Hi James,

Here's what we would like to get out of the briefing on Friday:

Premier is confirmed to attend and speak at the Asia Pacific Foundation Dinner with the board of directors.

Would like an overview of this organization, what is the audience, what are their issues, who they are etc.

what work has been done to date with the org. and your Ministry, what future opportunities exist etc.

Would like discussion on who is confirmed to attend this dinner and background etc.

And discussion on content of the address.

A

Garry Begg is attending along with MLA de Jong on behalf of the province. MMF is aware of the details and his office can fill in your team so we can arrange a release or whatever is required. Premier's statement on Remembrance Day

VICTORIA – Premier John Horgan released the following statement in honour of Remembrance Day and the 100th anniversary of the end of the First World War.

“On Remembrance Day, British Columbians honour the courage and sacrifice of veterans, armed forces members, and merchant marines who have served our country.

“We also recognize the families who have lost sons and daughters, mothers and fathers, and cared for those who have returned with injuries, both visible and invisible.

“As we gather at cenotaphs in communities around the province and pay respect to generations of Canadians who have bravely risked their lives to protect ours, we are reminded of the horrors of war.

"In those moments of silence, we resolve to stand together, against hate and violence, and work to build a more peaceful world.

"Lest we forget."

Hi, I had flagged this one for our MO yesterday as it was going to be just a news release from the PMO with no mention of the Province. However, this morning the feds have come back asking for a quote from the Premier and for details of B.C funding will be added to release. The MO says this should go through you. Is this something you can check on? The PMO is looking for quote approval asap this morning.

There is an event with Prime Minister Trudeau in Vancouver tomorrow. We do not have any other details on timing, location or who else is attending as we are dealing with Infrastructure Canada and this is being led by the PMO.

Re: the B.C. funding:

- The Ministry of Health provided $12.250 million in 2016/17 to support research collaboration with TRIUMF (this has never been announced).
- Funding provided will allow TRIUMF to create the Institute for Advanced Medical Isotopes, which will help accelerate drug development, develop targeted therapies for cancer treatments in B.C., and expand TRIUMF's clinical and pre-clinical medical imaging program with the University of British Columbia and the BC Cancer, and provide support for radiopharmaceutical research, development and clinical trials.

Please let me know if you need any further information. I have asked if they have a QA or any other documents they can share.

New home for nuclear medicine at the University of British Columbia

November 1, 2018

Vancouver, British Columbia

Prime Minister's Office

The spirit of innovation that Canadians share have helped us create the industries and jobs that grew the middle class. Today, that same drive to innovate is paving the way for new medical discoveries. With innovative industries such as the medical isotope industry, Canada is working to improve our collective health and keep our country competitive in the global economy.

The Prime Minister, Justin Trudeau, today announced federal funding to build a new home for nuclear medicine at the University of British Columbia (UBC). The Institute for Advanced Medical Isotopes—part of the Tri-University Meson Facility (TRIUMF) on the UBC campus in Vancouver—will provide a first-of-its-kind hub in Canada. At the facility, industry partners, academic researchers, and clinicians will work together to advance medical isotope production, drug development, cancer therapy, clinical imaging, and radiopharmaceutical research—advancements that have the potential to help thousands of Canadians who suffer from illness.

The new 2500-square-metre building will house a particle accelerator, as well as research facilities, equipment, laboratories, and office space. By concentrating all aspects of creating, handling, and testing isotopes in one location—from the creation of raw materials to clinical trial work of potential therapies—the Institute will help continue to position Canada as a leader in the production and research of medical isotopes worldwide.

This project will provide students and local researchers with access to a modern educational facility with innovative spaces for instruction, research, and laboratory work. It also provides UBC with the opportunity to develop new educational programs, increase research capacity, and attract new students from across Canada and around the world.

BC Cancer, a partner in the facility supported by a multi-million dollar philanthropic donation through the BC Cancer Foundation, will use the facility to advance the research and development of highly targeted therapeutic isotopes to treat metastatic cancers.

—The Rt. Hon. Justin Trudeau, Prime Minister of Canada

“Together with our federal partners, we’re powering the future of health care, which will help us discover new ways to diagnose and treat British Columbians. By supporting TRIUMF and the Institute for Advanced Medical Isotopes, we will help accelerate drug development, develop targeted therapies for cancer treatments right here in B.C. and, expand TRIUMF’s clinical and pre-clinical medical imaging program.”

—The Honourable John Horgan, Premier of British Columbia

Quick Facts

- The Government of Canada is contributing $10,232,310 to this project through the Provincial-Territorial Infrastructure Component of the New Building Canada Fund. The Province of British Columbia is contributing $12,250,000, TRIUMF is contributing $9,352,638 and, through fundraising initiatives, BC Cancer and the University of British Columbia are each contributing $2 million.
- The new building will house a new TR-24 medical cyclotron (a type of particle accelerator), a cyclotron control room, and six laboratories. The new facility will also have technical rooms, quality control laboratories, office space, and electrical control rooms.
- Canada is a leader in the roughly $4 billion global medical isotope industry and contributes more than 50 percent of the world's raw material for medical isotope supply.
- TRIUMF is Canada’s national particle accelerator centre owned and operated as a joint venture by a consortium of universities. TRIUMF’s operations are supported in part by the Government of Canada with funding, for laboratory operations and staff costs, through the National Research Council.
- Medical isotopes are safe radioactive substances used by health professionals to diagnose and treat health conditions of the heart, circulatory system, and organs. They allow us to see what is happening inside the body in a non-invasive way and in real-time at a molecular level.

Hi Amanda,

Thanks for running this by me. Feel free to share my remarks with Shannon or anyone else to whom it might be useful.

The option you propose will be contentious. There are two problems.

The first is that the X is a compromise between two deeply entrenched positions, and the second is that the X is voluntary, and applicants must pay to access it.

There is a division in our community. One side, organizing as the gender free ID coalition supports the mandatory removal of all ID markers from all ID. <http://gender-freeidcoalition.ca/>. They want assigned sex to still be recorded in the aggregate, but not to be noted on any government forms. This is the option Ontario has take for the Ontario Health Card. Notably they want this change for everyone, not just trans people who elect to have it. This group view the X option as dangerous, because it singles people out. It also fails to make systemic change because cisgender people continue as they are, and are not aware of how they participate in a binary gender system which is oppressive to many.

The other side of the community takes a more binary view of sex, and they feel they need to have a gender marker (particularly an F) on ID because they struggled very hard to be recognized as the gender they are, and for vulnerable trans women, it is sometimes required in order to prove they belong in women-only facilities. This side supports an optional X, as long as it isn't mandated.

I'm sure you know all this.

The X initiative will be perceived as a trans inclusive move by the public, and by the growing number of folks who identify as non binary. The gender free ID coalition will be critical perhaps.

A slightly more politically courageous solution that would please everyone, would be a scheme in which people could choose an M, F, X U (unspecified) I (intersex) or be able to leave the field blank. This also solves the problem of parents who oppose having to gender their infants before those infants are old enough to express a gender choice. This is particularly important for intersex people. I understand there is at least one active Human Rights complaint on behalf of a minor on this issue.

An amendment of the Vital Statistics Act to remove the mandatory inclusion of a sex marker on the one form register of birth and the birth certificate would be required, along with changes at health and ICBC for service cards and BCDL/BCService cards requirements, application forms, and fees.

Because the choice of an F would still exist, this option would not upset women who are very proud of their F, or people who need to show one for safety. Because a sex marker could be obscured it would please the coalition.

Icing on this cake would be a fees amnesty for trans people on gender markers and name changes, and the replacement cost of ID. This is an expense faced disproportionately by the trans community. It can cost 500$ between federal and provincial documents to change a person's name and gender marker to align with their gender identity.

I saw the Attorney General at a legal conference earlier this month and he asked me for a letter outlining which of those fees are provincial. I'm recovering from surgery and have not yet written that letter, but the applicable fees are:

The cost of a fee amnesty to government could be estimated by collecting from the number of people who apply to the Vital Statistics office in Kelowna for a gender change, adding 20% (for people who might apply if there was a non-binary option) and then adding the cost of a name change and replacement ID costs.

November 20th is Trans Day of Remembrance and it would be a more suitable day to announce than the 1st because we could say we've heard from the community that being misgendered is dangerous, and here is what we are doing to help.

As for the sex/gender problem, I have surveyed the law in British Columbia and there is little distinction between sex and gender in the legislation. Sex of course is a physical trait. All British Columbian's have ID that lists the sex they were assigned at birth, unless they are trans people who have requested (and can afford!) to change it, in which case it is a gender marker.

For cisgender people, their sex marker is also a gender marker. For trans people, calling it a sex marker is potentially hurtful because for us it is either an incorrectly assigned sex, or a gender marker.

I recommend government communications refer to this as a gender marker.

Please let me know if any of this is unclear.

Hello Sage

A delegation from B.C. is going to France to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the battle of Vimy Ridge. MLA Garry Begg is attending on behalf of the Premier and will be speaking at the event. I have attached a draft of the news release from the Vimy foundation. You will see they are looking for a quote from B.C. I am hopeful we can send a quote on behalf of the Premier to include in the release as B.C.'s contribution is quite significant ($350,000).

"It is a privilege to be able to provide a contribution on behalf of the people of British Columbia for the Vimy Foundation Centennial Park. It is a significant way that we can honour the brave Canadians who fought so hard here a century ago in order to preserve our rights and freedoms."

The goals for the BCBC speech are to describe the outlines of the Premier's economic vision, where bold climate action and a clean growth strategy provide an economic lift to the province.

- Backgrounder on BCBC – the goals outlined in this backgrounder are incomplete.
 - UBCM speech – most pertinent for this work is the Sustainable Economy, Shared Prosperity and Climate sections
 - Strategic Plan – more than a roundup of the last year, it's a good reference document of how we're talking about the last year.
 - Vancouver Island Economic Summit – an example of how we've presented our programs as solutions to business' problems.
 - Trade and investment strategy material from Jobs Trade & Technology
 - Labour force jobs numbers from September. October's will be released tomorrow.
 - Statement from Minister Ralston
- Draft economic vision – probably the most succinct version we have right now of our core narrative.

Ms. Erin Richards:

Greetings from Juneau, Alaska. This is to follow up on a voicemail I just left.

I'm a public radio reporter covering Transboundary mine issues.

Yesterday the Governor of Alaska penned a letter to Premier Horgan (attached) raising concerns about the financial assurances required by B.C. on mine operators. He also raises concern about continuing discharged by the former Tulsequah Mine that drains into the Taku River.

I'll be doing a report tomorrow (Friday) and was hoping to get comment from the premier's office.

Hi Sage: Pasted here and attached two one-sheets for upcoming speeches: "Our House" (housing) and "Teamwork" (APF). cheers, tom

“Our House”

Speech to Non-Profit Housing Association Conference (Nov. 18, 2018)

Speech Arc

1. Our government taking immediate steps to alleviate housing crisis
2. Housing squeeze on middle-income British Columbians is being addressed
3. No overnight solutions, but the hard work has begun through long-term investments made in partnerships

Housing prices have spiraled and years of neglect have left the province in a crisis.

The anecdotal evidence is overwhelming—young people unable to afford to live in their home communities; nurses, teachers, carpenters and service-industry workers unable to find accommodation in the communities in which their skills are needed; the pinch of housing costs hurts the economy, restricts mobility, and discourages immigration.

Our government’s 30-point housing plan — with sustaining budget — is the largest investment in affordable housing the province has ever seen. An historic decision.

We are building the homes people need. No overnight solutions, but the hard work has begun after many years of neglect. Through partnerships with non-profits, other levels of government, Indigenous Peoples, and private sector, we will build more than 114,000 affordable homes over 10 years. This $6.6-billion investment is being made in every region of the province.

Touch on the concrete steps being taken to ensure renter security: Rental Assistance Program (RAP) and Shelter Aid for Elderly Renters (SAFER). Security in housing and pricing is beneficial for tenants and landlords. Cite tax benefits.

This government committed, of course, to ensuring social housing is available for those most in need — women and children fleeing violence, for indigenous people, for students, for the homeless.

Close with a rousing summation of important role non-profit housing will play in coming years in ensuring British Columbians have a home they can afford.

Throw to the minister with words of praise. (10 minutes) (1,200 words)

“Teamwork”

Speech to Asia Pacific Foundation Board of Directors (Nov. 15, 2018)

Speech Arc:

1. Growing Asian markets especially important in an era of strained alliances
2. LNG (at long last) a special opportunity
3. This government all about collaboration and consultation

No one knows better than the people at this dinner the benefits of deeper ties with our Asian trading partners, especially at a time when even longstanding alliances are under strain. The wise counsel and strategic advice provided by the APF board helps the government strengthen connections across the Pacific, which provides economic benefits for British Columbians.

Recount success of the 10-day trade mission to China, Japan and South Korea earlier this year — the promotion of B.C. wood for energy-efficient housing; meetings with China’s National Energy Administration and PetroCanada, a major shareholder in the LNG Canada Project; showcased seafood, agrifood products, craft beer and wine as part of a year-round tourism promotion. Good relations overseas translates to good jobs at home.

The $40-billion liquified natural gas project is a special opportunity and a reflection of what can be accomplished through patience, negotiation and collaboration with partners and stakeholders — businesses, First Nations, governments.

Resource development will happen with an eye on greenhouse gasses and carbon emissions as we seek to meet our ambitious reduction targets. We are also working in concert with First Nations. This approach will be beneficial in the long run and we will inform Asian businesses and governments of our ambitions.

This government is devoted to consultation. After last election, we put aside differences and sought out shared interests to form government with a unique agreement. We believe in consultation and collaboration. Listening even to those who might be sometime rivals is a way to anticipate and address potential difficulties and roadblocks. Collaboration provides competitive advantages. To use a sports metaphor, we believe in teamwork — working together for a common goal enhances our chances for success. (20 minutes) (2,500 words)

Hi JM,

I am just including Robb and Robyn as well.

I am assuming that these releases will be local releases to the areas/regions below:

- The District of Logan Lake will receive $38,650; the City of Port Alberni will receive $28,800; the City of Prince Rupert will receive $22,120; and the municipalities of Castlegar, Nelson, Rossland, and Trail will receive a total of $40,000 for a joint proposal.

If so, I would lean towards Thursday. Monday has the legislation about the ALR, Tuesday has the speed limit thing, and Wednesday has regional releases about apprenticeship investment to several cities and towns including Castlegar, Kamloops, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Terrace which kind of overlap with most of the above locations. All things that will be relevant to the regions you're helping above.

That is my opinion but others may feel differently.

Thanks
Rick

Hey team,

Just following up on my pitch from a couple of weeks back, I'm hoping to find a date when we can put out this release about the $$ we're giving small communities to do cool tech things that make life better for people.

Is there a day next week that could work?

Hi James and JM – Attached is the Smart Communities NR for your review. I thought I sent earlier, but I did not (apologies). Quote is below.

"Smart technology can place useful information at people's fingertips to make our neighbourhoods safer and our lives more efficient," said Bruce Ralston, Minister of Jobs, Trade and Technology. "Small communities should not be left apart from innovation, and our government is taking action to ensure smart solutions are developed across the province to help make life better for everyone."

We need confirmation on a date we can send this out please, along with your A-OK.

Thanks,

I didn't include any speeches. Perhaps the UBCM one would be good?

We can ask IM for Issues Notes as well.

Hello,

Attached are a number of documents relevant to the upcoming Asia Pacific Foundation Board of Directors dinner.

First, a backgrounder for the event with background information on the Asia Pacific Foundation, including a listing of their Board of Directors.

There is a meeting note from last year's APF Board Dinner (November 10, 2017), as well as an April 9, 2018 meeting note for a meeting with Stewart Beck (President and CEO, Asia Pacific Foundation of Canada). Both were provided by JTT.

There are speaking notes from the recent Western Trade Corridors Roundtable – for Premier Horgan and Minister Claire Trevana. Also attached is a draft booklet for the Roundtable provided by JTT. Asia Pacific Foundation was a sponsor of this event.

In discussions, JTT highlighted a major upcoming trade event in Shanghai: China International Import Expo – <https://www.ciie.org/zbh/en/> Attached are greetings.

Below are news releases from the January 2018 Asia trade mission:

<https://news.gov.bc.ca/releases/2018PREM0001-000013>

<https://news.gov.bc.ca/releases/2018PREM0015-000141>

<https://news.gov.bc.ca/releases/2018PREM0007-000077>

As to referencing the Asia trade mission, these are comments from Paul Irwin, Executive Director, East Asia (Jobs, Trade and Technology):

“In terms of the APF and their support for last year's mission, I would characterize their support as ‘strategic advice’ on Asia's shifting economic landscape and how these trends and priorities will impact BC and Canada. These two particular reports below help to inform opportunities to boost BC's trade with Asia – and also what British Columbians think about Asian investment into BC. That helps to inform policies of the BC Gov. We value the insight of the Asia Pacific Foundation's board and its advisors in providing input to BC's domestic and international policy priorities (everything from housing and infrastructure to trade policy and foreign direct investment). We will continue to look to the APF for its wise counsel on how we can continue to deepen our ties with Asia, while ensuring economic benefits to British Columbians. This is particularly important in the context of an FID decision on LNG Canada, with its Asian energy partners.”

- Boosting British Columbia's Exports to Asia a collaborative report between the Province and the APFC that provides insights on opportunities and challenges with supporting companies to export to Asia;
- Asia Pacific Investment Monitor - The Ministry provided $20,000 in financial assistance to the APFC to develop a public web tool to provide more robust information on investment flows between Canada and Asia.

Hi Jen,

The Early Edition would like to invite Premier John Horgan to be a part of our Food Bank Day show on December 7th. It'll be at our downtown Vancouver studio at 700 Hamilton Street.

Last year, we raised a record-breaking $802,000 for food banks across B.C.
It's a great cause and a fun time (compelling guests, live musical performances, live audience).

This year, our theme is "In the Midst of Plenty," and we're really hoping the Premier can join us for a 3-4-minute interview with our host Stephen Quinn, likely sometime between 7 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. (I'll confirm the exact time at a later day)

We always encourage our guests to offer an incentive gift--usually a unique experience or good that can be "auctioned" off for a given price, to encourage people to give. We aim for gifts/experiences that people usually can't buy, so in past years, we've had guests give away an enticing experience (eg. tickets to something), or cooking classes, hand-made luxury goods, a year's supply of beer/wine, etc. Last year, NDP MLA Melanie

Mark canvassed the businesses in her riding, and came up with two gift baskets--one went for $900, the other for $245.

Please let me know if the Premier can be available December 7th.

I'm at 604-662-6114.

