I forwarded the pictures and link to s.22

They are great and we will have many good stories from this day. s.22 came home very enthusiastic and could not stop talking about everyone he met and what he learned.

Many thanks to you, Shane Simpson, Mable Elmore, John Horgan, the NDP caucus, Val and all others for making s.22 feel so welcome. This is something he will remember for many years to come.

All the best,

Hi Minister

Attached is a draft news release for a CEP project in New West that Minister Darcy will be attending tomorrow (money was awarded last year sometime, it's just finishing now). Jayne and I made several edits, which I'll send back to Maryann.

Your quote for approval:

Shane Simpson, Minister of Social Development and Poverty Reduction, sees programs like this as one of the ways of reducing poverty in British Columbia.

"This project has had incredible reach: six people have benefited from employment and training, at-risk youth have gained skills that will serve them for years to come, and communities around British Columbia have been strengthened by the social innovation promoted through the program," Simpson said. (Not Approved.)

Please let me know if you have any changes.

Thanks
Leah

Here's the statement I have agreed to:

The Minister of Social Development and Poverty Reduction has been mandated by the Premier to develop a basic income pilot project to test whether giving people a basic income could be an effective way to reduce poverty and improve health, housing and employment. The Minister has expressed a willingness to consider recommendations from a Women's Equality Task Force on Basic Income to see how the pilot could be inclusive of considerations of women escaping violence in the pilot project. The Minister also indicated an interest in learning whether this task force would contribute to federal support for basic income programs.

I will need to have the signed minute available for the Cabinet Report out binder on Wed next week.
