Begin forwarded message:

Katherine Rowe, Director of the Generation and Regulatory Branch, Electricity and Alternative Energy Division, has provided the following response:

Ms. Sayers is mainly correct – opportunities for Independent Power Producers (IPPs) to sell power to BC Hydro will be very limited for the foreseeable future, because BC Hydro currently has a surplus supply of electricity that is expected to last into the 2030s. Most recently, BC Hydro's Standing Offer Program, a continuous intake program for small clean and renewable projects with a nameplate capacity of 15 megawatts or less, was indefinitely suspended. This program has been the primary procurement opportunity for independent power producers, including Indigenous Nations, in recent years.

BC Hydro's electricity surplus is largely related to unforeseen changes in BC's domestic electricity demand. The Site C project will contribute to BC's electricity surplus for its first ten years of operation, but is not the primary driver of it. Site C will also enhance BC Hydro's system, providing more capacity to integrate the intermittent IPP electricity supplies that BC Hydro currently purchases from independent power producers into BC Hydro's grid; better enabling the electricity utility to continue delivering power safely and reliably to its customers.

The Province is aware that a number of Indigenous Nations have been exploring, or developing, clean and renewable generation projects in recent years, and that the indefinite suspension of the Standing Offer Program may potentially impact the economic interests of individual Indigenous Nations. The Province is engaging with Indigenous Nations and communities to discuss the extent to which the indefinite suspension of the SOP may affect the economic interests of individual Indigenous Nations; and is committed to jointly explore options for mitigating those impacts, where they exist.

The above attachment provides additional information on the indefinite suspension of the Standing Offer Program, and the Indigenous engagement process that the Province is currently undertaking.

Please let me know if I can be of anymore assistance.

Subject: PNWER Summit

Good Morning,

I hope you are all doing well. I wanted to confirm the programming for next week. Attached are the agendas for the morning Energy Innovations and Infrastructure Resilience and afternoon Climate Change sessions.

We did add a new speaker to the renewable energy panel (David Isaac, President, W Dusk Energy Group) and a new speaker to the industry section of the climate panel (Bryan Buggey, Director, Strategic Initiatives and Sector Development, Vancouver Economic Commission).

Please take a look at the timing and let me know if you have any comments. We do have a lot of great content but have to work to fit it all in. I allocated 55 minutes for each panel. Paul is set to moderate the second panel on renewable energy. Rick, would you like to moderate the first panel on infrastructure resilience or prefer Paul to do so? The questions for both panels are set out on the agenda. I was thinking we give 3-5 minutes or so for each panelist to introduce themselves and give a very quick overview of their project before we ask the questions.

Paul, I will send you a ppt for the quick Roadmap research overview.

Are there any action items we would like to pre-draft? I assume continuing the Roadmap project and working towards an energy session at the Seattle Winter Meeting.

As a reminder, we are inviting all speakers to sit at the designated energy tables at the breakfast and lunch plenaries which will give people a chance to meet each other before the sessions.

I am also planning to pre-draft tweets to go out during the session so please let me know if you have any preferred language.

Lastly, I will be leaving PNWER in August to start graduate school at Georgetown. We will be transitioning the energy working groups over to another staff member and I will make sure all the files are updated and they are briefed on the history of the working group and projects in progress. It's been a pleasure working with both of you on the energy and environment file.

Please let me know if you have any questions or suggestions.

Good Morning,

I hope you are all doing well. I wanted to confirm the programming for next week. Attached are the agendas for the morning Energy Innovations and Infrastructure Resilience and afternoon Climate Change sessions.

We did add a new speaker to the renewable energy panel (David Isaac, President, W Dusk Energy Group) and a new speaker to the industry section of the climate panel (Bryan Buggey, Director, Strategic Initiatives and Sector Development, Vancouver Economic Commission).

Please take a look at the timing and let me know if you have any comments. We do have a lot of great content but have to work to fit it all in. I allocated 55 minutes for each panel. Paul is set to moderate the second panel on renewable energy. Rick, would you like to moderate the first panel on infrastructure resilience or prefer Paul to do so? The questions for both panels are set out on the agenda. I was thinking we give 3-5 minutes or so for each panelist to introduce themselves and give a very quick overview of their project before we ask the questions.