Hello Jen,

My name is Sima Ghaffarzadeh and I am the editor-in-chief of Hamyaari Media. For your information, Hamyaari Media is a bi-weekly Persian (Farsi) magazine both on paper and digital, publishing in Vancouver every other Friday. This magazine is founded on the largest and the most active Facebook group of Iranian-Canadians of the West Coast, consisting of over 29,000 members, to get first-hand information about the community and local news of their current home, Canada.

Hereby, we would like to invite Premier John Horgan for an interview on the referendum that British Columbia is having on what voting system we should use for provincial elections. We have the opportunity of inviting Mr. Premier to a radio station and do the interview in partnership with a freelance journalist, Alireza Ahmadian (cc'd), who is a host in that radio station named Spice Radio. This is an excellent opportunity to reach maximum audience since this way the interview will be targeting both audiences of the radio and our biweekly magazine with strong linked social media.

For your information, Mr. Andrew Weaver and Mr. Andrew Wilkinson have also been reached out by us and Mr. Wilkinson has been already interviewed (<https://twitter.com/ahmadianalireza/status/1055647488374231041>) on the same topic which will be published in our upcoming issue on November 2nd. Interviewing Mr. Weaver has been scheduled for the next week.

For your information, here is a brief bio of Alireza Ahmadian:

Please note that this radio station is located in Burnaby and Mr. Premier may attend the studio at your convenience since this is a recorded streaming. Please let me know if the arrangement would work and if not, we can think of an alternative to get the interview done and be ready as soon as possible.

Hello folks,

Attached is an EP with 3 options in the lower mainland for our mixed income housing announcement.
North Vancouver, Coquitlam or South Vancouver

Some things have changed since Craig pitched it – BC housing managed to approve the entire tranche of projects – Craig had originally anticipated that we would have a few batches – that is no longer the case.

The new plan will be do announce the entire tranche, including an interactive map showing where these projects will be located – with a follow up announcement – later this year or in the new year highlighting all the childcare spaces being created as part of these projects.

Key facts – we will be announcing the creation of almost 5000 new homes delivered as part of 72 projects in 42 communities, from Sicamous and Telkwa to Burnaby and Mission.

Please let us know which of these locations would be best for our announcement and we can begin work on planning the event.

Best,

JJ

Dear Premier Horgan, I left a voice message explaining the following:
The Richmond Sentinel is a not-for-profit community newspaper in the city of Richmond BC.

The Referendum is the topic of conversation these days with everyone.
We are a multi-culture community. Most Voters do not understand the options and many want to know if they will get into trouble if they don't fill out the Referendum form and mail it back.

So we have decided to offer you or your representative (preferably you) the opportunity to explain the Referendum and what it will mean to the NDP Party and to British Columbia.

Date - Tuesday, November 13, 2018
Time - 1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Location - Richmond, BC
- Meeting Room to be confirmed

The Format:

- We will film the ``fireside chat`` to air on The Richmond Sentinel's Website and Youtube Channel and cover it in our Newspaper.
- We can Link the interview to the NDP Party's Website (if you choose).
- This is not a public forum. We are offering the same opportunity to the Leaders of the Green Party & Liberal Party.
- Each Party Leader will be interviewed in a separate meeting allowing equal opportunity to share their views.
- The Interviewer is a TV professional who has interviewed VIPs all over the world.
- The production company are professionals that film & stream worldwide.
- If you have questions that you want to provide the Interviewer with, we'd be agreeable to review.

We hope that you will be available to accept our invitation so we can finalize the meeting.

STATEMENT
Premier's statement on Diwali
Links to Hindi and Punjabi translations are at the end of the statement.

VICTORIA - Premier John Horgan has issued the following statement on the occasion of Diwali, the Festival of Lights:

"Today, we join Hindus, Sikhs, Buddhists and Jains all over the province to celebrate Diwali, Deepavali and Bandi Chhor Divas.

"As friends, families and communities come together to celebrate the festival by lighting diyas, we also celebrate the victory of light over darkness, of hope over despair and of good over evil.

"Diwali represents a time of year to reflect on the good in our lives and to think about helping people in our community.

"It is a time to come together and celebrate our diverse backgrounds and beliefs, and rejoice in our shared values of respect, inclusion and equality.

"On behalf of all British Columbians, I wish everyone a happy Diwali, Deepavali and Bandi Chhor Divas!"

PJH reviewing now – one thing we will need is a more explicit mention of hours of care targets & increased staffing. Something like: “Seniors deserve to be cared for. We’re making sure there will be more people to take care of seniors...”

Sage,

It was nice to see you this weekend and to hear more about your job. Keep up the good work—you're making the Premier look great.

As I mentioned we're planning a very special event to celebrate the anniversary of the end of the Grizzly Bear hunt in BC and we'd love for the Premier to attend. As one of the most high profile decision in the NDP platform this would be a great opportunity to celebrate this conservation milestone.

I worked through the caucus coordinator Teresa Scambler, to find the date and she is helping us with the MLA RSVP's. We've also invited political staff and will be inviting DM's and ADM's from Ministries connected with Grizzly conservation.

Kind regards,

Nicholas Scapillati

Last Friday PJH had a briefing from MBR, MSGC and Deputy Milhar on an upcoming Asia Pacific Foundation event. At the end of the briefing, the issue of immigration came up. PJH suggested that it was time to revisit a national immigration strategy (and/or a national dialogue) and that he was interested in raising this issue at the Council of Federation in Dec. There was general agreement as well as some cautions and it sounds like a paper is being drafted in JTT. There was also agreement that future discussions take place and include Don Wright.

I am flagging this for both of you, and if you want, am happy to follow up with DM Milhar (or Don W) to work out next steps.

“The proliferation of mega-mansions on B.C. farmland has driven up prices at a time when the industry faces a demographic crisis. The cost of farmland is cited as the number one barrier to young farmers hoping to enter the market. Keeping farmland at a price that is competitive for farmers, not real estate speculators, is crucial.”

Subject: Kennedy Stewart visit to PJH

Okenge, Mayor Kennedy Stewart is meeting the mayor on Thursday at 10 a.m. I understand he will raise three issues:

- Prospects for a new Vancouver Agreement focusing on the DTES and opioids. A brief note on the earlier agreement from 15 years ago would be helpful. They anticipate federal funding. Mayor Stewart is also meeting Minister Darcy, so she may benefit from the note as well;
- Housing plans, including next week's announcement of new provincial initiatives – I don't believe the Premier has been briefed on them' and
- Prospects for the transit plan – we have messaging on this but if MAH has an update, that would be useful.

Sage, he would like a photo op if possible

Harjinder Thind on the ALR legislation

He said that this might cost NDP some key south Asian and Chinese votes because farmers in these communities live together as large undivided families. He said municipalities such as Richmond had already put a cap on homes to about 10,000 sq ft but now the province wants to further reduce this. He said that all ALR land is not fertile and some is also barren and unproductive then why force farming families to live in small homes. He said this might be an unpopular move for the NDP.

Hi Aaron,
Thanks very much for asking us to chime in.

1. July 2017: Absolutely, it was both leaders' perspective that they have many areas of agreement, including transit, housing and infrastructure. I would add childcare and climate action. Premier Horgan has always tried to focus on the areas where he agrees with the federal government. Prime Minister Trudeau stated his belief the pipeline was necessary, Premier Horgan disagreed and they left it at that. To be honest, the pipeline did not dominate that discussion at all. They did discuss the ocean protection plan separately.
2. April 2018: Premier Horgan's concerns about the risk to our coast and economy of a seven-fold increase in tanker traffic has been and is still clear.
3. The federal government did not threaten to withhold any funding.

Hi Sage...

As promised, I return to ask about a few things.

1. On the first meeting between Horgan and Trudeau in July 2017, I have that:

- Trudeau suggested he and Horgan agreed about more than they disagreed about: they had both been elected to invest in transit, housing and infrastructure, and they should try to minimize their fights over Trans Mountain.
- But Trudeau explained that the pipeline was going to be built and his government was going to do everything in its power to make sure it did.
- Trudeau said he hoped that, at some point, he could provide Horgan with an "off-ramp" -- maybe more money for ocean protection or a higher percentage of unionized contracts for the construction. Two or three things that Horgan could point to while conceding defeat and assigning all responsibility for the pipeline to Trudeau.
- Discussions between the federal and B.C. governments continued along those lines over the next six months.

2. On the meeting between Horgan, Notley and Trudeau in April 2018, I have that;

- Trudeau pressed Horgan about what the federal government could do to allay his concerns about the pipeline, but Horgan did not offer a definitive answer

3. On a general point, it's not clear to me whether the federal government ever threatened to withhold any kind of funding from British Columbia. If I could get that confirmed, one way or the other, it would be much, much appreciated.

Aaron.

I'd like to talk to Geoff Meggs about the Trans Mountain expansion project, discussions between the federal and BC governments, and, specifically, Premier Horgan's meeting with the Prime Minister on July 25, 2017, the meeting between Premier Horgan, Premier Notley and the Prime Minister on April 15, 2018.

This is the full package for seniors:

- We are investing $548 million over the next three years to improve care for seniors – including investments in primary care, home and community care, residential care and assistive living.
- This seniors funding will help us reach the goal of increasing the level of care in residential care homes to an average of 3.36 direct care hours per resident day.

I found two places where it works – the later one works better for flow, but readers might not get to it if they skim.

This fall, British Columbians have an historic opportunity to change our politics and have a system where everyone's vote counts.

I voted for proportional representation and a fairer, more responsive kind of government with better outcomes for people.

Proportional representation means exactly that. Whatever proportion, or share, of the vote a party wins, they get that many seats in government. It's a system that's used by some of the most stable, progressive countries in the world — and it's my hope that when the ballots are counted this fall, BC will join its place among them.

For too long our old, outdated voting system has put too much power in the hands of too few. It leads to polarization and extreme partisanship. It alienates people, and makes a lot of people feel as if their vote doesn't count. Voter turnout keeps going down. And young people are not participating.

A student asked me recently. "What's the biggest change with a pro-rep government?" The answer is simple: you matter. Your vote matters.

Under proportional representation, governments can't win 100% of the power with less than 50% of the vote. We've seen that happen in BC, and across Canada, many times before and it reduces people's faith in democracy.

If you join me in saying yes to pro rep this fall, BC will try pro rep for two elections. Then, there will be a second referendum to confirm your choice. I believe everyone will appreciate having a voting system that puts people first, one that's focused on cooperation, not confrontation, where elected officials work together for the good of our province, our economy and our people.

Governments elected by proportional representation better reflect the diversity of the people they represent. They elect more women, and more women of colour. They give more power — not less — to rural and remote areas. Their elections see increased voter turnout, especially among younger people.

Most importantly, their parties in government work together for people. There's less space for parties to be arrogant and unaccountable. Governments elected under proportional representation need to do what so many of us do every day: work together to get things done.

Some of this means working with people with different opinions and values — which is a good thing, I believe — and the BC NDP and BC Greens have shown that great things can happen for people when parties work together. Listening to people from other parties makes governments stronger, and more representative, and it's good for democracy and for BC.

Hi everyone:

Here is the economic message revised slightly on climate with PJH's input – otherwise he's comfortable with this approach.

For review.

November 17, 2018

VANCOUVER, BC – On November 16, Vancouver hosted more than 1,400 changemakers, influencers, equality advocates, business leaders and young women at the WE for SHE forum, one of North America's largest events in support of gender equality. The goal of the forum is to grow the Canadian economy by championing gender diversity in leadership as a business imperative. A recent report from the McKinsey Global Institute found that addressing gender inequality could add $150 billion in incremental GDP in 2026, six per cent higher than business-as-usual GDP growth forecasts over the next decade.

Now in its fifth year, the forum focused on Creating an Equal Future and the role that business leaders, champions and community members each play to further gender equality. The forum's speakers included The Honourable Janet Austin, Lieutenant Governor, Province of BC, as well as notable business leaders and teen transgender advocates Levi Nahirney and Tru Wilson. The interactive day provided thought-provoking education and best-practice sharing for business leaders as well as a variety of workshops for young leaders. The afternoon brought everyone together to create action plans for an equal future.

Hi folks,

I had a conversation with both Geoff and PJH last night about the breadcrumb announcements and the Climate Launch. They certainly had some feedback.

- 1) What does “notionally approved by Treasury Board” mean in the social housing retro fit announcement mean? This cannot go forward unless it has full approval.
- 2) If it does get full approval they would like it to be personalized, perhaps at an apartment/house that will be getting retrofits and maybe with seniors
- 3) Zero emission cars is fine. Need a nice line up of buses and cars.
- 4) Weaver should be invited to both breadcrumb announcements
- 5) We need to go back to the drawing board on locations and look for the Launch. Geoff would like it in Vancouver and at a location that looks “green and tech-ie”. The Vancouver pieces is slightly complicated as we have cabinet in Victoria that morning and that cannot be moved to Vancouver. Amber, please take a look at flight options
- 6) Weaver, MCJ and MGH need to be at the Launch.

Hi, Aaron:

Not sure who handles this sort of thing but if it's not you and you can pass this along to the appropriate person, my thanks in advance.

Please see below, a story from The Northern Sentinel in Kitimat printed Oct. 11, 2018 and framed around the ceremonies held there Oct. 6 following the LNG Canada announcement. Intrigued by one quote from the premier. It's about two-thirds down into this story and I've highlighted it in red.

A 'new' Mills Memorial Hospital in Terrace is a long-standing issue here and in the region. That a new one is going to be built was announced in February by health minister Adrian Dix. Subsequent to that, the business plan is, I think, almost finished. Actually, I think it's a bit late.

But in reading this quote, it sounds as if the project is still conditional.

Hoping you/others can clarify.

By the way, do have any idea when the province will announce next steps in local hire, etc. for large scale public sector projects? I know the first announcements concerned major transportation projects down south but believe that policy of local hire is to be expanded elsewhere. The Mills Memorial project is going to be a significant project in this city and region so am anticipating local hire/local business contract opportunities will be top of mind for many.

Hey Kate,

Can you have a look at the email below and let me know how would you like to proceed?

Also, we just got a couple of jerseys for the Premier to try on before they put his name on it – XL and XXL, Ramesh is getting in touch with Amber/Chris to organize the trying on.

Hi Kelly and Ramesh.

Just want to loop you in on this opportunity...

First – apologies that this is coming rather late.

We just got notice that Hockey Canada is offering the Province 15 second spots on their centre ice jumbotron at the world championship games.
The Province would get two “appearances” during each game.

We have drafted two possible 15 second messages, one focusses on the Games/teams, the other on the inspiration for everyone to be active. (Script attached)
Deadline for providing videos to Hockey Canada is November 16. The required specs are attached for your reference.

The key question: would the Premier like to do these messages? Would he like to do one, and MLB the other? Would MLB do both?

*Special note: It is our understanding that additionally Hockey Canada will be offering a 30 second spot for a welcome/greetings to the Premier at the opening game.
Cathy is nailing down that information today.*

SUGGESTED PRODUCTION:

PJH and/or MLB wears WJH jersey which has been supplied by Dean to the MO.
If not raining: shoot outside of Legislature, with building in background
If raining: inside in Hall of Honour

MINISTER’S SCHEDULE:

We only need 15 minutes or so to record these.
Two options currently in MLB schedule on Thursday November 8th: at 2:30pm, at 4pm.

TECHNICAL:

Digital team is available to shoot this this week at the above time, if this works.

Best
Carolyn

Hi Rosa,
Following the briefing the premier requested changes to his speaking notes – some noted here and some we will need to talk through.

More detail overall on the full suite of childcare affordability measures

- Transformative for families and children
- Good for families, kids and the economy
- A good mix – non-profit, for profit & in-home

Let me know when we can chat this morning.

Hi all,

Attached is a new version of the NR.

The lede is changed from "$10 a day" to "$200 a month or less", so that the math doesn't necessarily work out to 10-a-day. Dewar is good with the 200 reference.

Also, you'll see the Sonia quote right under the PJH quote.

Hi all,

I spoke with Vilupti Lok Barrineau, the VP at the Asia Pacific Foundation, and she ran me through some of the key points for next Thursday evening's dinner with PJH. I am happy to follow up with her again if you have more questions, or to connect you with her directly. I'm not sure if this is new or helpful, but I wanted to pass it on just in case.

She suggested that in order to keep things conversational and avoid it becoming a rapid fire q&a session, that the Premier come prepared with questions to ask the Board. There's currently a big focus on the Pacific Gateway (and some of the attendees were also at the Pacific Gateway roundtable he attended in October, with Ministers Trevena and Ralston). The group is very engaged and will have a lot to say and a lot of questions; they're very strongly pro-trade and happy to speak about opportunities throughout the region.

She also highlighted two of the attendees that would be good to speak with- Dominic Barton and Murad Al-Katib (link to bios here), who are very open and friendly. The Premier connected with Stewart Beck, the President and CEO of the Foundation, at the Pacific Gateway Roundtable, and apparently left a very positive impression (She said Stewart enjoyed his Trudeau water glass spilling story).

I have updated the timeline and logistics details on Asana and in the events calendar. Amber, there are a few small details outstanding, but I expect to have it all confirmed tomorrow, and will let you know when I do. Vanessa, I will be onsite by 6:15 and ready to meet you and the Premier and show you in when you arrive.

Please let me know if you have any additional questions or need any support from my end.

Thanks!

We are so happy to hear that Premier Horgan is able to participate in the show. Our Producers for the show, Michael Shames and Rich McHugh (copied here) will be handling all of the logistics for the event.

We will be sharing additional information soon, but in the meantime, we would like to ask you to send the following:

- A high resolution professional photograph of Premier Horgan
- A 200 word max biography
- Indicate if you would be comfortable with Climate Reality naming you as a guest in a press release announcing the broadcast
- A quote from you about why people should tune in to watch (optional)
 - Ex: "I'm so excited be a part of this one-of-a-kind broadcast and hear what climate scientists, health professionals, and Vice President Gore have to say."

Thank you,
Sean

 > "This project takes a major step towards universal child care in British Columbia. The demand for this program was so strong that we expanded it to cover more children and more sites in every region of the province in the prototype stage," said Katrine Conroy, federal Minister of Children and Family Development. "We want to make life more affordable for families, and this investment will demonstrate the low-cost, high-quality care B.C. parents can look forward to as we fully implement ChildCare BC."
 > As well, each site will receive a one-time quality improvement grant in 2019 to help enhance the quality of the programs it delivers. The amount of the quality improvement grant for each site will be determined as part of the Province's evaluations of the sites' programs and improvement plans.
 > "Prototype sites give us a glimpse of what the future of universal child care in B.C. can be, and are critical as we design and refine our program moving forward," said Katrina Chen, B.C.'s Minister of State for Child Care. "They build on the work we've already done to bring affordability relief to thousands of families through universal fee reductions and the Affordable Child Care Benefit."

