynotes (15-30 minutes): including, but not limited to Truck loggers, economic forums/summits, chamber of commerce, budget tour boilerplates, Roadbuilders, UBCM, AME Mineral Roundup, etc.
- Short speeches (3-10 minutes): including, but not limited to the Premier's Awards and other ceremonial events funding announcements, infrastructure openings/ground breakings, fundraising events, community events, international events/visits, MOU signings, etc.
- Fact sheets and prep materials: for speeches not requiring full notes or for international tours (e.g. Asia, US, Europe)
- Radio/video scripts: for the CKNW weekly address, messages/scripts for videos sent to events the PO cannot attend
- Messages and letters: messaging for printed brochures, programs, awards, certificates, magazines, etc.
- Various editing/fact checking duties: we also helped give a final edit to the budget and throne speeches given in the House
- Premier's introduction: some events would request we provide an introduction of the Premier for the emcee tailored to audience/event
- Photo/video cut lines
- Premier's statements

- Op-eds

I think this covers most of what we did. I didn't include much of the work we did on the Olympics, since that was a different beast on its own, but I will mention that our unit was recognized for that work at the Premier's Awards.
