This is more than just cutting them back to control them a bit. This is destroying them completely leaving none which is destroying fish nests and taking the oxygen that is needed for the fish and plant life and insects to keep the eco system in that lake going. This will kill off insects like dragonflies and chronimids and the over all status of the lake. When the lake gets warm the fish will all die due to not enough oxygen. The three watercourses have flooded the up-gradient forest and now flow through (under) the dredge material and into the dredged channel at several (uncontrolled) locations, causing additional erosion and sedimentation. Additionally the dredging material and the lowered elevation of the drainage channel has effectively blocked fish access to the three upstream watercourses to the east. All three blocked watercourses are likely fish bearing (Class A), within lower reaches, and Class B above at a minimum, although this has not been confirmed. A large unprotected manure stockpile (approximately 10x20m and 3m tall) is located immediately north of the area that was dredged and within 10m of nearby drainage channels (a dead Great Blue Heron was coincidentally found in an adjacent pond approximately 25m from the stockpile). The stockpile was not lined or covered and was partially protected from view from Little Street and surrounding properties by a planted cedar hedge. s.15,s.22 for the area in question and up-gradient areas to the east under sub-contract with MFLNRO. It is my understanding that the hunters must stop hunting a 1/2 an hour after sunset. On Nov 26th, 2012, the last shot I heard, was at 5:04pm and according to the weather network, sunset was at 4:17pm that day. On Dec 3rd, the last gun shot I heard was at 4:54pm. I did not check the weather network as the days are still getting shorter so I know that sunset was even earlier than on the 26th of Nov. The hunters have been hunting in the same spot for 3 years now and I am assuming tha s.15.s.22s.15.s.22 and probably have an Angus Campbell Road address. I would like them to stop hunting when they are supposed to as the ducks are coming later and they wouldn't be getting them if they would stop shooting at the legal time. I would also like someone to check how many birds they have as they are hunting at least 3-4 times a week. 10:37 Briefed CO Don Stahl. |

After conversing with s.15 s.22, s.15 s.22 decided to do a bit of digging and found a website where they have posted pictures of their hunting dogs and big game and caller wonders if all these kills were legal. Some of the pictures are dated '1980'. Caller is also concerned that these hunting dogs were turned loose in the bush outside of a hunting season and therefore potentially harassing wildlife. Caller is wondering if this couple still hunts regularly and has tags? She has not proof they are actually doing something wrong but believes "they aren't right in the head" and someone should investigate them. |

I understand that others were by the site as well and were shocked by the lack of fish impact mitigation for instream works in coho habitat well outside the instream work window. I went to have a look for myself independently. comments: It is unacceptable for the province and DFO to be allowing this kind of thing to go on when there are other municipality and EM's abiding by work windows and mitigation plans. Inaction is a race to the bottom, as it sets clear and legal precedent for other consultants to follow suit. It is either illegal to cause serious harm to fish or it is not, if it is not then lets not worry about even having a Fisheries Act. Similarly, the province needs to be consistent with the administration of the Water Act. There are protocols for instream works, emergency works and mitigation of those works. It is irritating the MFLNR will make such a fuss about project A and no fuss whatsoever about project B. It appears that there is favoritism, and that is scary particularly because this consultant had a run in with the MFLNR in Coquitlam a few years ago. As you can tell I know where the bodies are buried..... Things must be improved or approvals for work at this time of year must be with-held. It is making a joke out fish protection statutes and the biological profession. This needs to be reported to the College of Applied Biology. |

MOE Ryan Fuller requested to forward to COS. COM advised that a neighbouring property (farm) has been continuously spraying their fields with a substance that smells like rotten eggs. Caller was not sure what the material was but noted that it was nauseating. Caller is concerned as s.15 doesn't believe this is a regulated material. The farm does this without warning neighbouring properties and while doing so, impacts nearby residences. Farm employees use tractor sprayers to spray the material causing a wind drift of smell/material to hover over the community. There are no known water courses being impacted to callers knowledge but s.15 wanted it noted that s.15 does have a well at the front of s.15 that is in the direct path of the material. Caller believes the farm name is McTar Growers but could not confirm name or exact address. This has an ongoing issue. Caller will also be contacting Ministry of Agriculture and Lands regarding the farming practices. 2015-02-21 at 09:50 - Briefed MOE EERO Ryan Fuller. Faxed MOE Surrey. |

In this building they burn or manufacture something that spews a sticky pollutant out their stacks and settles on parked vehicles and the parking lot. We are unable to clean this off of our vehicles and this is creating a driving hazard as we are unable to see out the vehicles in the morning, if our cars have been parked for the night shift. This building is partially hidden from view by semi trailers and cedars and the emission stacks are low so not to draw attention to the pollutants spewing in the air. Production is done weekly mostly in the late afternoon and evenings. Vanderpols put in filters on their main manufacturing building late last year but they are still spewing pollutants off of this detached building located on the outside of their south side parking lot. |

Since the grow op was put in the neighbours have been noticing more surface water on the land and a small unnamed creek has been darker for a couple of years. Caller and ... neighbours are concerned the grow op may be responsible for both as there was no septic field added to the property when the 3500 square foot grow op was built.  |

Approximately 1550h on June 15, 2015. I pulled in to the station to fill my work truck with diesel, and noticed at the other diesel pump what I determined through touch and smell, to be a large amount of diesel pouring off the back of a 1 ton (?) flatbed truck with an auxiliary diesel tank. The lone driver was not on site at first, but within 2 minutes of my arrival he showed up and got in the truck and pulled away from the pump and over to the edge of the service station property. He then went to the stations garden hose and started spraying the spilled diesel off of the concrete pad. I suggested he use the stations spill kit, to which he replied that the woman working there either couldn't locate it or that they didn't have one. A minute later a s.15 s.22 woman in a Petro Canada shirt then came out with a handful of 2'x3' sheets of what looked to be blank newsprint, and attempted to blot up the area the customer had just washed clean. I pointed out that the spill was running towards a drain, and they she had better stop it before it gets in the drainage system. I also clarified that she should be using the spill kit, but all interaction with her was met with a blank stare and no words what so ever. ----- Violator { s.15,s.22 } |

I witnessed a vehicle parked on the beach on both nights arriving sometime around 1AM. Also I saw lights moving around the vehicle area for the hours after until around 4AM when they left the beach. I saw nothing that was a direct violation as it was dark and I was a few hundred meters away. However, as they arrived in darkness and left before day light, I assume some illegal activity may have been committed and that sturgeon may have been poached. It was dark and I had poor quality binoculars but I think the vehicle was a pickup truck, and that there was at least two people on the beach at the time based on multiple moving lights. Additional Comments: s.15,s.22 It is shift work and that was why I was out so late. The location of the site is at the end of Kelleher Street and the boat is driven perpendicular across the river from there. I am also the only witness. After my shift (5AM) I went to the end of Walters Street to see if I could find anything to suggest poaching (remains perhaps) but only saw single vehicle tracks and footprints in the sand. You have my contact info and I would be happy to talk with someone if you feel you need more info. I am also curious as if this is the type of situation that the RAPP hotline should be called during the activity? |