> Parents who are not accessing these low-cost spaces may still be eligible for support through the Affordable Child Care Benefit, which provides up to $1,250 per child a month for families with an annual income of $111,000. Families using licensed child care may also see savings through the Child Care Fee Reduction, which has so far helped to reduce the cost of almost 52,000 child care spaces throughout the province.

> * The Province initially planned to convert 1,800 licensed child care spaces into low-cost prototype spaces. More than 300 B.C. child care operators applied to participate in the universal prototype initiative. Initial plans only included converting infant/toddler spaces. However, in order to get a strong sense of what will be needed to expand universal child care in the future, the B.C. government worked with the federal government to expand the selection criteria to include sites representing all age groups and licensed child care types. The expansion of selection criteria and strong response from providers has allowed government to convert 37% more spaces than its original target.

Hi all,

I noticed one thing that I'd thought I'd send a message to see if it can be changed.

Bill 29 (and 94) resulted in about 8,000 job losses just in the first term of the Liberals – so I'd say 8,000 within just a few years – and many thousands since. Or just thousands of workers...

Hi Evan,
When the premier speaks at HEU's convention (November 9), I'd love to get a copy of his speaking notes. Is that possible?

The notes will be checked against delivery and essentially be a resource for the articles, newsletters and social media we take on as part of our convention.

Let me know the process around getting a copy of the notes.

- A new police force isn't created over the weekend but the Province is committed to working with the city as they move forward.
- We want to make sure there is a solid plan in place to ensure the people of Surrey have strong policing they can be confident in.

Hi Bruce,

A few comments about the attached documents, should they come up in conversation. I'll send a version of this email to PJH as well.

The two speeches were written by Tom Hawthorn. I've done very little editing as I'm hoping for PJH's feedback on Tom's overall writing style. (I'm optimistic – it's clear to me that Tom has put time into trying to capture John's speaking style.)

Having said that, I will be offering Tom the following feedback for the next versions:

Our House / BC Non Profit Housing Association

- The (re-)announcement is somewhat buried
- Too many numbers overall
- Be more explicit about how their policies informed the NDP's election platform & housing plan

Teamwork / Asia Pacific Foundation

I'm really pleased with the core narrative on this one - but it could be much shorter and has some obvious redundancies.

The attached questions to ask the directors of the APF. We've had advice they would appreciate an interactive QA session where they both ask and answer questions.

Thanks, Bruce. I hope you have a good event tomorrow. I'm sure it will be moving.

Best,

Evan - as requested info on PRES and messaging follows:

The PRES (Peace Region Electricity Supply Project) is a new proposed 230 kV double-circuit transmission line which would run approximately 57km from the new Shell Groundbirch Station located about 30 kms east of Chetwynd to the future Site C substation.

- It would add around 400 MW of capacity in the South Peace and improve service reliability for existing load served by the Dawson Creek/Chetwynd Area Transmission (DCAT) Project.
- Estimated cost to build the line is between $204 million and $360 million.
- Demand for electricity is growing in the South Peace Region, mainly due to unconventional gas production and companies wishing to use clean electricity from BC Hydro to power their facilities.

- To meet this need, more electricity needs to be supplied.
- BC Hydro recently completed Dawson Creek/Chetwynd Area (DCAT) transmission line as a first step.
- BC Hydro's proposed Peace Region Electricity Supply Project (PRES) is designed to bring additional clean, renewable electricity from its generating facilities to the south Montney area.
- The PRES project offers the opportunity to realize significant GHG reductions as producers choose to run their operations with electricity off the grid rather than self-generate using gas or diesel.
- Full electrification of expected new industrial loads in the Montney Basin – enabled by PRES and other transmission lines – could avoid up to 4 million tonnes of emissions per year.
- Consultations with First Nations and local governments on the PRES project have been ongoing since 2013, and will continue as the project is further developed.
- The Government of B.C. along with Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are working with the federal government to evaluate electricity projects, including the PRES, for their ability to cost-effectively reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions.

- Based on the outcome of these studies, the federal government, through the Green Infrastructure Fund, may share project costs to provide the necessary capital to develop the required infrastructure needed to reduce GHGs through upstream electrification in the northeast.

Evan – you requested I follow up on when the feds will be making a decision on funding BC Hydro's PRES project. You'll recall we were hoping for mid to late Oct. Now looks like the fed TB decision will be mid-Dec

Subject: Info request to the party leaders

Hi Jen, I've been asked to make a request of all three party leaders, not sure who to send this to for Premier Horgan. Can you forward, or advise?

Cheers,
Justine

Good day. With just a short window left for British Columbians to vote in the electoral reform referendum, we are seeking some clarity on behalf of our readers about where each of the party leaders stand on some of the questions that would be put to an all-party legislative committee if voters opt for change.

Because the decisions would be made by members of all three parties after the referendum, we believe it is useful if voters know ahead of time what they might expect in terms of how each party plans to address these unanswered questions.

We are asking each of you for your preferences on the questions listed below. To give us time to put the answers together before the end of the voting period, we are asking for your response by noon of Friday, Nov. 16.

Thanks in advance for your assistance!

IF IT IS MIXED-MEMBER PROPORTIONAL (MMP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

- Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.
- Exact ratio of FPTP seats to List PR seats: up to a maximum of 40 per cent of List PR seats.
- The type of party list to be used: Closed, open or open with a party list option.
- Whether voters will have one vote that counts for both the local candidate and the List PR seat allocation; or two votes, one for the local candidate and one for the List PR seat allocation.
- The method for determining the order in which List PR seats are allocated.

IF IT IS DUAL-MEMBER PROPORTIONAL (DMP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

- Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.

IF IT IS RURAL-URBAN PROPORTIONAL (RUP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

- Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.
- Ratio of FPTP seats to List PR seats in MMP regions.
- Closed or open party lists.
- Whether voters will have one vote or two.

Justine

Hello both!

Nothing to add regarding the outline, other than to say it's a solid framework but don't be afraid to move stuff around if it makes sense.

A couple of comments: I'd stay at a higher level on most things, don't get too granular unless it really helps tell a story. Speaking of stories, try to find some places for PJH to tell stories about the people he's met and how what we've done has helped them. Leave out certification as a topic for now.

Attached are a few more assets to help you:

A later version of PJH's comments to the BC FED, a CUPE speech and a framework for talking about our economic vision.

Hi folks,

I've reworked the UVic release substantially. More to the point, I've added the passive construction component.

Please review.

Note 1: This doesn't yet have the quote from MLA Weaver. Danielle/Donna, do we have it and can we add it?

Note 2: Donna, I make a reference in the second PJH quote about government and GPC working together. Can we get that approved?

It would be our privilege if we could receive from you again this year some year-end thoughts.

Ideally these pieces would run about 600 words and identify some important themes, elements, and trends in the province that you believe matter most to those here. Some prescriptions are also welcomed as part of the expression of your insights.

I'd like to get these from you by Dec. 10, and as per usual, there is a mystery prize for early submissions.

Please let me know this week if you are interested in contributing, and many thanks in advance for your assistance.

Rick, I am happy to jump on a call this week and talk details for Premier Horgan's participation in our broadcast next month. I would like to ask about a few details as well.

To confirm, we would like to have Premier Horgan join us somewhere between 7 - 8 pm pacific time on Monday night, December 3rd. We normally will find a local studio where our guest can join us via satellite. Will Premier Horgan be in Victoria at that time? And is there a studio that you normally use for him when he does satellite TV interviews?

I also want to introduce one more member of our team. Emma MacEachern handles all of the logistics for our guests. Once we locate a studio, she will be in touch to confirm the details and to offer any assistance you might need on the night of the interview.

Thank you for all of your help. Again, if you want to do a call this week to confirm any information, please let us know.

We will be sharing additional information soon, but in the meantime, we would like to ask you to send the following:

- A 200 word max biography
- Indicate if you would be comfortable with Climate Reality naming you as a guest in a press release announcing the broadcast

 - Ex: "I'm so excited be a part of this one-of-a-kind broadcast and hear what climate scientists, health professionals, and Vice President Gore have to say."

Making sure B.C.'s forestry sector has a strong, sustainable, future

By Premier John Horgan

From day one, our government has been about people. We're working every day to make life better for people all over the province. That means investing in good-paying, sustainable jobs in every corner of B.C., including in B.C.'s iconic forest industry.

The forest sector is a cornerstone of economic activity in British Columbia, supporting families, communities, and jobs across our province. As a major manufacturing and export industry, there are forestry jobs all over B.C. In rural and remote communities, forestry employs more than 57,000 British Columbians and supports over 7,000 businesses. One-third of our exports are forest products, which means that forestry jobs also extend into urban B.C., in occupations such as transportation, warehousing, shipping, towing, customs, accounting, sales and marketing and others.

Given forestry's long history in B.C., it would be easy to view the industry as part of the 'old economy' – different and apart from our growing technology sector. Fact is, forestry is a significant customer for parts of B.C.'s technology industry, and technology is central to every part of modern forest management.

Today's foresters use satellite-enabled technologies to see through the forest canopy to direct harvest planning, monitor site conditions and respond more effectively to wildfires. Drones are used to cost-effectively scan large areas of forest. Technology makes harvesting operations safer, and allows remote-controlled machines to access slopes that would be too dangerous to harvest by hand. Modern lumber manufacturing is high-tech too, using scanners to optimize the use of each log and computer-linked machinery to guide each step of processing logs into lumber. New products like Cross Laminated Timber (CLT) create additional jobs and value from our lumber, and make it possible to build strong, safe skyscrapers from wood.

Wood products are used in tall applications and small ones, from the 17-storey Brock Commons student residence at UBC to the 2,000 new supportive modular homes that were built in 22 communities during 2018 to help address B.C.'s homelessness crisis. Wood building materials can also help British Columbians tackle climate change and spur a greater demand for top quality manufactured wood products as a clean, natural, healthy, renewable building material.

Government is working with First Nations, communities and the industry to develop a fair, lasting strategy to strengthen forestry all over B.C. I asked Forests Minister Doug Donaldson to lead the Coastal Forestry Revitalization Initiative, which will renew our forest policy framework, help to expand domestic manufacturing, encourage getting more value out of every log, provide new opportunities for First Nations and encourage innovation and a better business climate.

We're moving forward on our government's commitment to implement UNDRIP and to build a true partnership with First Nations based on rights, respect and reconciliation. In the forest sector, we're continuing to explore ways

Indigenous communities can benefit from forestry activities on their lands. The Province recently entered into a unique community forest agreement for the Qala:yit Community Forest – the first of its kind in B.C. The Pacheedaht First Nation, BC Timber Sales, Cowichan Lake Community Forest Co-operative, and Province are all working together to create good jobs and more opportunities for people in the Cowichan Lake communities. Partnerships like these will inspire new ventures and processes of working together, protect the environment, promote economic opportunity and growth, and manage land and resources.

Across B.C., 2018 was another devastating wildfire season, with over 1.3 million hectares of land impacted by wildfires. Hundreds of industry contractors assisted the BC Wildfire Service in fighting the fires and keeping communities safe. Thanks to everyone's dedication and hard work, not one life was lost. Acting on lessons learned during 2017 and 2018, as well as the recommendations from the report by George Abbott and Chief Maureen Chapman, the BC Wildfire Service is looking at changes to be better prepared for 2019 wildfires.

The TLA selected a theme of "Making it Work" for your January 2019 convention, representing so much that is going on across the forest sector as well as your organization's 75 years of representing logging contractors and other members. In that regard, I am pleased that Dan Miller has been able to help logging contractors and licensees reach agreement to work together on developing rate models and rate determination factors.

Looking forward, B.C.'s forest sector continues to explore innovative ways to make better use of our vast resources. Together with partners in all parts of the industry, our government is working to grow demand for our wood products, design services, and building technologies and to expand foreign markets for B.C. lumber. We're working hard to make sure B.C.'s forest industry has a strong, sustainable future – for everyone. I look forward to working with you to continue building a better British Columbia.

Hi Sage,

A speech draft for your consideration.

At 2,480, I'm feeling it's a little long, just over 16 minutes at 150 wpd - a fairly typical speed.

(I was surprised to see Bruce Ralston's speech timed out at 200 words per minute. If he's really reading that fast, he should stop. Even if his delivery is flawless, no audience can comprehend at that speed for any period longer than a television commercial).

In any case, I wanted to include a highlight reel from the material you sent, but still leave room to remove or add things that are a greater or lesser priority.

I'm happy to follow up directly in the coming days - to respond to edits, edit it down and/or to render a bullet-point version for easy reference.

I should be near the phone all day tomorrow if you'd like to chat.^{s.22}

Subject: For review: Transgender Day of Remembrance - joint statement PS Dean & PJH

Hello all – the below statement was reviewed & okayed by PS Dean.
We issued a statement from PJH last year and caucus sent a statement in 2015 (cannot find 2016).

For Immediate Release
2018PREM-90285
November 20, 2018

Statement on the Transgender Day of Remembrance

Premier John Horgan and Parliamentary Secretary for Gender Equity, Mitzi Dean, have issued the following statement to mark the Transgender Day of Remembrance:

“Each year on November 20, we honour the memory of transgender people we have lost because of transphobia and violence, and vow to fight against the erasure of trans people and trans identities in our culture and our history.

“As we remember those who have been taken from their friends, family and communities, we commit to working together to make our province a place where transgender people are safe, loved and celebrated.

“For too long, B.C. has fallen behind when it comes to supporting people who are transgender, non-binary and gender-diverse. Everyone deserves to be treated with dignity and respect, and to live in safe, supportive communities.

“We are proud to stand with trans people in our province, and to move forward by reinstating the B.C. Human Rights Commission, promoting sexual orientation and gender identity awareness in schools, giving people a non-binary gender option on government identification, and improving access to gender-affirming surgeries across BC. But we still have a long way to go.

“At a time when the human rights of transgender people are under sustained attack in the United States and elsewhere, it is more important than ever to affirm our commitment to fight for safety, inclusion and justice for trans people in our province.

“We will not be silent in the face of injustice. We will not let the memories of our trans friends, family and neighbours be lost to violence.

“Together, we remember, and pledge to do better.”

Subject: FW: TNO SA monitoring?

FYI and further to our discussion please note the attached. First is the current distribution list for the SA media monitor package (twice daily). Second is the current services profile. It is true that only the first hour of Thind is monitored and then summarized by our single S Asian Online Editor, Ajaib Sidhu. This is a resource issue – were we to do all three hours it would impact the ability to cover the other daily media. The other significant pressure that is faced is the request for transcripts (in English) – usually from staff who would like to follow exactly what their minister (for ex) said on air. This is possible for short excerpts but becomes very difficult to manage for complete programs. The rule of thumb is 1:4 i.e. a five minute segment would take twenty minutes to transcribe in English, and so forth.

I'll be looking at the package to see what we might do about form and content. Also note Scott's suggestions about additional media to be included.

For discussion.

According to the best of my knowledge, we should monitor Punjabi radio show "Sargarmia" on CHKG 96.1 FM, Monday to Friday from 1:45pm to 2:05pm.

This current affairs based segment presented by Gurpreet Sahota, has a huge listenership, tons of followers on social media and is a source of information for some top media outlets in the South Asian community.

Hi Evan,

A situation report on the current services would be a good place to start.

TNO currently monitors:

Television:

CHNM - Omni TV - Punjabi evening news

Talk:

CKYE Harjinder Thind

Radio News:

CKYE (RED FM)

CJRJ (SPICE)

Print:

Indo-Canadian Voice

Records but rarely has time to monitor:

KRPI (South Asian Voice)

Staffing:

TNO has a single Punjabi-speaking editor working out of our Vancouver office 8:30am-4:30pm M-F. Efforts to hire a backup editor as part of the succession planning initiative have, as of yet, been unsuccessful.

Pressures:

Editor is often tasked with proofing significant amount of op-ed and news release material due to the shortage of bilingual staff.

Past client requests:

KRPI Dr Romana Show

KRPI Harjit Gill Show

CKYE Evening Show

PTC - Punjabi evening news

Transcription service over current summary.

Technology:

We are currently working with Microsoft to utilize Azure's audio-to-text translation capabilities. Test is still in phase one and years away from not requiring proofreading.

The single biggest request from current clients would be to expand existing services so key programming could be translated and transcribed.

We have recently added TransLink as a client. Several staff there have remarked they prefer our SA monitoring to Mirems (commercial service) due to its timeliness and accuracy.

If we are considering making significant changes to SA sources, I recommend consulting with key clients with realistic staffing and output projections first.

Let me know if you wish to sit down and discuss.

Hi Sheena,
I'm reaching out on behalf of the CKNW Kids' Fund to invite the Premier to join us as a guest for the 41st Annual CKNW Kids' Fund Pledge Day.

On Tuesday December 4th, CKNW radio will broadcast live from the rooftop room of the Fairmont Hotel Vancouver from 5:30 am to 7:00 pm. The goal of the day is to raise funds for the CKNW Kids' Fund – a children's charity that provides grants to improve the lives of BC children living with special needs. Pledge Day is our single biggest fundraiser of the year, allowing the Kids' Fund to help thousands of families throughout the following year.

The broadcast itself will feature families the Kids' Fund has helped, and will host a broader conversation about the importance of philanthropy and why giving back should be part of an organization's culture. Each year some of the most influential philanthropists in Vancouver appear as guests on the day in hopes to inspire listeners to give generously and get involved in their community. Over 150 guests will attend, including Vancouver's highest profile CEOs, philanthropists, community leaders and individuals striving to make a positive difference.

Let me know if the Premier is able to join us – happy to discuss further if you have any questions.

Warmest regards,
Alan.

Reporter: Justine Hunter, Globe and Mail - BC Bureau

Deadline: ASAP

Request: I'm working on a feature this week on the electrification of B.C., planning to write from a consumer's point of view.

What info can you send me on the cost of household heating – electricity versus natural gas – both for northern B.C. and for residents in the milder regions? Depending on the source, I've read that heat pumps can be comparable to natural gas for home heating under certain circumstances.

At the briefing in October by senior deputy ministers on the LNG Canada deal, we were told Site C won't provide enough energy to meet the province's electrification needs, and that we are going to need a lot more renewable power. Can you provide me with the latest numbers of what the gap is? So in the year 2030, with the status quo plans, we will have XX amount of capacity and Xx amount of demand for electricity?

What capacity does B.C. presently have for hydrogen fueling stations, and how many hydrogen-fueled cars are on the road in B.C. today?

I probably will have another question or two as I dig deeper into this topic, but hope you can get me started with this.

Suggested Responses:

GCPE to offer an interview and provide the following on background:

Q: What info can you send me on the cost of household heating – electricity versus natural gas – both for northern B.C. and for residents in the milder regions? Depending on the source, I've read that heat pumps can be comparable to natural gas for home heating under certain circumstances.

A: Energy bill savings for the average home switching to a heat pump would be in the range of 5-10%. Homes in the northern parts of the province use more energy on heating, but could see similar percentage savings provided they are using cold-climate heat pumps that work year round.

