Mr Steven Brown
Deputy Minister of Health
Government of British Columbia

Victoria BC V8W 3C8

Dear Mr Brown:

Re: CMPA 2016 Membership Fees

In keeping with the CMPA's commitment to transparency, I am writing with a three-fold purpose:

- The first is outline changes we will be making to our regional fee structure for 2016 membership fees;
- The second purpose is to provide the 2016 fee requirement by region and to provide an estimate of the specific impact in British Columbia; and
- My third objective is to re-affirm the CMPA's commitment to containing the costs of medical liability, including working collaboratively with governments and medical associations to address the underlying cost drivers.

CMPA-PROVIDED MEDICAL LIABILITY PROTECTION

An effective medical liability system is an essential component of a well-functioning healthcare system and it:

- Enables physicians to deliver care with the confidence their interests and those of their patients are protected;
- Contributes to safe medical care and the prevention of harm;
- Provides appropriate compensation to patients harmed by negligent medical care; and
- Holds physicians and other healthcare professionals accountable for their actions through a fair process

The CMPA has a long track record of providing Canadian physicians with the medical liability protection they and their patients require. This protection enables physicians to focus on delivering safe care and meeting the clinical needs of their patients and, in so doing, helps to avoid the costs associated with unnecessary tests and other forms of "defensive medicine". Physicians recognize that, as evidenced by the almost $240 million paid as compensation to patients in 2014, this protection is also vital for patients.

CONFIDENTIAL

The CMPA is committed to employing our knowledge and expertise to contribute to safe medical care and the reduction in patient harm. We actively collaborate with other organizations to identify risks and their causes and to develop and disseminate risk reduction strategies to our membership. This effort benefits physicians, patients and the Canadian healthcare system. In 2014, 26,000 physicians and other healthcare providers attended a CMPA-provided educational session and tens of thousands more accessed the wealth of risk management information available through our publications and web site. These healthcare professionals rely on the CMPA to provide evidence-based recommendations to reduce patient harm.

We also recognize that physicians practice within a system and that, to be truly effective, improvements in safe care must address system-level issues. The Association has long been engaged in championing safe care initiatives, including most recently as a key partner in the Canadian Patient Safety Institute's National Patient Safety Consortium. In 2015, working in partnership with the Society of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and others, we have launched a multi-year initiative to reduce maternal and fetal harm during child birth. We are confident this will reduce the incidence of harm and, by extension, the significant costs associated with providing care for neurologically compromised infants.

However, as I will address shortly, the costs of providing medical liability protection to Canadian physicians are rising and these increases place pressure on the CMPA's financial position and on the fees that we collect to pay for those costs. This is the case in British Columbia.

FEE REGIONS

Prior to 2001, the CMPA established our member fees on a national basis. However, in 2000, it became evident that diverging cost trends in various parts of the country threatened the overall equity of such an approach and the Association adopted a regional approach to membership fees commencing with the 2001 fees. Based on the underlying cost structures, three fee regions were established: Ontario, Quebec and the "Rest of Canada". While our services were offered across the country, the CMPA committed to assigning medical liability protection costs to the region in which they were incurred. The Association has remained true to this objective of having each region pay its own costs and to avoid any subsidization between regions.

The regional approach to the allocation of fees has worked reasonably well, with the members in a given region paying for the medical liability protection costs in that region in a generally equitable way. However, within the Rest of Canada region, the forecast cost trends are diverging and these trends threaten the CMPA's commitment to an equitable allocation of the costs of medical liability protection.

Mr Stephen Brown

29 May 2015

Accordingly and with a view to ensuring a fair and sustainable fee model across the country, the Association has recently completed a comprehensive analysis of these emerging trends and the existing regional structure. In so doing, we have confirmed the appropriateness of retaining Ontario and Quebec as separate fee regions and have determined no changes are necessary in the regional structure as it relates to those two provinces. In the Rest of Canada, the forecast cost of protection in British Columbia and Alberta is expected to significantly outpace that in the other provinces and territories in this region, necessitating changes to the Rest of Canada region.

