Hi Ana,

I've got some more recent information from LGPRL – thanks Kevan! Please delete the email I sent a bit ago and replace with this one. I've attached a recent letter from the Minister of PSSG to the mayors of Kelowna and Victoria. So this is up to date messaging from the Province to local governments. The core message from the letter, to be added to the information below, is:

- We understand the importance of the role that 9-1-1 emergency communications plays in the delivery of emergency services, and that the decreased revenue from traditional funding sources such as landline levies have been a challenge for the cities and municipalities of British Columbia.
- We are also aware that forthcoming upgrades of the system to Next Generation 9-1-1, which will bring needed modernization to the system, will have financial implications.
- The Province has heard your concerns regarding the impact these costs are having on municipalities. The Province is interested in supporting local government efforts to both establish and maintain 9-1-1 services and recognize its role in the promotion of public safety.
- The Province is looking to assess future funding models for 9-1-1 costs in the context of policing and public safety modernization and implementation of the recommendations of the Special Committee on reforming the Police Act.

Hi Ana,

MUNI's most recent interaction on this topic appears to be with PSSG approximately a year ago, when we briefed Okenge for a meeting with his counterpart at PSSG. For that brief, we used information from about 20 months before that. In November of 2019, we received a briefing note from PSSG and produced another similar meeting between then Minister Robinson and PSSG about this issue. All this to say that the two briefing notes from which I am drawing information is about 30 months old and so it may be a good idea to reach out to PSSG for an update to the process they are engaged in.

On the other hand, it may not be necessary to do this prior to briefing the DMO or MO. The pandemic delayed the process and the basic information from the briefing notes is likely still useful. I've attached the two briefing notes, but have also summarized important points below:

- Over the last several years, the Ministry of Public Safety and the Solicitor General (PSSG) has examined the 911 system in British Columbia. Two primary goals of this examination have been modernizing the current 911 system, as required by the Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commission (CRTC), and improving the framework for 911 financing.

- This work also responds to multiple requests by local governments and UBCM for financial support of 9-1-1 services. For example, the 2019 UBCM Resolution: “Therefore be it resolved that the Province prioritize the establishment of emergency call-in services, such as 911 services, across the Province in its entirety including adequate policy, administrative and financial support.”

s. 13

- Currently, 911 is under local purview and most Primary 911 services are provided through E-Comm, which is a municipal corporation created within Metro Van. While E-Comm was started in the lower mainland, it now provides E-911 services throughout most of British Columbia.

s. 12, s. 13, s. 17

- In late 2019, PSSG asked MUNI to comment on their proposal. s. 13

s. 13

- MUNI’s role in this process may include advising local governments about service structures and methods of financing for 911 service support.
- MUNI reviews and recommends Inspector approval when a local government wishes to form a subsidiary corporation s. 13

s. 13

Please contact me if you have questions or require more information. I’m happy to formulate an updated briefing note, if required.

Dear Mayor Basran and Mayor Helps:

Thank you for your letter of February 15, 2022, and your advocacy on behalf of the British Columbia Urban Mayors' Caucus (BCUMC) for the implementation of a provincial 9-1-1 cellular telephone levy to support 911 and emergency service delivery model in British Columbia.

We understand the importance of the role that 9-1-1 emergency communications plays in the delivery of emergency services, and that the decreased revenue from traditional funding sources such as landline levies have been a challenge for the cities and municipalities of British Columbia. We are also aware that forthcoming upgrades of the system to Next Generation 9-1-1, which will bring needed modernization to the system, will have financial implications.

I can assure you that we have heard your concerns regarding the impact these costs are having on municipalities. The Province is interested in supporting local government efforts to both establish and maintain 9-1-1 services and recognize its role in the promotion of public safety.

The ministry will look to assess future funding models for 9-1-1 costs in the context of policing and public safety modernization and implementation of the recommendations of the Special Committee on reforming the Police Act which are anticipated in late April 2022.

BRIEFING NOTE FOR INFORMATION

Date: November 7, 2019

Prepared For: Honourable Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing

Title: Proposed 911 Authority

Issue: The Ministry of Public Safety and the Solicitor General (PSSG) would like to discuss their proposal for s. 12, s. 13
s. 12, s. 13
s. 12, s. 13

Meeting With: Honourable Mike Farnworth, Minister of Public Safety and Solicitor General, on November 13, 2019.

KEY MESSAGES:

BACKGROUND:

Over the last several years, the Ministry of Public Safety and the Solicitor General (PSSG) has examined the 911 system in British Columbia. Two primary issues of this examination have been modernizing the current 911 system and improving 911 financing.

The Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) has mandated that the current 911 network be decommissioned by June 2023. The current system is to be replaced by a new platform called Next Generation 911 (NG911), which will include text, images, video and data. This new platform will require capital, technical, and operational upgrades. Also included in modernizing the 911 system is setting provincial standards and regulations on various aspects of the new system to ensure standardized service delivery.

Regarding financing, the current 911 system is financed through a combination of property tax and special landline levies. The concern over current revenue sources is that landlines are disappearing in favor of cell phones, and there is currently no BC levy on cell phones. BC is only one of two provinces without a cell phone levy.

s. 12, s. 13

Over the summer, PSSG chaired both an external Steering Committee and an internal working group. The external Steering Committee included representatives from the UBCM, various local governments and first responders, and E-Comm (the primary 911 service provider in BC). The internal working group included representatives from Citizens' Services, Municipal Affairs and Housing (MAH), Emergency Management BC, and Emergency Health Services.

s. 12, s. 13

DISCUSSION:

While PSSG's internal and external stakeholder consultation over the summer was quite extensive and generally well-received, most of the discussion was at a very high level. s. 12, s. 13

Hi Sarah,

Could you please also run this by your team for advice?

Dan, I just discussed with Okenge.

As background, Okenge and other DMs met with the President/CEO on July 6, 2021.

Thank you,