Launched at the end of September this year, EfficiencyBC (<https://efficiencybc.ca>) is an integrated offer of financial incentives, information and support to help households and businesses save energy and reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions by switching to high efficiency heating equipment and making building envelope improvements.

Residential Renovation Program:

- New incentives for homeowners to upgrade their windows and doors, and switch to high efficiency electric heat pumps for space heating and water heating, for example: $2000 for an air-source heat pump for space heating (and up to $4000 in some partnering municipalities), up to $1000 for windows/doors.
- Enhanced utility program offers for other high efficiency space and water heating equipment, and insulation, for example: up to $1,200 each for basement insulation, external wall cavity insulation, and external wall sheathing insulation.
- New bonus incentives of up to $2000 for homeowners who undertake multiple upgrades and complete energy assessments on their home.
- $300 rebate for hiring an EnerGuide Home Energy Advisor to do a personalized energy assessment of your home ($450 in some partnering municipalities)
- Free energy coaching services by phone and email to help you make decisions about your renovation project.
- Most rebates don't require pre-registration—just install your eligible measure then fill out our rebate application form.

Commercial Renovation Program:

- Program for commercial buildings, multi-unit residential buildings and non-profit housing.
- Whole building, performance-based offer of $40 - $70 per tonne of GHG reductions (up to $200,000) integrated with partner utility and BC Housing offers.
- Measures include fuel switching to high efficiency electric space and water heating equipment, installing high efficiency gas-fired space and water heating equipment, as well as improvements to mechanical systems and building envelopes.
- Up to $20,000 for energy studies to identify cost-effective improvements.

Saving Money

The renovation incentives launched as part of the EfficiencyBC program complement and enhance programs currently offered, including BC Hydro and FortisBC's Home Renovation Rebate program, FortisBC's Commercial Custom Design Program, BC Hydro's Custom Rebate Program, and BC Housing's Social Housing Incentive Program.

The following example shows of how people can save money when they take advantage of the EfficiencyBC program:

- City of Vancouver resident, home heated with natural gas, natural gas water heater
- Undertakes a pre- and post-upgrade energy assessment ($300 from EfficiencyBC, $150 from City of Vancouver)
- Convert to electric air source heat pump ($2000 from EfficiencyBC, $2000 from City of Vancouver)
- Install condensing tankless natural gas water heater ($500 from FortisBC)
- Add attic insulation of R30 x 1000ft² ($600 from BC Hydro)
- Home Energy Improvement Bonus, improving EnerGuide score by 60% ($1200)
- Total Rebate: $6750

Other examples are available in the backgrounder found at <https://news.gov.bc.ca/releases/2018EMPR0052-001891>

Also - here is the link to FortisBC's website that provides a comparison of pricing for natural gas to other types of energy choices for heating:

Q: At the briefing in October by senior deputy ministers on the LNG Canada deal, we were told Site C won't provide enough energy to meet the province's electrification needs, and that we are going to need a lot more renewable power. Can you provide me with the latest numbers of what the gap is? So in the year 2030, with the status quo plans, we will have XX amount of capacity and Xx amount of demand for electricity?

A:

- By 2030, with status quo plans (including Site C), BC Hydro will be able to generate approximately 70,000 GWh/year of energy.
- Electrification of sectors of the economy to meet the Province's carbon reduction commitments will result in higher levels of electricity demand.
- Under BC Hydro's electrification scenario, it requires about 73,000 GWh/year by 2030, rising to 75,000 GWh/year by 2032, and 80,000/year by 2035. This scenario is subject to change as a result of electrification measures that are anticipated in the Province's upcoming clean growth strategy.

Q: What capacity does B.C. presently have for hydrogen fueling stations, and how many hydrogen-fueled cars are on the road in B.C. today?

A: Build-out of the first six public retail hydrogen fuelling stations in B.C. has begun, starting this year with two stations in the Lower Mainland and one in the Capital Regional District, and completion of all stations towards the end of 2020.

B.C. currently has 12 hydrogen fuel cell cars on the roads today.

4,900 new affordable rental homes on the way for B.C. families

By Premier John Horgan

Every person in this province deserves a secure place to call home. But years of inaction on the B.C. housing crisis has left people unable to find affordable housing, and even middle-income families struggling to get by. We're making different choices.

On Tuesday, our government made a historic announcement - 4,900 new affordable mixed-income rental homes will be built in 42 communities around the province. This new housing is the first to be delivered through the Building BC: Community Housing Fund, a $1.9 billion investment over 10 years to deliver 14,000 affordable rental homes for seniors, families, and low-and-middle income earners in B.C.

From Surrey, to Kamloops to Vancouver and Vanderhoof, the 72 projects will include new, affordable homes for people across a range of income levels.

The non-profits and co-ops will be built over the next two to three years. The new homes are designed to address the need for affordable housing for middle, moderate, and low-income earners, in response to a housing crisis that has made housing unaffordable for even middle-class families. The units will also include heavily subsidized rentals for seniors and people with disabilities, and homes for low wage workers.

It's an important part of our work to take action on the housing crisis and give people a break from skyrocketing housing costs around B.C. It also means people can stay in their communities, and be part of B.C.'s robust, sustainable economy.

Budget 2018 included the biggest investment in housing affordability in B.C.'s history – more than $7 billion over 10 years. We are beginning to see the impacts of that funding on the ground as part of our 30 point, cross-government plan to tackle supply, curb demand and provide more security for renters.

Our Rapid Response to Homelessness program has already been put into action. By the end of 2019, we will have built more than 2000 modular homes with 24/7 support services in 22 communities. So far, 600 modular homes have been built in four B.C. communities, helping people get out of tent cities, off the street, and on the path to opportunity. We've also started 12 projects that will provide 280 safe new homes for women and children fleeing violence and abuse. And for the first time in Canadian history, a province has taken steps, together with Indigenous leaders, to directly address the housing needs of Indigenous communities on-reserve.

People need an opportunity to survive, thrive, and get ahead. That starts with knowing that you and your family have a place to come home to.

We're working collaboratively across the aisle and with local partners to deliver safe, secure, and affordable housing for British Columbians. It's good for people, it's good for communities and it's good for the economy. And it's only the beginning.

Subject: Speech Prep at 11am today

Hi Both,

The Premier would rather review his Asia pacific notes today at 11am. (Not Housing). Sage can you prep for that speech instead.

I'll confirm another block of time for the housing speech.

The Ministry wants to move this to the 27th (Tuesday, the day after the one approved). This actually works nicely because Minister James will be doing the quarterly economic update on the morning of the 26th and it would be a conflict. Let us know if this is a problem for any reason.

For invites- we are thinking local Victoria mlas (we haven't asked for the Premier in his official capacity, but would be happy if he came), school board, municipal government, and the providers receiving the funding.

Note on specific words and language: the outline is just a guideline. Very open to changes and improvements.

The “what we did” pieces at the front - social services, min wage etc - should be a quick, light touch before moving on to .

Four conditions for any LNG development:

- Providing a fair rate of return for British Columbians on their natural resources,
- Job opportunities and training for British Columbians,
- Meaningful partnerships with First Nations and,
- The project must fit within our climate action plans and our targets.

BCBC MOU (draft attached, still in late stages of discussion) KMs:

- Demonstrates how important it is for our government to be working in partnership with business
- Government acknowledges competitiveness pressures
- We want the Clean BC brand to be a commitment to climate action here and abroad
- Leading the way in Canada and globally, providing business here with a competitive advantage

Coming:

- Updated child care KMs
- Port expansion details.

I've reviewed the material and will look to writing a version that reflects your new outline. I also have attached a copy of that doc with a couple of highlights and notes, in hopes that you might have a bit more background handy.

Also, you mentioned having "more notes to pass along." Any other feedback is certainly helpful as it may be a more effective guide in getting toward a useful version on this draft.

Making sure B.C.'s forestry sector has a strong, sustainable, future

By Premier John Horgan

From day one, our government has been about people. We're working every day to make life better for people all over the province. That means investing in good-paying, sustainable jobs in every corner of B.C., including in B.C.'s iconic forest industry.

The forest sector is a cornerstone of economic activity in British Columbia, supporting families, communities, and jobs across our province. As a major manufacturing and export industry, there are forestry jobs all over B.C. In rural and remote communities, forestry employs more than 57,000 British Columbians and supports over 7,000 businesses. One-third of our exports are forest products, which means that forestry jobs also extend into urban B.C., in occupations such as transportation, warehousing, shipping, towing, customs, accounting, sales and marketing and others.

Given forestry's long history in B.C., it would be easy to view the industry as part of the 'old economy' – different and apart from our growing technology sector. Fact is, forestry is a significant customer for parts of B.C.'s technology industry, and technology is central to every part of modern forest management.

Today's foresters use satellite-enabled technologies to see through the forest canopy to direct harvest planning, monitor site conditions and respond more effectively to wildfires. Drones are used to cost-effectively scan large areas of forest. Technology makes harvesting operations safer, and allows remote-controlled machines to access slopes that would be too dangerous to harvest by hand. Modern lumber manufacturing is high-tech too, using scanners to optimize the use of each log and computer-linked machinery to guide each step of processing logs into lumber. New products like Cross Laminated Timber (CLT) create additional jobs and value from our lumber, and make it possible to build strong, safe skyscrapers from wood.

Wood products are used in tall applications and small ones, from the 17-storey Brock Commons student residence at UBC to the 2,000 new supportive modular homes that were built in 22 communities during 2018 to help address B.C.'s homelessness crisis. Wood building materials can also help British Columbians tackle climate change and spur a greater demand for top quality manufactured wood products as a clean, natural, healthy, renewable building material.

Government is working with First Nations, communities and the industry to develop a fair, lasting strategy to strengthen forestry all over B.C. I asked Forests Minister Doug Donaldson to lead the Coastal Forestry Revitalization Initiative, which will renew our forest policy framework, help to expand domestic manufacturing, encourage getting more value out of every log, provide new opportunities for First Nations and encourage innovation and a better business climate.

We're moving forward on our government's commitment to implement UNDRIP and to build a true partnership with First Nations based on rights, respect and reconciliation. In the forest sector, we're continuing to explore ways Indigenous communities can benefit from forestry activities on their lands. The Province recently entered into a unique community forest agreement for the Qala:yit Community Forest – the first of its kind in B.C. The Pacheedaht First Nation, BC Timber Sales, Cowichan Lake Community Forest Co-operative, and Province are all working together to create good jobs and more opportunities for people in the Cowichan Lake communities. Partnerships like these will inspire new ventures and processes of working together, protect the environment, promote economic opportunity and growth, and manage land and resources.

Across B.C., 2018 was another devastating wildfire season, with over 1.3 million hectares of land impacted by wildfires. Hundreds of industry contractors assisted the BC Wildfire Service in fighting the fires and keeping communities safe. Thanks to everyone's dedication and hard work, not one life was lost. Acting on lessons learned during 2017 and 2018, as well as the recommendations from the report by George Abbott and Chief Maureen Chapman, the BC Wildfire Service is looking at changes to be better prepared for 2019 wildfires.

The TLA selected a theme of “Making it Work” for your January 2019 convention, representing so much that is going on across the forest sector as well as your organization’s 75 years of representing logging contractors and other members. In that regard, I am pleased that Dan Miller has been able to help logging contractors and licensees reach agreement to work together on developing rate models and rate determination factors.

Looking forward, B.C.’s forest sector continues to explore innovative ways to make better use of our vast resources. Together with partners in all parts of the industry, our government is working to grow demand for our wood products, design services, and building technologies and to expand foreign markets for B.C. lumber. We’re working hard to make sure B.C.’s forest industry has a strong, sustainable future – for everyone. I look forward to working with you to continue building a better British Columbia.

As we approach the end of 2018, our host, Don Martin, has named Premier Horgan the "Power Player of the Year."

With that, we would love to have the Premier on the show to discuss his year-long efforts for British Columbia and Canada.

The segment could occur any day from Dec. 17 to Dec. 20, live on the show or a pre-tape interview.

If there is a date that works best for Premier Horgan, let me know and we can coordinate from there.

Thanks and talk soon.

Let me know if the attached covers all that you were hoping.

Hi folks,
Thanks, this is a great start. Messaging looks good, but PJH hungry for more information and implications. For now, can you include details that there were amendments (were any accepted?), that it was an unanimous vote and that no other parts of phase 2 would be affected?
Please also ask program to prepare a detailed BN as to next steps.

Subject: Mayors' Council - Surrey Transit

Surrey Rapid Transit

Background:

- At their Nov 14th meeting the Mayor's Council voted to suspend the Surrey LRT project and request further information about the possibility of switching to SkyTrain for discussion at their December meeting.
- The resolutions approved were the following:
 - 1. Endorse TransLink's decision to suspend the Surrey-Newton-Guildford Project, stopping all expenditures of money and resources on the project, based on the request from the City of Surrey;
 - 2. Use the 10-Year Vision as the basis for South of Fraser rapid transit planning, recognizing the City of Surrey request to change the technology and timing of the Fraser Highway project from LRT to SkyTrain, and draw only on the available funding currently allocated for South of Fraser rapid transit in the Phase Two Plan, and the financial framework for the Phase Three Plan.
 - 3. Request the additional analysis and a work plan on "Option 2" in this report, for consideration at the December 13, 2018 meeting of the Mayors' Council.
- "Option 2" was a proposal to begin planning, design and procurement readiness works for SkyTrain on the Fraser Highway while concurrently refreshing other Surrey rapid transit.

Message:

- The bottom line is people in Surrey have been waiting too long for transit improvements.
- We made a significant investment to support the Mayors' 10-Year Vision for the region, which included funding for rapid transit in Surrey. We remain committed to this investment in Surrey.
- We respect the Mayors' Council's decision to look at updating the vision for rapid transit in Surrey and understand they've asked for more information from Translink.
- Once a decision about next steps for rapid transit in Surrey has been reached by the Mayors' Council, we would be happy to review a new business case.
- We will continue to work with the new Mayors' Council on our shared goal of keeping people moving quickly and affordably in a growing region.

If asked about cost and timeline implications:

- There are important questions for the Mayors' Council to consider as part of their vision for the entire region - costs and timing are two of those key questions.

- Once a decision about next steps for rapid transit in Surrey has been reached by the Mayors' Council, we would be happy to review a new business case.
- We made a significant investment in the Mayors' 10-Year Vision for the region, which included funding for rapid transit in Surrey.
- We remain committed to this investment in Surrey.

But do we know if anyone is preparing speaking notes or BN materials for whichever MLA takes up this announcement?

I've discussed with Geoff/Amber and both agree the event will be fine with Vanessa & Evan only. Just want to make sure the rest of the team is ok with this too.

Office of the Premier
Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing

New affordable homes and child care spaces on the way for people in Langford

LANGFORD, B.C. – Seniors and families in Langford will benefit from new affordable homes and child care spaces at Oak Park, which is undergoing a second phase of redevelopment with funding from the provincial government's Building BC: Community Housing Fund.

"The housing crisis has left too many people struggling to afford the basics in B.C. communities," said Premier Horgan. "These new homes at Oak Park, with new child care spaces on-site, are a model of the kind of project we are building throughout the province to address the housing crisis and make life better and more affordable for seniors and families." DRAFT

The phase two funding will add another 80 new affordable rental homes and 36 child care spaces. The Premier made the announcement at the grand opening celebration for phase one of the project, which added 73 new homes.

"Housing is the foundation of healthy families and strong communities, but too many people in B.C. are without access to the safe, secure and affordable housing everyone needs," said Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. "By investing in projects such as Oak Park, we are helping families struggling today and making sure we have affordable homes for generations to come." DRAFT

The $8 million funding for phase two is part of the Province's new Building BC: Community Housing Fund, a $1.9 billion investment over 10 years to build more than 14,000 affordable rental homes for middle income households, seniors and people with low incomes. The first set of projects announced on November 13 include 4,902 homes in 42 communities across B.C. to be built over the next two to three years.

The child-care facility being built as part of the project, operated by the Atira Women's Resource Centre, is currently planned to provide full-time spaces for 12 infants and toddlers and 24 spaces for three- to five-year-olds.

APPROVED QUOTE: "This project is a great example of how partnerships can deliver innovative solutions to create new child care spaces across B.C.," said Katrina Chen, Minister of State for Child Care. "Incorporating affordable, quality child care into the Oak Park redevelopment project will help parents return to the workforce, and give their children the best start to their early years, and beyond."

The Oak Park redevelopment will be completed in partnership with Pacifica Housing and the City of Langford, and will provide 153 new affordable rental homes for low-to moderate-income individuals, families, seniors and people with disabilities.

Oak Park is one of Pacifica Housing's 26 subsidized housing properties in the Capital Regional District and Nanaimo Regional District.

Construction of the second phase is expected to start before the end of the year.

Quotes:

APPROVED QUOTE: "We are thrilled to be working with our partners to increase the affordable housing stock for families in the Westshore," said Jaime Hall, board president, Pacifica Housing. "People should be able to work in the communities where they live, and projects like Oak Park make that possible."

APPROVED QUOTE: "Partnering with Pacifica Housing to provide safe affordable housing for families with low or moderate incomes is a priority of Langford Council," said Stew Young, mayor, City of Langford. "A project like Oak Park that includes affordable childcare will set the groundwork to enable hard working families to move forward with less financial strain and more ability to realize future dreams. It's partnerships like this one that emphasize Langford's commitment to its family-oriented community."

Quick Facts:

- Phase one of the redevelopment included replacing 13 townhouse-units with a four-storey 73-unit apartment complex.
- Phase two will include replacing the remaining 12 townhouses-units with 80 units of affordable rental housing and the child-care facility.
- Tenants from the first 13 units moved into neighbouring Pacifica-operated properties, and the tenants from the remaining 12 now live in the building built during phase one.
- The Province invested $14.9 million in capital cost towards the Oak Park redevelopment:
 - Phase 1: $6.9 million for through the Investment in Housing Innovation program
 - Phase 2: $8 million through the Building BC: Community Housing Fund
- The City of Langford is contributing $100,000 from its affordable housing fund, and municipal reductions in the amount of $788,065.
- Pacifica Housing is providing the land valued at $3.15 million.
- Phase two of the Oak Park redevelopment is one of 72 projects recently selected for funding through the Community Housing Fund, with 20 of those on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands.
- The Community Housing Fund was announced as part of Budget 2018, which launched the largest investment in housing affordability in B.C. history – more than $7 billion over 10 years.

Harjinder Thind News – Minister Sims has met with a number of local farmers who are upset about the legislation to put a cap on farm houses. She has listened to their concerns and has assured that she will take these to minister Lana Popham. He says that farmers are demanding that they be allowed to build a house instead of a rancher of upto 10,000 sq ft. This according to them will not affect the farmland footprint.
Mr Thind says that Minister Sims has told Red FM that she will soon give an update to them on this matter very soon.