Paul, I will send you a ppt for the quick Roadmap research overview.

Are there any action items we would like to pre-draft?^{s.13}

s.13

As a reminder, we are inviting all speakers to sit at the designated energy tables at the breakfast and lunch plenaries which will give people a chance to meet each other before the sessions.

I am also planning to pre-draft tweets to go out during the session so please let me know if you have any preferred language.

Lastly, ^{s.22}

We will be transitioning the energy working groups over to another staff member and I will make sure all the files are updated and they are briefed on the history of the working group and projects in progress. ^{s.22}

Hello Alyson,

Sorry I missed your email in my inbox - it gets very crazy right now.

I have not heard from Bryan though I have called him and emailed several times. I did offer the chance to phone in if that was easier. I do think he would be a great addition to the Climate Change and Economic Growth session on Monday afternoon given the wide subject of the commissions's report. It would be great if Rick can followup on the invitation.

For the panel - the moderator either Sen. Dembrow or Min. Duncan will give each speaker 5 mins to provide a high-level view of their jurisdiction's climate plan before going into the questions. Rick could split up his comments in his initial remarks or in the questions. We do have 6 speakers so we might not get to all of the questions so Rick should probably put his most important points in the initial remarks.

1. Briefly provide a high-level overview of your jurisdiction's climate policies
2. How have climate policies led to innovation in traditional or new sectors?
3. How have policies been developed in line with your jurisdiction's specific emission profiles?
4. How have these policies led to economic growth in your jurisdiction? Tech innovation, workforce development, lower energy costs etc?
5. What opportunities or trends do you see arising in this arena?
6. What are lessons learned or best practices that can be implemented in further policies or in other jurisdictions?

Please let me know if I can answer any more questions.

Subject: From Silas: Follow-Up From June 20 Meeting

Hi Rick

I promised to follow up on a few items at our last meeting on June 20, see below:

Interactive Digital Media Tax Credit

The interactive digital media tax credit is a refundable corporate income tax credit for eligible registered corporations that develop interactive digital media products (e.g. video games) in B.C., worth 17.5% of eligible salaries and wages. Amending the tax credit to focus on areas outside of Vancouver has been raised occasionally. For example, DigiBC requested, in its submission to the Select Standing Committee on Finance and Government Services' Budget 2019 consultation, that the credit rate be increased from 17.5% to 25%, with an additional 10% top-up for rural and northern regions.

The tax credit is the responsibility of the Minister of Finance, and suggestions to change the tax credit are regularly considered as part of the budget process. The interactive digital media tax credit rate has remained unchanged at 17.5% since the credit was introduced in 2010.

Significant considerations when considering enhancements to the credit are the costs involved (the credit is forecasted to cost $55 million in 2019/20), the extent to which enhancements would incent the creation of new jobs as opposed to providing more funding for existing jobs, and competitiveness concerns (whether the health of the tech industry is such that it requires additional support in order to compete with other provinces).

In 2017, approximately 20% of tax credit applicants were from outside the Vancouver area, representing about 5% of the tax credit costs.

Small Business Venture Capital Tax Credit Program (SBVCA)

Venture capital is essential for BC companies to start a business, develop technologies, commercialize ideas, and grow their operations. The Small Business Venture Capital Tax Credit program de-risks venture capital investment in BC companies by providing a 30 percent tax credit to BC investors who invest in eligible businesses.

In 2018, $38.5 million in tax credits were available enabling equity investment up to $128.33 million annually. Since 2000, the program has helped BC businesses raise over $1 billion in investment.

A review of the program was carried out in 2018. The goals of the review were to modernize the program and make changes that will help businesses successfully scale up and compete in global markets.

The attached document outlines the resulting changes to the Act and its regulation. The amendments to the Act received Royal Assent in March 2019 with the Budget 2019,s.12; s.13 to not only small and growing BC companies - but to mature, well-established companies by helping them to build out their business in new markets.

