COMMERCIAL WINERY COMMISSION

LDB

MANDATE: Liquor reform

TOP MESSAGES:

- It was recently discovered that, due to an error, the Liquor Distribution Branch (LDB) had been over-paying commissions to commercial wineries for their sales to wholesale customers.
- Essentially, they were paying out a 7% commission on the retail price instead of the wholesale price, which resulted in a loss of revenue for the LDB.
- The LDB has now fixed the error and commercial wineries have been advised of the change – making it clear that this is not a reduction in commission but a fix of the original error.
- This was not part of any changes that came along with the new wholesale pricing system.
- Commercial wineries will receive a number of benefits under the new wholesale system:
 - They now get a 7% commission for wholesale sales to their on-site store, and keep the difference between the wholesale and retail mark-up, which could increase revenue.
 - They now receive a 7% wholesale commission for sales to Independent Wine Stores and Special Occasion Licence (SOL) holders, and are allowed to keep the retail mark-up on the SOL sales – which was not part of the previous model.

COMMERCIAL WINERY COMMISSION

LDB

IF ASKED RE. FINANCIAL LOSS FOR LDB:

- The LDB will not be seeking reimbursement for the overpayments.
- The total value of these overpayments is in the seven figure range – resulting in a loss of LDB revenue.
- That revenue goes back into things like health care and important social programs – which is why the LDB is correcting the error.

COMMERCIAL WINERY COMMISSION

LDB

BACKGROUND:

BC commercial wineries can sell to wholesale customers, hospitality customers and retail customers. For these sales, the LDB pays them a 7% wholesale commission, as they are acting as an agent of the LDB.

It was recently discovered that, due to an error, the LDB had been over-paying commissions to commercial wineries for their sales to wholesale customers. The LDB was paying out a 7% commission on the retail price instead of the wholesale price. The total value of these overpayments is in the seven figure range, with the total amount and the exact timing of when the overpayments began, still being reviewed.

Going forward, the LDB has fixed the error to ensure that commercial wineries receive a 7% commission for the wholesale price, as originally intended. The LDB has discussed the issue with industry representatives and has confirmed that they will not pursue any recourse.

Commercial wineries have been advised of this change, and some representatives in the industry have requested that the wholesale commission rate be increased from 7% to 8.2% to account for the reduction in the commission they will now receive.

The LDB has made it clear that this change is not a reduction – it is actually a correction to fix the error.

Example of Overpaid Commission:

A bottle of wine with a retail price of $12.99, sold direct to a private liquor store:

- Commission paid in error: $$12.99 \times 7\% = \mathbf{$0.91}$
- Updated commission with system error fixed: $$12.99 - (12.99 \times 16\% \text{ discount for private liquor store}) \times 7\% = \mathbf{$0.76}$

In this example, there is a $0.15 (20%) over-payment of commission made to the winery.

Updated Commercial Winery Agreement:

Going forward, LDB's commercial winery agreement has been replaced, due to the new wholesale pricing implementation, and sent to all parties.

The replacement agreement has revised wording that clearly indicates that the 7% commission is on the wholesale price and systems have been amended accordingly.

COMMERCIAL WINERY COMMISSION

LDB

Letter from Josie Tyabji, Constellation Brands (sent Mar. 25, 2015):

Since first hearing in winter 2015 that all commissions going forward would be based on the wholesale price, Ms. Tyabji has been requesting that the wholesale commission rate be increased from 7% to 8.2%. She argues that an increase is necessary to account for the “reduced” commissions that commercial wineries will now receive.

The LDB explained to Ms. Tyabji that the historical commission payments were significantly inflated due to the systems error and the “reduction” in commission payout is not due to a change in the wholesale commission structure, but instead a correction to rectify the error.

The LDB has informed Ms. Tyabji that they will not be fulfilling her request.

ISSUE: Commission paid by the LDB to BC commercial wineries for sales to wholesale customers

SUMMARY:

- BC commercial wineries can currently sell to wholesale customers, hospitality customers and retail customers. For these sales, the LDB pays them a 7 percent commission on their sales to wholesale customers and hospitality customers, and a 30 percent commission on their sales to retail customers.
- Recently, it was discovered that, due to a system error, the LDB has been over-paying commissions to commercial wineries for their sales to wholesale customers i.e. the LDB was paying a 7 percent commission on the retail price instead of the discounted price.
- Going forward, systems will be amended to ensure that commercial wineries receive a 7 percent commission for the value of their sale (the wholesale price) instead of being overcompensated by receiving a 7 percent commission for the higher retail value.
- Due to this, Josie Tyabji requests that the wholesale commission rate be increased from 7 percent to 8.2 percent to account for their reduced commissions that commercial wineries will receive with the amendment.
- However, the reduction in commission payout that they will receive for this is not due to a change in the wholesale commission structure but instead a correction to rectify an error.
- It should be noted that there are concurrent changes in the commission structure as a result of wholesale pricing that further benefit commercial wineries:
 - The 30 percent commission for retail sales is being eliminated and replaced with a 7 percent commission for the winery's sale to their on-site store (wholesale sale) plus a retail mark-up that is retained by the winery that will increase the revenue retained by the wineries.
 - Commercial wineries will now receive commissions for sales to Independent Wine Stores and Special Occasion License (SOL) holders (as well as retain the retail mark-up on SOL sales) which was not provided in the previous model.