Hawthorn language as promised

We have the people and the ingenuity here to make the province a global leader.

For the Haisla Nation, the LNG agreement is an investment in their future.

Our government believes in a meaningful reconciliation with Indigenous Peoples.

We believe dialogue is preferable to confrontation.

We believe a board room is a better place for a decision than a courtroom.

We're working in partnership with Indigenous Peoples to transform the principles of reconciliation into action.

This government is dedicated to consultation.

Uncertainty discourages investment. We must have reconciliation to achieve certainty on the land base.

British Columbians are eager for development, but we prefer it to happen with all parties engaged, all voices heard, all stakeholders in agreement on the proper route to a successful outcome. That, too, is good for business.

Our job is to make sure the economy continues to grow and that it does so in a sustainable fashion.

Hi – for review:

[release number]
November 20, 2018

Office of the Premier
Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum
Resources

Provincial government puts B.C. on path to 100% Zero-Emission Vehicle sales by 2040

VICTORIA – In a move aimed at removing a major source of air pollution and climate change, the provincial government has put B.C. on a path to require the sale of all new light-duty cars and trucks be Zero-Emission Vehicles (ZEVs) by the year 2040.

Premier John Horgan has announced his government, in partnership with the Green Party Caucus, will introduce legislation next spring to bring in phased-in targets for the sale of Zero-Emission Vehicles (ZEVs). This legislation will set targets of 10% ZEV sales by 2025, 30% by 2030, and 100% by 2040, and will include steps to make ZEVs more affordable.

“There’s nothing more important than taking care of the place we call home,” said Premier Horgan. “As a province, we need to work together to put B.C. on a path that powers our future with clean, renewable energy and reduces air pollution.” NOT APPROVED

The premier also outlined a three-point plan to kick-start and fuel the rollout of the ZEV standard:

1. Ramping up B.C.’s charging capacity, including:
 - Expanding the size of the province’s electric vehicle direct-current fast-charger (DCFC) network to 151 sites, with 71 already completed or underway and, leveraging federal and private sector dollars, another 80 in the works.
 - Updating the B.C. Building Code to expand access to at-home and workplace charging stations.
2. Increasing the provincial incentive program, administered by the New Car Dealers Association of BC, by $20 million this year to encourage more British Columbians to buy clean energy cars now. This will bring the incentive program up to $57 million in total.
3. Reviewing the incentive program with an eye to expanding it over time so buying a ZEV becomes a more affordable option for middle- and lower-income British Columbians.

“If we want British Columbians to be part of the solution for reducing air pollution, we need to make clean energy vehicles more affordable, available and convenient,” said Horgan, who added that this initiative is the first major policy commitment of the government’s upcoming strategy to meet B.C.’s legislated climate goals. NOT APPROVED

“Transforming the way we get around and moving away from reliance on fossil fuels is a significant part of a cleaner future,” said Andrew Weaver, Leader of the Green Party Caucus. “Point-of-sale vehicle purchase incentives are considered the most critical measure to increase the demand for, and affordability of, zero-emission vehicles for consumers so this funding makes it easier for people to choose a clean-energy vehicle as their next purchase.” NOT APPROVED

B.C. already has one of the largest charging and fueling infrastructure networks – electric and hydrogen fuelling – in Canada and, with 12,000 clean energy vehicles registered, the highest adoption rates of electric vehicles in the country.

Quotes:

Michelle Mungall, Minister of Energy, Mines, and Petroleum Resources

We are committed to making cleaner vehicles more affordable and expanding the charging and refuelling networks across the province. We’re working towards a seamless network, integrated with other jurisdictions and servicing both urban and rural areas. NOT APPROVED

George Heyman, Minister of Environment and Climate Change

Affordable and accessible choices go hand in hand with lowering emissions to meet our climate goals, and we are continuing to create good jobs and economic opportunities for people and businesses. This is a great step that will help us cut carbon pollution with cleaner, healthier transportation. By embracing the ZEV standard, we’re joining other jurisdictions like Quebec, 14 U.S. states, and many others worldwide.

BACKGROUND

Program support for zero-emission vehicle use and infrastructure

British Columbia is a leader in zero-emission vehicles, with one of the largest charging-infrastructure networks in Canada (over 1,500 public charging stations), and the highest per capita adoption rate of electric vehicles in the country with about 12,000 CEVs registered in B.C.

The B.C. government has committed more than $84 million to the Clean Energy Vehicle (CEV) Program since the September 2017 Budget Update -- encouraging British Columbians to choose clean, green vehicles that reduce their transportation greenhouse gas emissions. The program supports battery electric vehicles and plug-in hybrid electric vehicles, along with hydrogen fuel cell electric vehicles.

Government's target is that by 2025, 10 per cent of new light-duty passenger vehicle sales in B.C. will be clean "zero emission vehicles" (ZEVs), increasing to 30 per cent by 2030 and 100 per cent by 2040.

B.C.'s CEV Program invests in five main program areas:

- vehicle incentives;
- electric charging and hydrogen refuelling infrastructure, incentives and support;
- fleet support;
- public education and awareness; and
- research, training and economic development programs.

To make cleaner vehicles more affordable and reduce greenhouse gas emissions, the Province offers point-of-sale incentives through CEVforBC (administered by the New Car Dealers Association of BC) of up to $5,000 for the purchase or lease of a new battery electric or plug-in hybrid electric vehicle, and up to $6,000 for a hydrogen fuel cell vehicle.

B.C. government's current support for zero-emission vehicles has:

- More than doubled the size of B.C.'s electric vehicle direct-current fast-charger (DCFC) network to 71 from 30 sites with:
 - BC Hydro installations at 20 new sites, which leverage about $1 million in federal funding and $700,000 in provincial CEV Program funding.
 - 13 DCFC sites throughout the Kootenays with FortisBC operating five (with $125,000 from the CEV Program) and BC Hydro operating eight.
 - Fast Charging stations at 8 highway rest areas throughout the province.
- Delivered $2 million in provincial funding for the next deployment of 80 direct-current fast-chargers, leveraged with 2-to-1 federal-to-provincial dollars. Through an agreement with the federal government, the B.C. investment is included in the latest federal call for projects and will be included in future federal calls until the $2 million is fully expended and the target of 80 additional DC fast chargers is achieved in B.C.
- Provided $1 million from the provincial Innovative Clean Energy (ICE) Fund to help local government and private fleets adopt hydrogen fuel cell electric vehicles.
- Put in place the first six public retail hydrogen fueling stations in B.C., starting this year with two stations in the Lower Mainland and one in the Capital Regional District, and completion of all stations towards the end of 2020.

Hey guys,

I spoke with Richard late last week and here are the two options:

- 1) Facebook live with questions from viewers. Would be shared on all Global platforms
- 2) Focus BC which Global is trying to revamp as their political show. That week will be hosted by Richard with only questions from him (not viewers). It would be for 8-16 minutes in their new office studio. Would be shared on same platforms as Facebook live.

Im leaning towards Focus BC only because its shorter, will look better for sharing, and it is questions from Richard. Do you agree or would you rather Facebook live. Let me know as we need to book soon!

Here it is!

IF IT IS MIXED-MEMBER PROPORTIONAL (MMP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

-Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.

· The referendum process sets a specific maximum so the legislature will not grow by more than 8 seats. We would work within that range to ensure public dollars are spent responsibly while ensuring local representation for British Columbians.

-Exact ratio of FPTP seats to List PR seats: up to a maximum of 40 per cent of List PR seats.

- The referendum process sets a maximum. We would work with the other parties to ensure as many MLAs as possible represent constituencies while the system also functions as intended, so that a party's seats reflect the proportion of the votes they received.

- The type of party list to be used: Closed, open or open with a party list option.

- We do not support closed lists. We want to ensure that lists remain open so that all MLAs are elected directly by the voters.

- Whether voters will have one vote that counts for both the local candidate and the List PR seat allocation; or two votes, one for the local candidate and one for the List PR seat allocation.

- Please see the Premier's recent comments in the Vancouver Sun:

- "With an open list under MMP you'd have the local names, nominated by the various parties, and another list of names nominated again by the parties. My view would be that you put your preferences beside those as you would prefer them. I think that's easily achievable and would maintain the transparency I think everybody wants. I've been pretty clear everybody elected to the legislature will be just that, elected as an individual, representing a point of view."

- The method for determining the order in which List PR seats are allocated.

- We do not support closed lists. All MLAs would be elected by the voters, including the PR seats.

IF IT IS DUAL-MEMBER PROPORTIONAL (DMP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

- Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.

- The referendum process sets a specific maximum so the legislature will not grow by more than 8 seats. We would work within that range to ensure public dollars are spent responsibly while ensuring local representation for British Columbians.

IF IT IS RURAL-URBAN PROPORTIONAL (RUP), WHAT IS YOUR PARTY'S POSITION ON:

- Total number of MLAs in the province: either a specific number or a range, up to a maximum of 95.

- The referendum process sets a specific maximum so the legislature will not grow by more than 8 seats. We would work within that range to ensure public dollars are spent responsibly while ensuring local representation for British Columbians.

- Ratio of FPTP seats to List PR seats in MMP regions.

- The referendum process sets a maximum. We would work with the other parties to ensure as many MLAs as possible represent constituencies while the system also functions as intended, so that a party's seats reflect the proportion of the votes they received.

- Closed or open party lists.

- We do not support closed lists. All MLAs would be elected by the voters, including the PR seats.

Hi Sage,

Would we be able to arrange a call with you, Evan Lloyd and Bobbi Plecas on the priority messaging around the MOU roll out? I have suggested some times below that also work for Greg to be on the call.

There are some key component of the MOU missing from the NR that we think are important to be incorporated and highlighted in release. They include:

- A low carbon strategy which positions British Columbia as a destination and supplier of choice for industry looking for lower carbon alternative energies and manufacturing inputs will increase our competitiveness, drive economic growth and reinvestment into technology and infrastructure that will support the lowering of local and global GHG emissions.
- This strategy allows for a coordinated effort to lever our assets, including our low carbon electricity and energy resources and transportation advantage, to provide global climate solutions in a carbon constrained world.
- This MOU is intended to unlock British Columbia's full economic potential, to transition to a low carbon economy and to establish the Province as a world leader in supplying low carbon goods and services to a world with a growing demand for low carbon solutions.
- This collaboration between business and government will enhance British Columbia's competitive advantages, avoid carbon leakage and contribute to this generational opportunity.
- This agreement will coordinate industry-related climate and competitiveness issues with government policies.

Would a call be possible with you, Evan and Bobbi during any of the following windows of time:

- Today
 - 5-6pm
- Wednesday
 - 9-930 am
 - 11-noon
- Thursday
 - 2-230

> VICTORIA - The British Columbia government will invest $1.1 billion over the next 10 years to make B.C.'s social housing stock more energy efficient, less polluting and safer, while significantly reducing heating costs for residents.
> In making the announcement, Premier John Horgan said the major focus of the retrofit initiative will be to increase the use of cleaner electricity in the province's 51,000 units of publicly funded and owned social housing. As a result, some buildings may reduce greenhouse gas emissions by more than 50%.
> "As part of tackling climate change here in B.C., we need to change how we heat our homes," Premier Horgan said. "By retrofitting the homes of tens of thousands of British Columbians, we'll reduce air pollution at the same time we're reducing people's heating bills."
> The $1.1-billion retrofit initiative is part of the B.C. government's 30-point housing plan, released in the last provincial budget. Within this, the energy-efficiency component is budgeted at $400 million and is part of government's upcoming strategy to meet B.C.'s legislated climate goals. It will include upgrades that improve building efficiency and reduce energy use - like boiler and electrical upgrades, replacing doors and windows, building-envelope repair, electrical upgrades and more.

> "This investment is a great example of how reducing emissions improves quality of life and affordability for British Columbians," said Andrew Weaver, MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head and leader of the B.C. Green caucus, who joined Premier Horgan in making the announcement. "Making our buildings more energy efficient will also provide opportunities for the trades and construction industry to develop their expertise in low-carbon solutions. Creating these kinds of opportunities will help drive local innovation that will benefit the entire provincial economy."

> In addition to the efficiencies created, the broader retrofit initiative will deliver significant seismic and fire-safety upgrades, making homes safer and more comfortable for residents. It will also create approximately 7,700 direct and indirect B.C. jobs.

> "B.C.'s social housing is a critical piece of solving the housing crisis we're seeing in all parts of the province," Premier Horgan said. "In addition to building more housing, we must take better care of the homes we have already. This is an investment in the families and seniors who live in social housing. It's an investment in their safety, comfort and ability to afford the homes they want."

> Residents of Victoria's Ashlar Manor, a 49-unit building for low-income seniors and persons with disabilities, attended the announcement. It is anticipated the upgrades to that building will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by more than 50%.

> Quotes:

> Selina Robinson, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing -

> "Renovating existing affordable homes is an overdue investment in our future and offers significant opportunities to upgrade seismic, life safety, accessibility and energy performance. What this means for tenants is they have a better quality of housing at a rent they can afford."

> George Heyman, Minister of Environment and Climate Change Strategy -

> "By ramping up funding for renovations and retrofits, we're making thousands of units more comfortable and more efficient, while cutting our carbon pollution. We're also helping people to lower their bills and make their homes more comfortable. It's a win-win that helps us to build new skills, invest in people and make our communities stronger."

> Christine Culham, senior manager, Capital Region Housing Corporation (CRHC) -

> "The CRHC is pleased to see the direct benefit the retrofit funding will provide for the residents of Ashlar Manor and across the province. It will allow for the continued provision of affordable housing into the future, while increasing building safety through seismic upgrades and the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions."

> Jill Atkey, chief executive officer, BC Non-Profit Housing Association -

> "Decades of unfunded liabilities in the community-housing sector mean that our existing supply of affordable housing is at risk. Good morning Sage and Elizabeth,

I understand from Dean that you are interested in a MAC PC.
This is available:

<https://sdu.gov.bc.ca/WS/SitePages/Workstation%20Fleet%20-%20Desktops.aspx>

13" Laptop Mac

- Moderate to highly mobile users familiar with Mac devices.
Caution: Macs may have interoperability challenges with the BC Government environment and Line of Business applications developed for Windows. Please review "Points to consider before selecting a Mac device".

Caution: Points to consider before selecting a Mac device

- Macs may have interoperability challenges with the BC Government environment and Line of Business (LoB) applications developed for Windows.
- Do you currently use Microsoft Visio or Project? Microsoft does not provide these applications for Macs; they are available for windows devices only.
- Do you currently use any applications available through the Self-Serve software centre? None of these applications are available for Macs.

- Macs need to be compatible with your specific environment – Ask yourself this question: Do Macs function well in my working environment?
- Your organization's LoB applications that you need to do your job may not be available for a Mac – please check with your supervisor. Each ministry is responsible for testing their LoB applications.
- Due to the limited number of Macs in service, it is currently only viable to provide limited technical support to Mac workstation services. You should ensure that you know how to:
 - Use the Mac Operating system
 - Install and uninstall applications
 - Perform system maintenance such as security patching and operating updates

As above there is a CAUTION as many have found it frustrating to use the MAC PC in the WINDOWS dependent BCGov environment. Quite a few have received one and then sent back within a month or so. NOTE: eForms do not work on the MAC, you will need to use a remote access to do these (DTS).

If you would like to move forward with acquiring the following is required:

- Service request to be submitted
- A business case form – as part of the above request – will be required. They will send to you once you fill it out.
- ENSURE to make note that you are returning the current Surface pro device – with workstation # - as this should help the business case to be approved.
- Suggest putting in the reasons for the request for change as well.

Once you have submitted, forward me the response email, and I will try and guide it through smoothly. 😊

Any questions/issues or assistance required don't hesitate to contact.

Hello,

These are the final materials. Please note that there was a small factual correction made (to the cost of the development) in the QA/NR.

Apologies, an error must have been introduced in the various drafts. This error did not enter PJH's SN.

Change is highlighted in the copies attached. Correct NR is with editors for finalizing.

Hi All

After a thorough search, we have confirmed the Telus Gardens for the December 5th speech. I don't have (but can get) the exact certification level but it is LEED to the hilt, gorgeous, centrally located and should be able to host all elements of the event.

We will be making multiple advance visits and getting detailed layouts and plans together, which will be shared in the days ahead. Let me, Jarrett and Elena know ASAP if you have any issues with this. As always we can be flexible, but just to be clear, based on our search, at this point we would be pivoting to a hotel function space.

Thanks

Jarrett, thanks for all of this. I think of all of these, the convention centre is best.

But some additional ideas:

CIRS (Centre for Interactive Research on Sustainability) is beautiful, LEED certified and has definitely hosted big announcements before.

I also like the Earth Science Building.

Surrey Central Library would be very different but it's a transit centric, LEED building.

As is MEC Head Office.

I'm also looking up some Passive House window manufacturing plants in Metro Van. Different kind of location but could be interesting.

Hey Folks,

Here are options visited so far with some point form notes. Overall I would say the general comments on venues so far is that other than being in LEED buildings we have nothing that really gives a strong environment or tech visual.

If you want any more info on anything let me know.

Happy to visit anything else folks might have in mind ASAP.

Jarrett

UBC AMS Lobby – Open space good for a announcement with lots of people. Very Public. Other than being in a LEED building visuals don't speak to announcement.

UBC AMS Meeting Space – Private Space. Room for the size of crowd we want and media. Modern design. Other than LEED Building visual while modern doesn't speak to technology or Environment.

UBC AMS Theatre – Private space. Would look packed with 100 ppl. Space doesn't speak to our announcement and is rather dark.

UBC Alumni Centre – Good Size. Plain room. Doesn't speak to Announcement.

UBC Bio Diversity Museum – Odd shape, Whale skeleton speaks to our message in a grim way. Wouldn't recommend.

Vandusen – Good Sized Space, has greenery outdoors but hard to see due to design. Will be decorated for Christmas though. Has a blackout on rentals in December, would have to get a special exception, which seems unlikely.

Telus Garden- LEED Building, Modern look. Due to windows backdrop would most likely need to be the FN art piece. Size would only fit max 75 guests which is under what we were thinking.

Vancouver Convention Centre West. – LEED Platinum Building. Interesting wood backdrop. Accessible and well sized spaced. Isn't a new or interesting choice but does check a lot of boxes and suits a large announcement. (No picture attached)

Hello,

PO would like to know why the number for Housing investments changes. Sometimes it is $7 billion over 10 years, re more than $7 billion over 10 years (like in this statement).

Sometimes it is around 6 billion. They would like:

- 1) an explanation of why it has fluctuated

https://www.bcbudget.gov.bc.ca/2018/homesbc/2018_Homes_For_BC.pdf

page 7 #14 and there it says "making a $6-billion-plus investment". The more than $6-billion focuses on new housing.