Canada's Digital Technology Supercluster

The Supercluster has two funding streams:

1. Technology Leadership Program – Co-investment for ambitious technology projects that propose to develop products and/or platforms that have potential to transform industries and propel economic growth. Over $300 million investment commitment from federal government and industry over five years. Project intakes twice a year. Three initial focus areas:
 - Precision Health – projects that leverage digital technologies to transform any aspect of healthcare delivery and life sciences.
 - Digital Twins – projects that involve the digital representation of real-world objects or systems and the dynamics of how they function over their life cycle.
 - Data Commons – projects that involve the aggregation of the diverse sources of data to create collaborative platforms on which to build new products.
2. Capacity Building Program – Complements the tech leadership projects by investing in areas of the innovation ecosystem where there is a demonstrated need or opportunity. $26 million over five years. Program objectives are:
 - Develop a diverse pool of talent to ensure a workforce prepared for jobs of tomorrow with a focus on improving the inclusion and participation of Indigenous people, underrepresented groups and women.
 - Scale SMEs by providing the resources for growth and increasing supply chain links to enhance access to global markets for Canadian companies with technology capabilities.

I look forward to our next meeting, and in the meantime, let me know if I can help with anything else.

Regards,
Silas

Subject: addtl speakers for PNWER climate panel

Good afternoon Parliamentary Secretary,

An update on our pursuit of additional industry speakers as per PNWER's request for assistance. Since the original request, we have engaged with ministry partners to identify potential businesses who have benefitted from B.C.'s climate strategy policies.

The effort led us to Pembina Institute's new "business coalition for a clean economy." There are several member businesses that may benefit from exposure at PNWER, however, more work needs to be done to determine how any of them specifically benefit from the province's climate change policies, as well as identifying key people to liaise with.

Given the short timeframe, I think it may be unrealistic to advance this before the Summit, but it is an excellent list to leverage for future opportunities. Alternatively, we can provide this resource to PNWER for their follow-up and they can determine if there are sessions that may still need panelists. The agenda at this point looks quite fulsome and PNWER has not reached out asking for further participants.

Of note, Carbon Engineering, who you've visited, is a great climate-policy success story and are already attending the Summit.

Sincerely,

Please let me know if you have any questions on either this session or the preceding infrastructure resilience session. I have been communicating with Bryan at Vancouver Economic Commission this week but have not received a confirmation from him.

Please let me know your preference and thoughts. I do think this will be an extremely valuable session.

Hello,

I hope you had a nice Canada Day.

Sen. Mike Dembrow was invited to serve as co-chair of the Climate Change and Economic Growth session. I have not heard from him recently; you may have seen the recent developments with Oregon's cap and trade bill. Would you be interested in serving as co-chair of the session along with Hon. Dustin Duncan, Minister of Environment in Saskatchewan? We can arrange a brief call with Minister Duncan's office to decide the order of the welcoming remarks and moderator roles. Attached is the agenda.

Please let me know if you have any questions. The program is going to print today but we could also update the online version latter if need be.

Hi all,

Can you let me know if 9 AM tomorrow works for our PNWER staff call? That would replace today's 3 PM call.

Or, would you like to move it to next week?

Thank you,

Sorry Jennifer, responded to your earlier email before this one.

PS Glumac will do introductory remarks for the first session, and be a panelist on Clean BC for this session.

Sen. Denbrow can do these remarks.

Thanks,

Alyson

In odd timing, Sen. Dembrow finally returned my message 3 minutes ago confirming his participation at the Summit. After 4 weeks, I was not expecting a reply but he was invited several months ago and is the primary architect of the Oregon Cap and Trade bill. Would you prefer to remain as a panel participant or join as a third co-chair? We have had 3 co-chairs in the past; we will coordinate with each office on opening remarks/moderation duties. I sincerely apologize for the back and forth.

Hi PS Glumac,

From my notes, here is what I have on your visit to Burrard Thermal:

Visit to Burrard Thermal

April 3, 2018, 10 AM

- Fred Haag (BC Hydro)
- Sanjay De Zoysa (BC Hydro)
- Jerry Muir (BC Hydro)
- Sean Darling (JTT)

This may not be 100% accurate as I was not there in person and attendees may have changed on the day of, but hopefully this gives you an idea and/or refreshes your memory.

Your meeting with BC Hydro on May 16, 2019, I can only see that "Lawrence from BC Hydro" may have attended along with James McNish (JTT). I don't have further info.

Please let me know if you need anything else.