In considering the analysis, the CMPA's elected Council has taken into account, amongst other factors, the following considerations:

- The current Rest of Canada region has worked well and the allocation of fees has generally been fair between physicians in the various provinces that comprise this region. A breakdown of net asset positions shows that, when viewed over the 14 years since regionalization, the costs of protection have been appropriately allocated. This provides a sound foundation upon which to make any adjustments.
- Within the broad concept of mutuality, the CMPA believes members should generally pay their fair share of the costs of medical liability protection. With the cost trends in British Columbia and Alberta beginning to diverge significantly from those in other provinces, adjustments are required to ensure continued fairness.
- The CMPA must retain fee regions that are sustainable while, at the same time, seeking an equitable allocation of medical liability protection costs. This requires sufficient members in a region to support credible actuarial estimates and sufficient resources to withstand the inherent volatility associated with medical liability protection.

After very careful consideration, the CMPA Council has decided to divide, with effect for the 2016 membership fees, the current Rest of Canada region into two separate, stand-alone fee regions:

- British Columbia and Alberta
- Saskatchewan, Manitoba, the Atlantic provinces and the territories.

This proactive response to emerging trends will support the continuation of an equitable allocation of medical liability protection costs amongst our 91,000 members. In setting the net asset position for these two new regions, the Association has taken into account every revenue and expense since 2001, thereby ensuring the continued application of our policy of not having one region pay for costs in another. These updated net asset positions and the estimated protection costs for the new regions will be used in our 2016 fees.

2016 MEMBERSHIP FEES

The CMPA provides occurrence-based protection which means members' protection extends from the date care was provided, irrespective of when the claim is made. In determining our fees, the CMPA seeks to collect from members in a given year, the costs of medical liability protection resulting from that care delivered in that year. Recognizing the full costs of such protection will not be known for 35 years or more, the CMPA bases its membership fees on an actuarial estimate of the protection costs and aims to collect those costs from members (discounted to reflect investment returns).

As a not-for-profit mutual defence organization, the CMPA aims to hold at least one dollar of assets for each discounted dollar of liabilities. When the assets in any one region are significantly greater than the estimated liabilities and with an objective of not accruing more assets than it expects to require, the CMPA will generally reduce the membership fees that might otherwise be collected in that region. Conversely, when the estimated liabilities exceed the assets in a region, the Association will adjust the membership fee to address such a negative funding position. These adjustments are added to or subtracted from the estimated occurrence year protection cost to form the fees to be collected from members. In this regard, the CMPA's membership fees can be depicted in the following formula:

$$\text{Aggregate Regional Fee} = \text{Protection cost} \pm \text{Fee adjustment}$$

The CMPA estimates the discounted protection cost for care delivered in 2016 in British Columbia and Alberta will be $126.9 million; this is approximately 10% higher than the estimated protection costs for 2015 ($114.4 million) and this increase highlights the need to undertake a range of system reforms to contain the growth of such costs.

As of 31 December 2014, the net asset position of the newly formed British Columbia and Alberta fee region is -$158.8 million; this position results from assigned assets of $556.6 million and an estimated liability of $715.4 million. The liability reflects the expected costs of unpaid claims resulting from care provided prior to 31 December 2014. This negative position means the CMPA needs to collect additional funds, above the estimated protection cost, so that we can return to a full funded position.

In determining the pace at which this return to full funding should be achieved, the CMPA seeks to achieve an appropriate balance between several factors, including:

- The requirement to maintain a sustainable financial model that provides physicians and their patients with confidence the CMPA is able to provide them protection and, in the case of patients shown to have injured by negligent care, appropriate compensation;
- A commitment not to defer the payment of already incurred liabilities to future generations of physicians

Mr Stephen Brown

29 May 2015

- Recognition that increased medical liability protection costs place additional funding pressure on both physicians and the healthcare system, particularly at a time when healthcare resources are constrained.