When you add the $1billion plus for retrofit to improve existing social housing stock, it comes to more than $7-billion investment.

and

- 2) to choose either $7 billion, OR more than $7 billion and use it consistently from now on.

We have consistently used "more than $7-billion" in all the materials in our shop and agree and will do.

This is urgent because we will not get PO approval for this statement until we have provide an explanation and decision.

Danielle

Subject: For review: Statement on National Housing Day

Hello, statement for tomorrow below.

A couple things:

Re: the housing investment numbers – it said more than $6 billion in the Homes for BC budget 2018 document. The more than $6-billion focuses on new housing.

When we add the $1 billion plus for retrofits to improve existing social housing stock, it comes to more than $7-billion investment in housing overall

We will be using “more than $7-billion” in all materials unless very specifically talking about new housing.

The Minister will be making a statement on National Housing Day in the House tomorrow.

For Immediate Release
Office of the Premier
Nov. 22, 2018
Corp. Cal: PREM- 90286

Premier John Horgan’s statement on National Housing Day

VICTORIA – Premier John Horgan has issued the following statement to mark National Housing Day:

“Every person deserves a safe place to call home. But years of inaction on the B.C. housing crisis has left too many people in B.C. unable to find affordable housing. Our government is making different choices, and taking action to tackle supply, curb demand, and make housing more affordable and secure for people around the province.

“Our first budget as government included the largest investment in housing in B.C. history – with more than $7 billion going to communities over 10 years. Our 30-point plan to take action on the housing crisis will give people a break from skyrocketing housing costs around B.C. It also means people can stay in their communities, and be part of B.C.’s robust, sustainable economy.

“Last week our government made a historic announcement – 4,900 new, affordable mixed-income rental homes will be built in 42 communities throughout the province. This new housing is the first to be delivered through the Building BC: Community Housing Fund, a $1.9 billion investment over 10 years to deliver 14,000 affordable rental homes for seniors, families, and low- and middle-income earners in B.C.

“Our Rapid Response to Homelessness program has already been put into action. By the end of 2019, we will have built more than 2,000 modular homes with 24/7 support services in 22 communities. So far, 600 modular homes have been built in four B.C. communities, helping people get out of tent cities, and on the path to opportunity.

“We’ve started 12 projects that will provide 280 safe new homes for women and children fleeing violence and abuse. And for the first time in Canadian history, a province has taken steps, together with Indigenous leaders, to directly address the housing needs of Indigenous peoples, both on and off reserve.

“Our Housing Hub has already approved hundreds of affordable market rentals, which are being built in partnerships with the private sector, faith groups, non-profits, and communities. And as part of increasing affordable rental supply in the private market, we gave communities the power to zone for rental housing, giving them the opportunity to decrease speculative pressure on land, while opening the door to increased density.

“People need an opportunity to survive, thrive, and get ahead. That starts with knowing that you and your family have a place to come home to. On National Housing Day, we commit to keep working collaboratively across the aisle and with local partners to deliver safe, secure, and affordable housing for people in B.C.”

Hi Kate,

Yes, it will be great if the Premier calls in to the radiothon. The best times for him to make this call would be between 8:00 AM-11:00 am (Mr. Thind on the helm then) or 4pm-6:00 pm (Prime Time). But if he can't make it, then calling in at any time would be wonderful as well.

RED FM tells me that because of the volume of the calls, it might not be possible to get through, so the best would be for them to call at a predetermined time on a number provided.

I will be happy to coordinate if you let me know what time he would be available to make this call.

He could congratulate the community on the occasion of the birth anniversary of Guru Nanak, founder of Sikh religion. This year is the 550th birth anniversary of Guru Nanak. He could also congratulate Red FM for their annual radiothon, which funds for Surrey Memorial Hospital Foundation, and other causes (Alberta wildfires, Haiti earthquake etc). Till date Red has raised over $8 million, and majority of these funds have benefited Surrey Memorial Hospital. Funds raised from this year's radiothon will go towards the coronary care centre at SMH.

Thanks

Importance: High

Hello all,
RED FM is organizing its annual radiothon on the occasion of GURPURAB (Guru Nanak- Sikhism's first Guru and founder of the faith's birthday) on Friday Nov 23. All donations will go towards the coronary care centre at Surrey Memorial Hospital. In the past years a number of our MLAs and the Premier have called in to support this radiothon and the hospital. Calling in and supporting this radiothon which has raised over $8 million for the hospital in the last 12 years is supporting Surrey and therefore MLAs and the Premier (if possible) should call in this year as well.

Good evening,

Below is the email that has been approved on our end to be sent at 1pm to government employees about the Fortis gas supply issue. Please let me know if you have any concerns or revisions that should be made.

Melissa

I want to start by saying thank you to all public sector employees for continuing to do your part to conserve natural gas during this period of constrained supply. Your on-going actions, such as turning down thermostats, reducing hot water use, and other conservation measures, are making a difference in ensuring all British Columbians will continue to have access to natural gas. But, we're not out of the woods yet.

FortisBC's natural gas supply to communities throughout British Columbia continues to be constrained as a result of the Enbridge pipeline rupture last month. While Enbridge has completed repairs to the pipeline it is not currently authorized to operate either of its two natural gas pipelines at full-capacity.

Because both Enbridge natural gas lines are not operating at full-capacity, FortisBC anticipates that its natural gas supply may be limited in the event of a prolonged period of colder than average weather. The company is working with Enbridge to restore full-capacity. In the meantime, FortisBC is reminding all of its customers to be conscious of their natural gas use and conserve energy wherever possible, to ensure all its customers across the province are able to access natural gas for essential uses.

I am encouraging all public sector employees to keep up the great work in our ongoing efforts to reduce our natural gas use. If we all continue to take action to conserve natural gas, such as turning down thermostats 2-3 degrees, this can help ensure there is access to natural gas for Fortis BC customers when the temperature drops and it is needed most.

So please, join me and reduce your use until FortisBC's natural gas supply situation returns to normal.

Thank you for your cooperation and leadership for all British Columbians.

Here's a key question from the meeting Monday night with Plecas and the three house leaders...Mike Farnworth referenced a constitutional lawyer was in the room with them. Was that lawyer brought in by Plecas, or the house leaders? Farnworth did not have the name of the lawyer on Wednesday...is it possible to get that person's name?

Cheers

Hi Sage,

I hope you're well. Not sure if you knew, but I do some work with a company called Hydra Energy, which is a clean tech company here in BC.

We're excited by the Premier's announcement regarding zero emissions vehicles and I wanted to talk to you about some of the language about hydrogen that was contained in some of the government communications.

Do you have time for a phone call, perhaps Monday or Tuesday?

Thanks,

Subject: Scrum Tomorrow

Hi All,

Just wanted to check on the location for the Premier's scrum that we are adding tomorrow afternoon. It is currently in the schedule for 1:30, right after caucus.

There is a Salvation Army lunch in the Hall of Honour from 12 to 1, and while I have asked, I doubt that it will be possible for us to have space or time to set up there. I will look for other options in the building but I wanted to float the idea of it being in the Press theatre, given it is his session ender and as such has a bit of significance. That would certainly be easiest, but I understand it is not really preferred.

I will look at options in the library, but the midday childcare announcement is in the library and it might not be possible.

I will have other options for you to consider later this morning.

Thanks
Rick

Hey team,

As meant to send this to you Friday, but forgot. As discussed at the Senior MA meeting, we have 3 pitches for you. You will find all the pitch documents attached here.

1. D-Wave. This would announce funding to make quantum computers more energy-efficient. We are looking for approval to announce this December 10 at D-Wave Headquarters in Burnaby. We would invite the local MLA. Dr. Weaver too..CC'ing Rob as we've been discussing this with him.

2. PNP Entrepreneur Pilot. This new pilot program would allow rural communities to nominate specific people seeking to emigrate to BC and start businesses. We have begun working with communities on the pilot, and would like to issue a release – the city of Vernon is particularly enthusiastic. We are looking for approval to issue the release ASAP in rural media markets.
3. Buy Local week – we are seeking approval for a release on December 3

I'm off for the next few weeks, but James (cc'd here) can answer any questions.

Hi Sage,

Thanks for taking the time to speak with me today about Hydra's position on clean vehicle fuels, specifically hydrogen technology.

The folks here wanted to bombard you with reports telling you how great we are and how great our technology is, but I talked them down to this one page that shows the basic policy asks that we're putting in front of government. We've spoken to a lot of people in Victoria, including Melissa Sanderson, who got the full presentation on our policy recommendations. We also are working on scheduling Min. Mungall to visit our site in PG.

Please feel free to let me know if there's anything I can provide you on our end to speed your work in the future.

Cheers,

Hi all,

The Library is on board with us setting up in front of the book tree for a 1:30 PM Scrum. I will order a phone line, I assume you want listen only but let me know if that's incorrect.

Also, he normally scrums with just a mic on a stand, shall we go with that or do you want a podium?

Thanks
Rick

Hi All,

Attached are three images of the gathering room, which will be used for the childcare announcement at 12:15pm.

For this, we will be able to put the childcare branding on the tv's there and will have a choir of 20 8/9 year olds joining the Ministers, so it will do a lot to take away from the old boys' club feel of the space. If it is just the Premier standing alone, that would not be the case as much. We could definitely still use it though, very easily. I could also get some branding designed to put on the screens for the Premier too if you want. Let me know if you want me to get something mocked up to consider. If he was standing in front of a large branded flat screen the room wouldn't be seen very much if at all, and it could work.

There is also the lobby of the library, shown in the fourth photo, with the book tree. When I inquired about the Childcare event, the library said we could not use the lobby because the tree was there. If it is just the Premier standing there, it could be possible, but of course the media would overwhelm the entire lobby area. I can ask them if that is what we want to do. Let me know.

And there is always the press theatre.

I wouldn't mind at least getting a few screens designed and seeing how they look in a tight shot in the gathering room.

Thanks

DRAFT

For Immediate Release
[release number]
Nov. 29, 2018

Office of the Premier
Ministry of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation
First Nations Leadership Council

B.C. and FNLC joining together to implement UNDRIP, advance reconciliation

VICTORIA – The Province and First Nations Leadership Council (FNLC) will co-develop new legislation in 2019 to implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People in British Columbia.

“First Nations in B.C. continue to experience the ongoing impacts of colonization including a lack of recognition for our rights, and disproportionately poor living conditions,” stated Grand Chief Stewart Phillip, President of the Union of BC Indian Chiefs. “We are hopeful that the joint work we commit to with the Province will improve the lives of our people and for all British Columbians – jointly developed recognition and rights-based legislative, policy and operational changes are needed to get beyond this colonial hangover.”

New legislation tops the list of priorities agreed to between the provincial government and FNLC, which was announced on the opening day of the 5th annual B.C. Cabinet and First Nations’ Leaders Gathering in Vancouver. More than 650 meetings between First Nations leaders, Cabinet ministers and deputy ministers will be held at the gathering Nov. 29-30.

“Reconciliation with First Nations is a priority of this government – creating certainty and opportunity for First Nations peoples and the province as a whole,” said Premier John Horgan. “True and lasting reconciliation will help build healthy communities and create jobs and economic stability, and create a better future for everyone in B.C.” DRAFT – not approved

FNLC and the provincial government have agreed to a shared vision and concrete actions for reconciliation with First Nations through innovative approaches to negotiations and agreement-making, new mechanisms for decision-making and economic relations, and meaningful changes to legislation and policy.

"Our leaders who came before us held onto a vision of strong and prosperous, self-governing nations living independently on their traditional lands, and we have continued this struggle to this day," said Regional Chief Terry Teegee of the BC Association of First Nations. "Now, finally, after decades of courage and continuous challenges to the systems and institutions that have been imposed on our peoples, we see significant progress as reason and justice have taken hold to create a climate of change. We move forward with the Province to forge a system of governance that increases stability and equality for everyone."

The FNLC is a working relationship between the BC Assembly of First Nations, First Nations Summit, and the Union of BC Indian Chiefs.

FNLC quote – Summit

In addition to the commitment to co-develop legislation to implement the UN Declaration, the concrete actions include a range of actions to advance reconciliation in B.C. The joint work agreed to between the Province and First Nations Leadership Council will strengthen government-to-government relationships with First Nations as the Province continues its work to implement the UN Declaration and Truth and Reconciliation Commission's 94 Calls to Action.

"We've covered a lot of ground in our first year, but after years of obstruction by the previous government we know there is still a lot to do," said Scott Fraser, Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation. "We are committing to work together with First Nations throughout B.C. in ways we never have before, to take bold steps that truly support self-government and self-determination." DRAFT – not approved

B.C. has been working in partnership with Indigenous leaders and organizations on a broad range of actions that address areas of concern for Indigenous communities. These include:

- $550 million over 10 years to support the construction of 1,750 affordable housing units for on-and-off-reserve, with 1,100 homes to be built in the next two to four years;
- $50 million to support the work of the First Peoples' Cultural Council and First Nations communities to revitalize Indigenous languages in B.C.;
- Introducing new legislation to modernize the environmental assessment process for major resource projects that will greatly enhance the participation of Indigenous peoples, ensuring their rights, interests and ecological knowledge are respected;
- Making changes to legislation so Indigenous communities can have greater involvement in child-welfare decisions, including agreements with the Wet'suwet'en and the Secwépemc Nation to chart a path forward in implementing their jurisdiction for child and family services. B.C. also continues to implement Grand Chief Ed John's recommendations to help keep Indigenous children out of care, wherever possible.
- Working with First Nations to forge innovative agreements that respect the inherent rights of their communities. These include an agreement with the Maa-nulth First Nations to affirm government-to-government treaty partnerships, a tripartite memorandum of understanding with Stó:lō Xwexwilmexw Treaty Association to explore a recognition of rights approach to treaty agreements, and a landmark reconciliation agreement with the shíshálh Nation.

The B.C. Cabinet and First Nations' Leaders Gathering is being held at the Vancouver Convention Centre on November 29-30, 2018. It is organized in partnership between the First Nations Leadership Council and the Ministry of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation. The annual gathering offers opportunities for First Nations leaders to meet one-to-one with B.C. cabinet ministers as well as participate in plenary and breakout sessions on issues of importance to their communities.

BACKGROUND

B.C., First Nations Leadership Council agree to joint concrete actions for reconciliation

A new vision and concrete actions were identified as a joint work plan to implement the 2015 Commitment Document between the Province and First Nations Leadership Council. The joint concrete actions include:

- Developing legislation by fall 2019, similar to the federal private member's bill C-262, to establish the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (the Declaration) as the framework for reconciliation in British Columbia.
- Establishing an independent Indigenous commission within three years that supports First Nations, upon request, with self-government, including boundary resolutions, developing constitutions, making laws and policies, and land-use planning, as identified in the 2015 Commitment Document.
- Developing new fiscal models of sharing provincial revenues to support First Nations self-government, including a new model to share gaming revenue by 2019.
- Reforming legislation and policies through a joint review table to reduce barriers to reconciliation, with a plan for changes in child welfare, environmental assessment and forestry within a year as identified in the 2015 Commitment Document.
- Developing a multi-year strategy to promote education both within the school system and more broadly to British Columbians on the history and contributions of First Nations within a year.
- Designing principles for new innovative, creative models for negotiation and dispute resolution between the provincial government and First Nations within a year.

The Commitment Document set an agenda for achieving an effective Crown-First Nations relationship in B.C., and working collaboratively to improve social and economic outcomes for First Nations communities. It is seen as a key tool for advancing Aboriginal title and rights, and as a means for First Nations to work toward establishing their own jurisdictions, governance, laws and responsibilities. The vision and concrete actions documents help to mobilize this agenda by now outlining a clear approach and a shared workplan for achieving meaningful progress.

Hi All,

I suspect more people need to be invited but I wanted to start with you. Coming out of the larger meeting today, it was identified that we need to have a meeting to discuss some specifics of the events on the day of.

Does 9:30 AM work for all of you?

My list of big ticket items:

- The list of people speaking on stage (and their commitment to significant prep, as discussed)
- Other details of the event and staging.
- The number of people being made available for scrumming afterwards and how we want to organize it. For example do we want 12-15 people to each have a station around the room or do we want them to go 1 or 2 at a time from a single location in the room.
- Anything else you want to discuss

As mentioned, please feel free to invite whomever else you think needs to be present.

Thanks

Rick

[release number]

Nov. 27, 2018

Fall session focused on working for a better B.C., delivering results for people

VICTORIA – Making the province’s economy stronger, more sustainable, and taking action on the biggest challenges facing people in B.C. was at the core of government work, both inside and outside of the legislature this fall.

“Making life better for people is what drives our government every single day. We’re delivering on affordable housing, improving health care and creating accessible child care,” said Premier John Horgan as the House rose for the end of the fall session. “We’re going to keep investing in people to build a strong, sustainable economy, and a better future for everyone in B.C.” NOT APPROVED

Key pieces of legislation passed this session will improve the delivery of health care and strengthen protections for health-sector workers, promote and protect human rights in B.C., put targets in place for a cleaner, low-carbon economy, crack down on tax evasion in B.C. real estate, tackle speculation in the housing market, and put British Columbia on the path to reduce the province’s overall poverty rate by 25% over the next five years.

The legislature rose a day after the release of the province’s second quarterly report, showing that British Columbia is operating debt-free for the first time in more than 40 years. B.C.’s real estate market shows signs of moderating while the Province continues to make record-level capital investments in affordable housing, schools and hospitals.

“We’re taking on the big challenges in our province from the housing crisis to child care, while getting the Province’s finances in order,” said Finance Minister and deputy Premier Carole James. “The second quarter results show we can make B.C.’s economy work for everyone, while investing in people and providing strong fiscal leadership for B.C.” NOT APPROVED

Over the past 16 months, the B.C. government has taken unprecedented action and made historic investments to make a difference in people’s lives. This fall the government delivered on major commitments, including announcing 4,900 new affordable mixed income rental homes - the first of 14,000 for mixed and middle-income people and families throughout B.C. The homes are part of the largest investment in housing affordability in B.C.’s history, more than $7 billion over 10 years.

As part of a $1 billion investment over three years to deliver low-cost, quality and affordable childcare, the government launched 53 prototype projects around the province to deliver child care that will cost families a maximum of $200 per month per child. The government also announced a new benefit to help 60,000 more families lower monthly child care costs.

To deliver better, faster healthcare for people in their communities, urgent primary care centres were announced in communities around the province. The care centres are part of a primary health-care strategy with a new focus on team-based care that puts patients back at the centre of health-care delivery. The Province announced investments in health care across the board, including hospital expansion, seniors care and expanded diagnostic and treatment options for B.C. patients.

