Hi Amanda,

The Northern Sentinel has come to us with several questions about Mill Memorial opening. Below are the majority of the answers (will send him a follow up when we get the answers to the rest of his questions, as he has sent them in a few batches). He is hoping to get what we can send him now, however...

Any concerns with the below? We are essentially referring to the business plan still to come for the bulk of it.

Request

Am following up on last week's new Mills Memorial Hospital announcement.

And here are some questions ...

- With the new concept plan now accepted, how can we obtain a copy?
- In the past, the North West Regional Hospital District has indicated it would pay for all of the business plan's costs with it then being reimbursed for a portion once the capital project was approved. I don't believe that's the case now. Would this be correct?
- The new Mills is to be classified as a Level 3 trauma centre. Could you provide a list of services a Level 3 trauma centre provides?
- In his remarks, Adrian Dix said a new Mills would have specific services and be attuned (I'm paraphrasing a bit here ...) to the regional indigenous population. Could you expand on that? Alternatively, can you provide examples of where this has occurred in other newly-constructed hospitals in B.C.?
- There's been some local speculation that with a new Mills, Terrace will also be a base for an air ambulance service. Can you comment on that?
- When does the public get a first look at architectural drawings, concepts, etc.? And how will public comment be gathered?
- Is this to be a PPP enterprise?

Thanks as always for your assistance.

Hi Amanda,

Here is an agenda and an updated information sheet on the council of advisers for the meeting on Saturday (I added more information and corrected some typos, including the council's name - it is adviser with an e, not an o).

In terms of the Minister's role, basically they would like the certificate presentations to be very short and for Minister to thank each person - they all know each other so he doesn't need to talk about their experience or anything like that. Then there is time for him to speak and take questions.

I have asked about parking, but not received that information yet.

Please let me know if you need anything else or having any questions.