Accordingly, the CMPA Council has set a goal to returning to full funding in the British Columbia and Alberta fee region by 2020, believing this five-year pathway will most appropriately amortize the deficit payments. In view of the potential volatility of expenditure patterns and recognizing the impact of fee increases, the Association will take a measured approach to the 2016 fee adjustment, adding $29.4 million to the fees otherwise collectable. Accordingly, the sum of the protection cost ($126.9 million) and the fee adjustment (29.4 million) produces a 2016 aggregate fee requirement for the British Columbia and Alberta region of $156.3 million. On a per member basis, this aggregate fee results in a CMPA membership fee of $6,335 per physician, about 6.5% higher than the $5,948 applied in 2015.

The Association is forecasting our 2016 membership in British Columbia to be just under 13,000 physicians (including residents), which would indicate that our members in the province will pay approximately $80-85 million in medical liability protection costs. The actual amount may vary slightly from this estimate as a result of variances in the composition and growth in membership. I recognize that the impact of these fees on the provincial reimbursement program will be influenced by several other factors as agreed to by the Ministry of Health and Doctors of BC.

COST CONTAINMENT

The CMPA recognizes that, while effective medical liability protection is an essential element of the healthcare system, the costs associated with providing such protection draw on resources that are needed elsewhere in that system. We are fully committed to reducing those cost components that are under our control and we have already made tangible progress in this regard. For example, by incorporating the secure electronic transfer of legal documents and by working with legal firms to advance legal project management, the Association has reduced our 2014 expenditures on legal services by approximately $12 million from the preceding year. Rigorous cost containment and the innovative use of technologies has enabled the Association to reduce our operating cost, while providing services to an increasing number of members.

However, with compensation to patients being the largest single component of medical liability protection costs and the one that is rising most rapidly, the Association believes a collaborative approach between governments, medical associations, the CMPA and other interested parties is required to contain this growth, while at the same time appropriately meeting the needs of injured patients. I am hopeful that, with a modest expansion of its mandate and membership (to include the CMPA), the committee formed under the province's most recent physician master agreement can play an important role in this regard. As a step in this effort, I will be writing to the Committee Co-Chairs to

I look forward to exploring potential next steps in ensuring physicians can continue to practice with confidence, knowing their medical liability interests are protected, in an effective and efficient manner, by the CMPA.

Dear Mr Patterson:

Re: CMPA Matters

I am writing as a follow up to our 18 September 2014 meeting with respect to a number of issues related to the Canadian Medical Protective Association and I am appreciative of the time that you were able to devote to the meeting. I am very grateful to Alan Seckel and his team at Doctors of British Columbia for their work in setting up the meeting and for their engagement in examining how we can work collaboratively to improve healthcare in the province.

I am hopeful I conveyed that, while the CMPA's occurrence-based protection does result in challenges in the estimation of costs in the short term, it provides physicians and their patients with confidence that, in the unfortunate event that harm results from the care provided, their interests will be appropriately protected. This confidence is essential to physicians' ability to deliver effective, efficient and safe care and it is a vital component of the healthcare system. Given the volatility in short term projections, it is important that we take a longer term view to system costs; inherent in such an approach is the willingness to make prudent financial decisions that do not over-react (or under-react) to temporarily surpluses or deficits in the CMPA's financial position.

I recognize that we covered a good deal of ground in terms of the Association's financial model and the underlying medical liability trends and, if the CMPA can provide you and your staff with additional information, please do not hesitate to identify what you need. I believe it is important that our key stakeholders, including both provincial medical associations and ministries of health understand the financial model so that discussions that you and others may have about are well-informed. I was very grateful for your interest during our meeting.