The of the Confidence and Supply Agreement (CASA) with the B.C. Green Caucus has provided the basis for the government to move forward on initiatives that are important to both caucuses and deliver strong, stable government that puts people first – from reforming campaign finance laws, to moving forward with a referendum on proportional representation, eliminating MSP fees and more. As part of CASA, government is working in collaboration with the B.C. Green Caucus on a strategy to rise to the challenge of climate change while creating good jobs and better opportunities for people. The plan will be announced in the coming weeks.

Premier Horgan and Minister James vowed the government will continue to work collaboratively to deliver solutions to the problems people in B.C. face every day.

Government/business MOU aimed at establishing B.C. as a low-carbon economic leader

VANCOUVER – B.C.'s government and business leaders have signed a first-of-its-kind agreement to establish British Columbia as a world leader in delivering low-carbon goods and services to domestic and global markets.

This commitment comes through a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) signed and released today by the provincial government and the Business Council of British Columbia (BCBC). Under the MOU, the parties will work together to develop an industrial strategy that transitions B.C. into a low-carbon economy leader. The final strategy will be consistent with both parties' commitment to advancing reconciliation through new economic opportunities for Indigenous peoples.

"B.C. is uniquely positioned as a destination and supplier of choice for industry looking to drive low-carbon economic growth and opportunities," said Premier John Horgan. "Working together, we can meet the increasing global demand for products, services and solutions that reduce air pollution and protect our climate."

"This joint initiative will enable British Columbia industries to become competitive global suppliers of lower-carbon commodities, goods and innovations that will reduce climate change impacts in emissions intensive countries abroad," said Greg D'Avignon, President and Chief Executive Officer, Business Council of British Columbia. "The low carbon strategy will also contribute to a strong, competitive economy that can attract investment to B.C. and further reduce our own emissions intensity."

The strategy developed through the MOU will chart a path forward for the Province and BCBC to collaborate on best ways to boost business investment and build a strong, identifiable low-carbon brand. Key to that is leveraging the province's assets, including B.C.'s abundance of clean electricity and its strategic location on the Pacific coast.

"This MOU is intended to unlock British Columbia's full economic potential in a world that's rapidly embracing urgent climate action and eager for low-carbon solutions in the form of products, technologies, and energy inputs," said Horgan. "This collaboration between business and government will enhance British Columbia's competitive advantages, avoid carbon leakage and help us advance this generational opportunity."

"We know a healthier, cleaner environment and a strong economy can go hand in hand," said George Heyman, Minister of Environment and Climate Change Strategy. "The MOU will help us focus our work on the shared objectives of reducing harmful emissions while advancing B.C.'s economic competitiveness."

The MOU recognizes that government's soon-to-be-announced climate strategy – intended to reduce B.C.'s domestic climate impacts and provide for the prosperity of the people, business and communities of B.C. – is a foundational component of the proposed low-carbon industrial strategy.

In recognizing the potential challenges that come with significant transition, the MOU commits both sides to making sure energy intensive, trade-exposed industries remain competitive with jurisdictions that do not put a price on carbon pollution.

"Working together, we can meet the increasing global demand for products, services and solutions that reduce air pollution and protect our climate."

< BCBC quote here >

The strategy developed through the MOU will chart a path forward for the Province and BCBC to collaborate on best ways to boost business investment and build a strong, identifiable low-carbon brand. Key to that is leveraging the province's assets, including B.C.'s abundance of clean electricity and its strategic location on the Pacific coast.

"This MOU is intended to unlock British Columbia's full economic potential in a world that's rapidly embracing urgent climate action and eager for low-carbon solutions in the form of products, technologies, and energy inputs," said Horgan. "This collaboration between business and government will enhance British Columbia's competitive advantages, avoid carbon leakage and help us advance this generational opportunity."

"We know a healthier, cleaner environment and a strong economy can go hand in hand," said George Heyman, Minister of Environment and Climate Change Strategy. "The MOU will help us focus our work on the shared objectives of reducing harmful emissions while advancing B.C.'s economic competitiveness."

The MOU recognizes that government's soon-to-be-announced climate strategy – intended to reduce B.C.'s domestic climate impacts and provide for the prosperity of the people, business and communities of B.C. – is a foundational component of the proposed low-carbon industrial strategy.

In recognizing the potential challenges that come with significant transition, the MOU commits both sides to making sure energy intensive, trade-exposed industries remain competitive with jurisdictions that do not put a price on carbon pollution.

Hi all,

Apologies for my delay in touching base on details for Friday's announcement with Minister Wilkinson on the BC Salmon Innovation and Restoration Fund. There were a number of details still in flux that we have not come to ground on.

The announcement will take place at the Pacific Science Enterprise Centre (PSEC) in West Vancouver. We are tracking towards an 11:30 AM announcement, but understanding that the Premier has a personal interest in attending a bit of flexibility is possible.

Can we connect today to discuss further?

Fall session focused on working for a better B.C., delivering results for people

VICTORIA – Making the province’s economy stronger, more sustainable, and taking action on the biggest challenges facing people in B.C. was at the core of government work, both inside and outside of the legislature this fall.

“Making life better for people is what drives our government every single day. We’re delivering on affordable housing, improving health care and creating accessible child care” said Premier John Horgan as the House rose for the end of the fall session. “We’re going to keep investing in people to build a strong, sustainable economy, and a better future for everyone in B.C.” NOT APPROVED

Key pieces of legislation passed this session will improve the delivery of health care and strengthen protections for health-sector workers, promote and protect human rights in B.C., put targets in place for a cleaner, low-carbon economy, tackle speculation in the housing market, enable government to eliminate unfair MSP premiums, and put British Columbia on the path to reduce the province’s overall poverty rate by 25% over the next five years.

The legislature rose a day after the release of the province’s second quarterly report, showing that British Columbia is operating debt-free for the first time in more than 40 years. B.C.’s real estate market is starting to moderate while the Province continues to make record-level capital investments in affordable housing, schools and hospitals. “We’re taking on the big challenges in our province from the housing crisis to child care, while getting the Province’s finances in order,” said Finance Minister and deputy Premier Carole James. “The second quarter results show we can make B.C.’s economy work for everyone, while investing in people and providing strong fiscal leadership for B.C.”

Over the past 16 months, the B.C. government has taken unprecedented action and made historic investments to make a difference in people's lives. This fall the government delivered on major commitments, including announcing 4,900 new affordable mixed income rental homes - the first of 14,000 for mixed and middle-income people and families throughout B.C. The homes are part of the largest investment in housing affordability in B.C.'s history, more than $7 billion over 10 years.

As part of a $1 billion investment over three years to deliver low-cost, quality and affordable childcare, the government launched 53 prototype projects around the province to deliver child care that will cost families a maximum of $200 per month per child. The government also announced a new benefit to help 60,000 more families lower monthly child care costs.

To deliver better, faster health care for people in their communities, urgent primary care centres were announced in communities around the province. The care centres are part of a primary health-care strategy with a new focus on team-based care that puts patients back at the centre of health-care delivery. The Province announced investments in health care across the board, including hospital expansion, seniors' care and expanded diagnostic and treatment options for B.C. patients.

The Confidence and Supply Agreement (CASA) with the B.C. Green Caucus has provided the basis for the government to move forward on initiatives that are important to both caucuses and deliver strong, stable government that puts people first – from reforming campaign finance laws, to moving forward with a referendum on proportional representation, eliminating MSP fees and more. As part of CASA, government is working in collaboration with the B.C. Green Caucus on a strategy to rise to the challenge of climate change while creating good jobs and better opportunities for people. The plan will be announced in the coming weeks.

Premier Horgan and Minister James vowed the government will continue to work collaboratively to deliver solutions to the problems people in B.C. face every day.

Hi Danielle

Quick update on this. Our program contacts tell us Canada is going to remain low key with an announcement – assuming the USMCA signing goes ahead on the 30th. The PM will step back and let the Ministry of Foreign Affairs take the lead.

We are drafting a statement (in MBR's voice) to recognize the achievement and reiterate BC's position on remaining trade tariffs. We will share it with you after program signs off.

Can you advise if there is strong interest at the PO in releasing this statement?

Thanks

Subject: USMCA update

Hi Danielle

I was not accurate with the next steps for the USMCA.

- We did release a statement to celebrate the new NAFTA agreement Oct 1st. At the time the media focus was on the wine retail and dairy supply management issues.
- There is supposed to be a signing ceremony for the 3 countries November 30 in Washington (TBC)
- All 3 countries will individually ratify the agreement at home.
- There is speculation the new US Congress may delay the American ratification process.

We will follow up with details on the potential signing ceremony.

Premier John Horgan's statement on the start of Chanukah

VICTORIA – Premier John Horgan has issued the following statement in recognition of the beginning of Chanukah:

“Over eight nights, in the darkness of winter, Jewish people in every part of the province will light candles to welcome hope, light and happiness into their homes.

“Families, friends and loved ones will celebrate the miracles and joy of Chanukah by gathering together, giving gifts and offering prayers. These are traditions that have been carried on for thousands of years in recognition of peace, renewal and celebration.

“Now, more than ever, it's important stand up and speak out against hate, violence and discrimination in the world. British Columbians deeply value diversity, inclusion and mutual respect.

“Freedom of worship, religion and self expression are at the heart of an open and progressive society. Our government always will continue to champion these values and work together to make sure our province is a welcoming place for everyone.

“To all those celebrating Chanukah, Chag Sameach! May the joy of the season bring you health and happiness throughout the coming year.”

NEWS RELEASE

Fall session focused on working for a better B.C., delivering results for people

VICTORIA - Making the province's economy stronger, more sustainable, and taking action on the biggest challenges facing people in B.C. were at the core of government work, both inside and outside of the Parliament Buildings this fall.

"Making life better for people is what drives our government every single day. We're delivering on affordable housing, improving health care and creating accessible child care," said Premier John Horgan as the House rose for the end of the fall session. "We're going to keep investing in people to build a strong, sustainable economy and a better future for everyone in B.C."

Key pieces of legislation passed this session will improve the delivery of health care and strengthen protections for health-sector workers, promote and protect human rights in B.C., tackle speculation in the housing market, enable government to eliminate unfair Medical Services Plan (MSP) premiums and put British Columbia on the path to reduce the province's overall poverty rate by 25% over the next five years.

The legislature rose a day after the release of the province's second quarterly report, showing that British Columbia is operating debt-free for the first time in more than 40 years. B.C.'s real estate market is starting to moderate while the Province continues to make record-level capital investments in affordable housing, schools and hospitals.

"We're taking on the big challenges in our province, from the housing crisis to child care, while getting the Province's finances in order," said Carole James, Minister of Finance and deputy Premier. "The second quarter results show we can make B.C.'s economy work for everyone, while investing in people and providing strong fiscal leadership for B.C."

Over the past 16 months, the B.C. government has taken unprecedented action and made historic investments to make a difference in people's lives. In the fall, government delivered on major commitments, including announcing 4,900 new affordable mixed income rental homes - the first of 14,000 for mixed- and middle-income people and families throughout B.C. The homes are part of the largest investment in housing affordability in B.C.'s history - more than $7 billion over 10 years.

As part of a $1-billion investment over three years to deliver low-cost, quality and affordable child care, government launched 53 prototype projects around the province to deliver child care that will cost families a maximum of $200 per month per child. Government also announced a new benefit to help 60,000 more families lower monthly child care costs.

To deliver better, faster health care for people in their communities, urgent primary care centres were announced in communities around the province. The care centres are part of a primary health-care strategy with a new focus on team-based care that puts patients at the centre of health-care delivery. The Province announced investments in health care across the board, including hospital expansion, seniors' care and expanded diagnostic and treatment options for B.C. patients.

The Confidence and Supply Agreement (CASA) with the B.C. Green caucus has provided the basis for the government to move forward on initiatives that are important to both caucuses and deliver strong, stable government that puts people first - from reforming campaign finance laws to moving forward with a referendum on proportional representation, eliminating MSP fees and more. As part of CASA, government is working in collaboration with the B.C. Green caucus on a strategy to rise to the challenge of climate change while creating good jobs and better opportunities for people. The plan will be announced in the coming weeks.

Premier Horgan and James vowed the government will continue to work collaboratively to deliver solutions to the problems people in B.C. face every day.

Hello Richard,

First suite of materials. A QA is attached but we've had to nix the QA portion of the event due to time constraints. Coming – material on government Q2 numbers, info on business and income tax, and more on the Climate Plan (aka CleanBC).

PJH wants to continue to use the People / Power / Place frame to organize his thoughts. The attached outline is there to help with Ministry-approved boiler plate, if that is indeed helpful.

Hi all

Attached find revised graphics – a dark blue replaces the mist (smoke) in most everything, and there is a better picture used for the pop up. I am really happy with these, but let me know what you think.

I would like to send these things to print today if possible.

Thanks

Hi Rick:

Attached are the updated graphics for the upcoming Clean BC event.

The poster boards, PPT and podium sign have two options: light grey background and dark blue background. Let me know which you prefer. Shoehorning the waterfall graphic into these items confuses the communication.

The display banner includes the corrected graphic that Andrew created.

Let me know what can be sent to print when you get the chance. I have alerted Queens' Printer to ship these to the Premier's Vancouver Office, attention Jarrett.

Hi Cal,

These look great, thanks very very much. The biggest concern I have is that I feel like the colours of the provincial brand are a big clash. Is it possible in the case where there is a header to remove that and have the cloud backdrop go all the way up and just have the provincial logo in a single colour in a sort of water mark colour over top of the cloud mist? Perhaps white won't work over top of the cloud backdrop, but having it subtle might be good. It might be good to see both white and another try using the green or teal colours of either the "Clean" or the "BC" in the cleanBC logo. Green might be good in this case given the context. Same goes for the provincial logo on the podium sign. Let me know what you think and if this is clear.

I'll have more thoughts next week.

Thanks
Rick

Hi Rick:

Attached are mock-ups for the materials you requested below.

There are a couple of iterations for a few of the items – like the pop-up “Swop” display banner – for your perusal. Each of these items includes the newly created name of the climate plan and the identity that the external agency has established for it.

I haven’t included the name placard. The length of the names is going to drive the design of this product (Muthuchidambaram is a much longer name than Horgan, for example). It should be straight-forward to pull together once the names are defined.

Let me know which of these attached pieces work for you and we can go from there. The timeline for printing the pop-up “Swop” display banner will be the longest, so it should be decided on as soon as possible.

Hope these help.

--reply above this line--

We will be doing the climate launch in early December and the event is going to be one that requires a great deal of materials. I understand that there is a visual design from which materials could be made, and I wanted to get requests into you sooner rather than later. Here is a list of things I’d like to see for consideration at this point:

- *A 16x9 screen design to be used on a large flat screen tv, with the title of the plan/campaign
- *A 16x9 screen design to be used on a large flat screen tv, with “Premier John Horgan” replacing the title of the plan, but the design the same
- *A podium sign with the title of the plan

- *A popup banner with the title of the plan
- *A table tent card with a place holder of a person's name (first and last) as the most prominent words and the title of the plan smaller.
- *Vertical name signs with a placeholder of a person's last name only – that looks sort of like this:

https://www.google.ca/search?q=Debate+Spin+room&rlz=1C1CHBF_enCA776US777&source=lnms&tbn=isch&sa=X&ved=0ahUKEwiiivXHpuTeAhVtFjQIHX_mBmQQ_AUIDigB&biw=1351&bih=743#imgrc=Y0hWCe7W9ZsvDM:

- *A placard sign with the name of the plan to be put on an easel.
- *The same placard sign with the name of the plan, but one with a right pointing directional arrow, and another one with a left pointing directional arrow, and another one with an upwards arrow.

Hi Kate,

We've received three emails from this writer, the first two on Nov. 15 and the third on November 21. I've been in contact with MOTI a few times about this, they are currently looking into which ministry is best to take the lead as it touches on a few issues. I last followed up on Friday after this writer called the front desk, and MOTI said they would follow up with their program area to try to expedite. Let me know if you'd like me to follow up again.

Hello – focuses on British Columbia’s unique contributions to AIDS research and our government’s AIDS-related health initiatives.

For Immediate Release
Office of the Premier
Dec. 1, 2018
Corp. Cal: PREM

Premier’s statement in recognition of World AIDS Day

Premier John Horgan has issued the following statement in recognition of World AIDS Day on Dec. 1, 2018:

“2018 marks the 30th anniversary of the first World AIDS Day. On this day in particular, British Columbians wear the red ribbon to acknowledge people living with HIV, remember those we have lost to this disease, and recognize the many people leading the fight to eliminate this epidemic.

“Led by the ground-breaking work of Dr. Julio Montaner and the B.C. Centre for Excellence in HIV/AIDS, B.C. has been at the forefront of research, prevention and treatment for people living with and at risk of acquiring HIV.

“Recognizing that there is no cure or vaccine for HIV, we do have a made in BC strategy - Treatment as Prevention – that with sustained treatment and care, will render the virus undetectable in the blood and will make HIV non-transmittable.

B.C. has been a leader in HIV research since the early days of the epidemic including the implementation of Highly Active Antiretroviral Therapy and in providing the groundwork for the global UNAIDS 90-90-90 Target. This United Nations program is built on the backbone of B.C.’s world-renowned Treatment as Prevention strategy.

To further help people live longer and healthier lives, this year our government made pre-exposure prophylaxis, known as PrEP, available to all British Columbians at high risk of HIV infection. PrEP medication prevents new HIV infections and is available at no cost to the patient.

“Because UNAIDS estimates that 9.4 million people worldwide are unknowingly living with HIV, this year’s global theme for World AIDS Day is ‘Know your status.’ Thanks to the efforts and dedication of countless people working in this field, more British Columbians than ever have access to HIV testing, giving people the opportunity to receive early treatment, care and support.

“We are grateful to every researcher, medical practitioner and health-care worker who supports patients living with or is vulnerable to HIV. And, we thank every community organization working to raise awareness and fight stigma and discrimination, including the Canadian Aboriginal AIDS Network that is marking the 20th anniversary of Aboriginal AIDS Awareness Week this year.

“Today, AIDS-related deaths are at an all-time low in B.C. Together, we stand with the United Nations and the rest of Canada in renewing our commitment to end the AIDS epidemic, here and across the globe.”

One more point: I know this is a formality but I think we should state that the invite is non-transferable. If they can't attend and they'd like someone else from their org to be there, perhaps they can write whoever sends out the invite? I just think we should be somewhat on top of who is coming.

Building off our key messages, I would suggest:

The Honourable John Horgan

Premier of British Columbia

Invites you to attend the launch of CleanBC, the Province's plan to cut carbon emissions, boost the economy, and make life better for people.

We can also include the CleanBC visual identity – I heard support from this at our Monday meeting and am ok with this 'early reveal' if others like it.