BACKGROUND:

- Before April 1, the LDB paid commercial wineries a 7 percent commission on sales made directly to wholesale customers (including private liquor stores, restaurants, bars and pubs) and hospitality customers, and a 30 percent commission on direct sales to retail customers at the winery site.
- The idea behind this commission is that because the commercial winery is selling on behalf of the LDB and the winery incurs the cost of delivering the product, the LDB pays the winery a percentage of the LDB's revenue on the sale to recognize this cost.
- Under the previous pricing model, some wholesale customers received a discount off of the BC Liquor Store retail price. For example, Licensed Retail Stores (LRSs) received a 16 percent discount, Rural Agency Stores (RASs) received a 12 percent discount and Independent Wine Stores (IWSs) received a 30 percent discount. Other customers, including restaurants, bars and pubs, paid the full retail price (i.e. they did not receive a discount).
- Each commercial winery signed a sales agreement with the LDB that states the following:

The LDB will reimburse you for the cost of Product sold and pay you a commission equivalent to seven (7) percent of the value of sales to select Wholesale Customers and (30) percent of the value of select Retail Sales. You will receive notice of the commissions as set out in Part 3 of the Reporting Requirements and Procedures.

- Based on the specific reference to commissions being equivalent to 7 percent of the value of sales, the commission should have been calculated on the actual price that was paid by the wholesale customer. For LRSs, RASs and IWSs, the commission therefore should have been calculated on the discounted price.
- However, it was discovered that the commission was being calculated on the full retail price (i.e. the price before any discounts were applied).
- This means that over the years, the LDB has been overpaying commercial wineries on their sales to customers who received a discount. The total value of these overpayments is in the seven figure range.
- There was not impact to commission for hospitality sales.

Example of Overpaid Commission

- Under the previous model, the LDB's revenue on a sale from a commercial winery to an LRS, for example, was equal to the retail price less 16 percent; therefore, the commission paid should have been based on this price.

- The following is an example of the commission over-payment on a bottle of wine with a retail price of $12.99, sold direct to an LRS:

Commission paid in error: $$12.99 \times 7 \text{ percent commission} = \0.91

If commission was paid correctly: $$12.99 - (12.99 \times 16\% \text{ discount for LRSs}) \times 7 \text{ percent commission} = \0.76

- In the above example, there is a $0.15 (20 percent) over-payment of commission made to the winery.
- Because the commission paid is based on a percentage rate, as the retail price of a product increased, so too would the amount of over-paid commission.

Ms. Tyabji's Request (see Appendix A)

- Going forward, LDB's commercial winery agreement has been replaced, due to the new wholesale pricing implementation, and sent to all parties. The replacement agreement has revised wording that clearly indicates that the 7 percent commission is on the wholesale price and systems have been amended accordingly.
- Ms. Tyabji requests that the wholesale commission rate be increased from 7 percent to 8.2 percent. She argues that an increase in the rate of commission paid is necessary to account for the reduced commissions that commercial wineries will receive going forward.
- The LDB explained to Ms. Tyabji that she cannot use the historical commission payments as the standard because those payments were significantly inflated due to the error.
- In addition, the reduction in commission payout that wineries will receive is not due to a change in the wholesale commission structure, but instead a correction to rectify an error.
- Furthermore, there are concurrent changes in the commission structure as a result of wholesale pricing that benefit commercial wineries:
 - Commercial wineries will continue to receive a 7 percent commission on sales to wholesale customers, while the 30 percent commission on retail sales is being replaced with a 7 percent commission for the winery's sale to their on-site store (wholesale sale), plus a retail mark-up that is retained by the winery. This is anticipated to actually increase each winery's revenue.
 - Also, commercial wineries will now receive commissions for sales to IWSs and Special Occasion License holders (as well as retain the retail mark-up on SOL sales), which was not provided previously.

- Based on the above, current commission figures for BC commercial wineries should not be used in any discussions regarding their financial status pre- and post-wholesale pricing implementation. These figures are inaccurate and significantly inflated due to error.
- LDB has denied and continues to deny Josie Tyabji's request.

Subject: Commissions on Direct delivered manufactured in BC products

Hi Roger – as you know we are looking for confirmation that the integrity of the value of our direct delivery commissions will be protected in the move to a wholesale price. There has been some previous discussion around this and I would like to clarify our understanding:

- Wineries have been responsible for establishing their retail prices in the past which formed a consistent number for establishing commissions.
- From this retail price (the sales price) a full mark up, and taxes has been established and paid to the BCLDB and government. The mark up was not calculated on any other number other than this retail price. a
- We have always received 7% of the retail price for customers who are licensed retailers to pay for the price of the delivery. The retail price is the sales price. If the sales price was the lesser 16%, than the mark up would have to have been adjusted to the lower number.
- You have paid 16% to the LRS out of the full 110% mark up you collected from us, to compensate the retailer for the fact that they are retailing the product. This shows up on the form as a "discount" in the transaction, to shorten the process for them and essentially deliver their commission to them directly, on your behalf. This is not a reduction in our selling price.
- This is not a money making venture for us, we pay significant dollars to deliver this product on behalf of the BCLDB, order desks, administrative processing, trucking and warehousing and we cannot take a hit on this part of our business. You are receiving significant mark up on this part of the industry through us, and we are taking care of all costs associated with processing, handling and delivering it, and the private retailers are selling it.

In order to continue with a consistent compensation for this delivery cost – maintaining the manufacturer program as committed, and to pay us the same amount of $ moving forward, the 7% of retail needs to change to 8.2% of wholesale, as there is no longer a fixed retail price.

We would appreciate confirmation that this will be modified moving forward to adjust from a retail system to a wholesale system. I have reviewed this with our industry counterparts and they are aligned in this position.

Thanks very much!

Josie

(on behalf of the wineries who are captured under this scenario.)

We need to set up a meeting or a call with Josie Tyabji (Josie.Tyabji@cbrands.com) and MSA, Lori and Blain. Sooner would be better but it can happen after the session is over too.

Jeannie, I've spoken to Lori about it already but topics for discussion are commissions and 100% BC product.

We don't need any materials other than what has been prepared already.