I recognize the potential challenges associated with implementing potential reforms that might be undertaken to reduce transaction and other potentially unnecessary costs within the medical liability system. As I outlined, we believe there are achievable steps that can be taken to reduce those costs without unfairly impacting the compensation available to patients injured as a result of negligent medical care. Some of these reforms can be undertaken relatively quickly and will produce initial benefits and a sense of momentum; others will require both more time and a concerted effort on the part of several parties, including the Government of British Columbia. It is the CMPA's views that such effort is required if medical liability costs are to be contained so that these much needed resources can be assigned to patient care. I look forward to having the opportunity to explore these potential reforms with you and your staff in more detail as we further develop our proposals and you consider how the potential initiatives might be implemented in British Columbia.

While time constraints precluded anything more than a very preliminary discussion, I was encouraged by your interest and that of Doctors of British Columbia in how we might collaborate to improve the safety of care. The CMPA believes that the most effective means of both containing medical liability protection costs and supporting our members is to reduce the harm from care. Contributing to safe care is a centerpiece of our renewed Strategic Plan and I am personally committed to advancing our efforts in this regard. I am hopeful that we can return more substantively to this issue in a future meeting.

I believe the CMPA can make a meaningful contribution to our shared objectives of safe care and contained costs and I look forward to further exploring potential collaborations in more detail.

Dear Donna Young:

Re: Continuing Medical Education (CME) Fund and Canadian
Medical Protective Association (CMPA) Dues Rebate Fund

Payments of $24,161,250 will be deposited directly into the bank accounts of the British Columbia Medical Association effective May 1, 1999. These payments are in accordance with the Renewed Working Agreement and the Amendment To The Commission Request For Changes In The Budget Of The Commission For The Fiscal Year 1998/99 to fund the CME at $6,600,000 and the CMPA Dues Rebate at $17,561,250 million for fiscal 1999/2000.

The payment of the CMPA Dues Rebate is the same as 1998/99, as there is no CMPA dues increase over the previous year.

I am waiting for the quarterly report requested in my letter of November 20, 1998 to determine whether the $375,000 advanced to the CME Fund on May 1, 1998, for travel costs by NIA (Northern Isolation Allowance) physicians, needs to be replenished.

Dear Donna Young:

Re: Continuing Medical Education (CME) Fund and Canadian
Medical Protective Association (CMPA) Dues Rebate Fund

Payments totalling $29.1 million will be deposited directly into the bank accounts of the British Columbia Medical Association (BCMA) effective May 1, 2001.

The payment includes $22.5 million for CMPA. Ms. Anne Keeble, Controller for the BCMA, has advised that this would cover the estimated cash flow for 2001/2002. If more funding is required, please advise Peter Yeung or myself. The limit of the government's contribution to the CMPA Dues Rebate Fund is $25.5 million, for 2001/2002, in accordance with the Working Agreement.

The remaining $6.6 million is the government's contribution to fund the CME for 2001/2002.

Dear Anne Keeble:

Re: Canadian Medical Protective Association (CMPA) Dues Rebate
and Continuing Medical Education (CME) Funding - 2004/05

2004/05

CMPA = HJM

A cheque in the amount of $26.725 million will be deposited in the British Columbia Medical Association's bank account on May 11, 2004. This payment includes $20 million for CMPA and $6.725 million for CME for 2004/05.

With respect to CMPA, the final requirements for 2004/05 will not be known for several months. The following table summarizes CMPA funding:

Description	2003/04	2004/05
Requirement	$21.1 million	$21 million
Approved funding (to date)	$15.0 million	$20 million
Balance (from prior years' surplus)	$ 6.1 million	n/a
Balance (to be paid if required)	n/a	$ 1 million

As the 2004 CMPA fee schedule reflects decreases in all but two of 63 "Type of Work" codes, with decreases ranging from 1.96% to 19.60%, funding of $20 million is provided at this time for the 2004/05 CMPA requirements.

If more funding is required for CMPA, please advise Laurie Stein (250 952-2048).