Hi again,

The attached generic invite is being designed to hint at our climate branding. The text reads:

The Honourable John Horgan
Premier of British Columbia
Invites you to attend an important announcement regarding BC's Climate Plan

Can you let me know what you would like the phrase to read?

Ideally I need this in the next two hours, let me know if I should loop in anyone else.

> The BC Assembly of First Nations, First Nations Summit and Union of BC Indian Chiefs, working together as the First Nations Leadership Council (FNLC), and the Province also announced they are co-developing new legislation for introduction in 2019 to implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People (UN declaration) in B.C.

> "Undoubtedly this is a momentous occasion for all First Nations in the Province of B.C.," said Grand Chief Joe Hall, First Nations lead negotiator and past chair of the BC First Nations Gaming Commission. "We have worked at this for many many years and now we have finally arrived at an agreement that will see much needed revenue from gaming shared with all the First Nation communities of BC. The countless stories that we heard about how the revenue will make a significant difference in our communities was both heart-warming and inspirational. Our negotiating team is so pleased that this government has by demonstration addressed and resolved this specific long-standing unfairness. It bodes well for the reconciliation efforts in this province."

> "UN declaration legislation and gaming revenue sharing are important steps forward to advance true and lasting reconciliation, and create certainty and opportunity for First Nations and the province as a whole," said Premier Horgan. "Sharing gaming revenues will mean First Nations have the ability to invest in the services and infrastructure healthy communities need - child care, supports for new mothers, housing, road upgrades and economic development to create a better future for everyone in B.C."

> The joint announcement was made by the provincial government and First Nations Leadership Council at the annual B.C. Cabinet-First Nations Leaders' Gathering in Vancouver, where more than 650 meetings between First Nations leaders, cabinet ministers and deputy ministers will be held over the next two days.

> "This is a historic and progressive action by the provincial government to address the ongoing issues regarding jurisdiction and gaming revenue sharing," stated Regional Chief Terry Teegee of the BC Assembly of First Nations. "We see this as a positive first step, and look forward to this new fiscal arrangement. We will see a growth in the number and quality of community projects, including business ventures that will consequently contribute to increased economic prosperity for all British Columbians."

> The FNLC and provincial government have been working together to develop a set of concrete actions to advance reconciliation together, with new legislation and gaming revenue sharing as top priorities. The First Nations Gaming Commission has been in negotiations with the Province over the past year on a model to implement gaming revenue sharing. For decades, First Nations leaders have advocated for a share of gaming revenue.

> "We are pleased the Government of B.C. has committed to the implementation of the UN declaration and the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's Calls to Action, but now we need to put these commitments into concrete actions," said Cheryl Casimer of the First Nations Summit Political Executive. "After many years and attempts to create a mutual agenda and roadmap for an improved relationship and moving substantially forward on reconciliation, B.C. First Nations and the government have finally landed on a renewed vision and plan for reconciling Aboriginal title and rights, with asserted Crown title and jurisdiction." She continued, "The Commitment Document sets out a progressive shared vision and plan with the Province. It recognizes our inherent rights of self-determination and jurisdiction, as well as our rights related to our lands, resources and territories. This new path and our collective work must be based on a new set of principles and values rather than the old colonial standard of denial."

> "We are committing to work together with First Nations throughout B.C. in ways we never have before, to take bold steps that truly support self-government and self-determination," said Scott Fraser, Minister of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation. "For the first time, the B.C. government will be sharing gaming revenues with First Nations, for the benefit of every nation across this province."

> The Province's commitment to gaming revenue sharing starts with $2 million in immediate support to establish a B.C. First Nations gaming distribution limited partnership, which will manage the new revenue.

> "Today's historic announcement marks a significant achievement in the Government of B.C.'s journey to reconcile its colonial history with the unextinguished Title and Rights of Indigenous peoples," stated Grand Chief Stewart Phillip, president of the Union of BC Indian Chiefs. "First Nations in B.C. continue to experience the ongoing impacts of colonization, including a lack of recognition for our rights and disproportionately poor living conditions. We are hopeful that the joint work we commit to with the Province will improve the lives of our people and for all British Columbians. Jointly-developed, recognition- and rights-based legislative, policy and operational changes are needed to get out of this colonial hangover. B.C.'s commitment to developing a legislative framework for the full implementation of the standards and principles of the UN declaration, and its commitment to share gaming revenue, is a significant step towards the realization of Indigenous peoples' right to self-determination and the revitalization of Indigenous governments and a nation-to-nation relationship. We cannot reiterate enough, the UN declaration must be the framework for reconciliation in B.C."

> "This is an enormous step forward on the path to reconciliation and truly recognizing the right to self-determination for First Nations," said Carole James, Minister of Finance. "First Nations know better than anyone what their communities need to thrive. When First Nations can focus on their priorities, it creates new opportunities for communities to flourish both today and for the generations to come."

> Quick Facts:

> * All First Nations will be eligible for a portion of the new gaming revenue fund. A new limited partnership, comprised of a First Nations-appointed board of directors, will oversee the distribution of the funds.

> * First Nations will determine the best use for the new funding from a share of annual provincial gaming revenues. Funding will focus on priorities in the following framework: health and wellness; infrastructure, safety, transportation and housing; economic and business development; education, language, culture and training; community development and environmental protection; and capacity building, fiscal management and governance. Within that framework, First Nations governments will determine their own priorities for these funds.

> * Gaming revenue sharing will be provided in addition to existing revenue sharing. Currently, economic benefits agreements between the Province and First Nations are primarily resource based, and provide approximately $125 million annually to First Nations whose land and rights are affected.

It is organized in partnership between the First Nations Leadership Council and the Ministry of Indigenous Relations and Reconciliation. > New legislation and a share of provincial gaming revenues for First Nations top the list of priorities recently agreed to between the provincial government and First Nations Leadership Council (FNLC) under a set of concrete actions that form a joint work plan to implement the 2015 Commitment Document. The joint work, guided by a shared vision, will strengthen government-to-government relationships with First Nations as the Province continues its work to implement the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (UN declaration) and Truth and Reconciliation Commission's 94 Calls to Action.

> * Developing legislation by fall 2019, similar to the federal private member's bill C-262, to establish the UN declaration as the framework for reconciliation in British Columbia.

> * Developing new fiscal models of sharing provincial revenues to support First Nations self-government, including a new model to share gaming revenue by 2019.

> * Establishing an independent Indigenous commission within three years that supports First Nations, upon request, with self-government, including boundary resolutions, developing constitutions, making laws and policies, and land-use planning, as identified in the 2015 Commitment Document.

> The 2015 Commitment Document set an agenda for achieving an effective Crown-First Nations relationship in B.C., and working collaboratively to improve social and economic outcomes for First Nations communities. It is seen as a key tool for advancing Aboriginal title and rights, and as a means for First Nations to work toward establishing their own jurisdictions, governance, laws and responsibilities. The vision and concrete actions documents help to mobilize this agenda by outlining a clear approach and a shared work plan for achieving meaningful progress.

Request

Wondering if the minister is available today to talk about the prospect of Alberta buying more rail cars to transport more oil by rail.

Recommendation (if minister is unavailable, provide statement below)

"Our government is committed to protecting people, economy, our lands and water from the risk of diluted bitumen regardless of how it is shipped. British Columbians have told us very clearly that they expect our government to look out for their interests and ensure that when hazardous products are shipped through or near their communities we apply the highest spill prevention and response standards within our jurisdiction. We have already introduced new regulations to improve spill prevention, planning and response, and are actively developing regulations to better protect BC communities. We also have launched a reference case to confirm our authority to control the movement of heavy oils within our borders. We are taking action to make British Columbians safer in the face of risks of bitumen transport, whether by rail or by pipeline.”

NEWS RELEASE

Fall session focused on working for a better B.C., delivering results for people

VICTORIA - Making the province's economy stronger, more sustainable, and taking action on the biggest challenges facing people in B.C. were at the core of government work, both inside and outside of the Parliament Buildings this fall.

"Making life better for people is what drives our government every single day. We're delivering on affordable housing, improving health care and creating accessible child care," said Premier John Horgan as the House rose for the end of the fall session. "We're going to keep investing in people to build a strong, sustainable economy and a better future for everyone in B.C."

Key pieces of legislation passed this session will improve the delivery of health care and strengthen protections for health-sector workers, promote and protect human rights in B.C., tackle speculation in the housing market, enable government to eliminate unfair Medical Services Plan (MSP) premiums and put British Columbia on the path to reduce the province's overall poverty rate by 25% over the next five years.

The legislature rose a day after the release of the province's second quarterly report, showing that British Columbia is operating debt-free for the first time in more than 40 years. B.C.'s real estate market is starting to moderate while the Province continues to make record-level capital investments in affordable housing, schools and hospitals.

"We're taking on the big challenges in our province, from the housing crisis to child care, while getting the Province's finances in order," said Carole James, Minister of Finance and deputy Premier. "The second quarter results show we can make B.C.'s economy work for everyone, while investing in people and providing strong fiscal leadership for B.C."

Over the past 16 months, the B.C. government has taken unprecedented action and made historic investments to make a difference in people's lives. In the fall, government delivered on major commitments, including announcing 4,900 new affordable mixed income rental homes - the first of 14,000 for mixed- and middle-income people and families throughout B.C. The homes are part of the largest investment in housing affordability in B.C.'s history - more than $7 billion over 10 years.

As part of a $1-billion investment over three years to deliver low-cost, quality and affordable child care, government launched 53 prototype projects around the province to deliver child care that will cost families a maximum of $200 per month per child. Government also announced a new benefit to help 60,000 more families lower monthly child care costs.

To deliver better, faster health care for people in their communities, urgent primary care centres were announced in communities around the province. The care centres are part of a primary health-care strategy with a new focus on team-based care that puts patients at the centre of health-care delivery. The Province announced investments in health care across the board, including hospital expansion, seniors' care and expanded diagnostic and treatment options for B.C. patients.

The Confidence and Supply Agreement (CASA) with the B.C. Green caucus has provided the basis for the government to move forward on initiatives that are important to both caucuses and deliver strong, stable government that puts people first - from reforming campaign finance laws to moving forward with a referendum on proportional representation, eliminating MSP fees and more. As part of CASA, government is working in collaboration with the B.C. Green caucus on a strategy to rise to the challenge of climate change while creating good jobs and better opportunities for people. The plan will be announced in the coming weeks.

Premier Horgan and James vowed the government will continue to work collaboratively to deliver solutions to the problems people in B.C. face every day.

Subject: For review: CleanBC plan introduction

This intro will be printed under PJH's byline at the beginning of the CleanBC plan.

There's nothing more important than taking care of the place we call home.

No matter where you live, no matter your age or background, you want a good life and a secure future in the community you've chosen to live and work in. For today, and for your kids and grandkids tomorrow. That's why we are bringing forward our CleanBC plan.

It's a plan about climate and science, ideas and targets. But ultimately, CleanBC is about putting our province on the path to a cleaner, better future – with a low-carbon economy that creates opportunities for all while protecting our clean air, land and water.

The roots and inspiration for this plan are many. It acknowledges the accomplishments of Premier Gordon Campbell's government a decade ago in making B.C. a leader in reducing greenhouse gas emissions. It reflects the global commitment established three years ago in Paris to save our planet's future by acting on climate change now. Ultimately, though, CleanBC is inspired by the aspirations of the people of British Columbia, who work hard every day to help build our province and who ask for nothing more than a secure, sustainable future.

CleanBC directly addresses the challenges before us.

It holds that by working together, we can meet the increasing demand for an economy that is productive and forward-looking, while reducing pollution and protecting our climate. With the right path forward, business, industry, Indigenous peoples, workers and communities can come together to unlock B.C.'s full economic potential in a world that's beginning to embrace urgent climate action and eager for low-carbon products, services, and energy inputs.

It argues that transitioning to a low-polluting economy will deliver more and higher-value jobs for British Columbians in resource industries, the service economy, and in emerging and growing sectors. By positioning B.C. as a low-carbon leader, we will attract increased and new investment from around the globe – opening the door to more opportunities for people and companies, large and small, throughout our province.

Finally, CleanBC embraces all that makes British Columbia special – the nature, the people, the spirit of community – and demands we do more to protect it from the dangers posed by climate change. The unprecedented droughts, wildfires and floods we've seen in recent years must serve as notice. Our obligation to this province must be to improve how we live, work and commute – moving forward on a path that makes clean, renewable energy and pollution reduction the norm.

CleanBC is an outcome of the contribution of many, in particular the Climate Solutions and Clean Growth Advisory Council, convened by Minister George Heyman to provide strategic advice to government on climate action and low-carbon economic growth. I'm proud also that we have developed this plan in concert with our partners in the B.C. Green Caucus, who work tirelessly to bring forward the voices of so many British Columbians who care deeply about our province's future.

This plan is now public. Let the discussion, dialogue and solutions begin. And let's work together to build a better B.C. for everyone.

Additional Quotes:

Climate change is often seen as a challenge, but in every challenge lies opportunity. CleanBC will ensure our province is able to seize opportunities for innovation and growth. By coming together to enact this plan, B.C. is charting a path that will advance a high quality of life for generations of British Columbians to come.

Dr. Andrew Weaver
Leader, B.C. Green Caucus; MLA – Oak Bay-Gordon Head

The CleanBC plan sets our province on a cleaner path over the next decade and beyond, reducing pollution and making cleaner solutions more convenient, available and affordable for British Columbians.

Within a global commitment to address climate change, B.C. must do its part by changing how we power our province, manage our waste, and protect our air, land and water. The change we need to make is already underway, as we move towards a cleaner, healthier and more sustainable future for ourselves and our children.

George Heyman
Minister of Environment and Climate Change Strategy

B.C. is a leader in generating clean, renewable energy. With CleanBC, we are working to leverage our abundant hydroelectricity to power our province's future.

We look forward to continuing our work with resource industries who have been taking action over the last two decades to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and who are embracing the responsibility to do more. Working together, we can create a future defined by cleaner energy, reduced pollution, and new opportunities and jobs for British Columbians.

Michelle Mungall
Minister of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources

B.C. can be a premiere global destination for industry looking to drive low-carbon economic growth and opportunities. Putting B.C. on the world stage as a leader in clean energy, products and services will open the door to new investment in established companies and start-ups alike, delivering more good-paying jobs for British Columbians.

This is the final draft - it's now in graphic production – the introductory letter, a few numbers and appendix tables remaining but otherwise complete.

Thanks to all who've worked to get this through multiple revisions - special shout out to Rosa for keeping this all together and to Tim, Elaine and the CAS Crew who've fueled and funneled all the bits and bobs, as Bobbi would say.

Next up will be completion of the finished document, collateral materials, and work towards the announcement of CleanBC in Vancouver on Dec 5.

Here is an itinerary that I made for the day's events on the 5th. There are a few details around the post-event scrum that need to be figured out, but that should be done today or Monday. And of course anything else that you think needs changing, we can do that.

Let me know if there are any questions

Hello Danielle and Sage

Here is the revised statement for USMCA/CUSMA. We need it to be tight. The goal is to express dissatisfaction with US tariffs, while not criticizing the Canadian negotiators. It is not for proactive distribution.

Please review this morning if possible.

Thanks
Brad

VICTORIA – Minister of Jobs, Trade and Technology Bruce Ralston and Minister of State for Trade George Chow have issued the following statement in response to the signing of the new trade agreement between Canada, the United States and Mexico:

“The signing of the new Canada-United States-Mexico- Agreement (CUSMA) is a positive step toward greater trade stability for B.C. businesses. While encouraged by this development, we continue to monitor other Canada-U.S. trade issues, such as the tariffs on softwood, steel and aluminum. These tariffs directly impact the bottom lines of hardworking British Columbians. They’re bad for workers, businesses, and families on both sides of the border, and we will continue to advocate for their removal with the federal government.”

And we decided it will not go out proactively.

This looks okay to me, but I think Sage needs to weigh in on the overall tone.

Is the MO wanting to send this proactively?

We had discussed maybe just having MBR respond to requests.

Hello,

Just had some verbal feedback from Sage over the phone.

It feels like the two pieces of the statement are in opposition to each other, and it feels like it doesn't really feel like it says anything in particular.

It's much different than the original PJH/MBR statement you drafted a few weeks ago.

Did that go out in the end? Would you mind taking another stab at this?

Thanks,
Danielle

Hi Sarah

We drafted a statement for the signing of the USMCA, scheduled for Friday. The signing is not confirmed but likely to go ahead on the sidelines of the G20 in Argentina. This is an opportunity to reiterate the Province's support for people impacted by US tariffs.

This has program approval but not yet shared with MO.

Let us know if you have any thoughts on this statement.

Brad

Subject: As discussed yesterday --
Health announcements for December

Hi Rick and Robyn, As discussed yesterday, a bit of an update for you.

Jas is going to get back to us on dates, likely over the weekend, but these are the events that we hope to roll out between now and the new year. I will let you know if any others come up, but these will be the focus. We may potentially have a couple of more issuey announcements and likely some releases, but wanted to get the events on your radar.

Pups Assisting Wellness for Staff (P.A.W.S.) program – Vancouver Event to with Vancouver Coastal Health to publicly announce the P.A.W.S. project, which recently completed phase one and is ready to expand. A canine named Dr. Snuggles has served as a therapeutic comfort dog this summer for frontline staff needing support at Vancouver General Hospital's emergency department and intensive care unit. The pilot proved successful and he'll soon be joined by other dogs for phase two of the program. Media will have the opportunity to meet Dr. Snuggles, learn about the program and hear first-hand accounts of his impact on staff and patients.

Eagle Ridge Hospital groundbreaking – Port Moody Event to highlight that work will soon start on an expanded emergency department at Eagle Ridge Hospital. The expansion will more than double the number of treatment spaces from 19 to 39, meaning better care for people in the area. It will include four new isolation rooms to support improved infection-control measures as well as two new trauma resuscitation bays. Separated entrances will also be created for walk-in patients and ambulances.

Royal Inland Hospital patient care tower groundbreaking and Coronary Care Unit – Kamloops
Minister to attend event to celebrate official groundbreaking for $400 million Royal Inland Hospital Patient Care Tower at Royal Inland Hospital. We would also highlight financial close for this project and that EllisDon has been able to finance with a green bond. Could be tied to coincide with a separate announcement about Royal Inland's new coronary care unit. The coronary care unit is part of the Province's investment of $4.7 million over the next two years to strengthen cardiac care for Kamloops and region residents. Community is aware of the unit, but this would be an opportunity to officially celebrate with partners, including the Royal Inland Hospital Foundation.

Announcement on implementation of Fair PharmaCare – Vancouver (as discussed, potentially Sunday, December 30)
Event to highlight that effective Jan. 1, 2019, changes to eliminate or reduce the PharmaCare deductible for 240,000 British Columbians will take effect.

Provincial Health Officer annual report – Vancouver – December 20 (afternoon) TBC
