OK – perfect. The FNLC call is scheduled for 4-430pm tomorrow and Treaty Nations from 930-10 on Friday. We have sent the invitations to you so please forward as needed to a designate and advise in advance of the calls who the Police Services rep will be so we can cover off in introductions.

Many thanks,
Carol

Morning Carol,

Yes I was in that same meeting.

I can confirm that PSB will attend both calls. Will just need to sort out who will be attending.

Cheers,

Cole,

Thanks for connecting back. You are probably in the same sessions as Heather Brazier.

We are setting up two calls re the new EPA Orders to give the FNLC and Treaty Nations advance notice.

The FNLC call has been set for 4-430pm tomorrow (only time available) and we are working on finding a time that will work for government and for Treaty Nations on Friday morning.

Dave wanted me to confirm that you (or a designate) will be available as Police Services is an essential participant on each of the calls. Sending the invite your way shortly as there is a need to get in calendars ASAP.

Let me know if you wish to discuss further.

(ccing Kayla Pepper who is coordinating logistics on the Treaty FN side)

Thanks,

Carol

Ministry of Public Safety and Solicitor General
EPA Order - Travel Restrictions

- I'd like to start out by providing reassurances that enforcement of the COVID related travel restrictions is going to be consistent with police stops standards.
- This order will not authorize police to stop British Columbian's on the streets and conduct inspections or investigations.
- The order will prevent non-essential travel between three regions on the province. These areas are:
 - the Fraser-Vancouver Coastal Health Authority region;
 - the Northern-Interior Health Authority region;
 - the Vancouver Island Health Authority region.

- British Columbians will continue to be able to travel for essential purposes. These purposes include:
 - Moving to a new residence,
 - Work and volunteer related purposes,
 - Receiving or assisting someone to receive health care services,
 - Providing care or assistance to friends or relatives that are sick, elderly or with a disability,
 - Receiving education at a post-secondary institution, and
 - Essential visitors will be able to visit seniors in long term care and assisted living facilities.
- The order will authorize police to establish road-checks to stop vehicles. Police already have the authority to do this in context of impaired driving so being asked to stop when in a motor vehicle is not a new requirement.

- Once stopped operator^{s.13} of the vehicle may be asked to identify who they are, where they live and if they are traveling for an essential reason, what that reason is.
- If there are reasonable grounds to believe that they have entered a region in contravention of the order they will be ordered to leave the region and may be issued a violation ticket.
- Police are not going to be conducting road checks in urban areas within the lower mainland as travel within this area is not being prohibited. They are going to be established in proximity to the boundary between the Fraser-Vancouver Coastal Health Authority region and the Northern-Interior Health Authority region.

- s.13

s.13 police may be present to support BC Ferries as they decline bookings to non-essential travellers.

- Enforcement may also occur during the lawful course of an officer's duties. For example, if police are responding to a disturbance in a hotel and one of the persons subject to the complaint is clearly from another region police would be able to issue a ticket.

Ministry of Public Safety and Solicitor General
EPA Order - Travel Restrictions

- I would like to start by acknowledging the Lekwungen peoples on whose traditional territory I stand and the Songhees, Esquimalt and W̱SÁNEĆ peoples whose historical relationships with the land continue to this day.
- The province is experiencing increased transmission rates of COVID-19 including an increased presence of variants.
- Community transmission and COVID-19 cases have increased significantly in the Lower Mainland, and cases are being transmitted by people travelling from the Lower Mainland to other parts of the Province;

- The increased transmission of COVID-19 is putting increased pressure on the health care system and public health system;
- The Provincial Health Office has identified that travel restrictions are now needed to prevent, respond to and alleviate the effects of the impacts of tCOVID-19 pandemic
- I am aware of the real concerns regarding police enforcement of these orders and the impacts this could have on the rights of all British Columbians and particularly the potential to disproportionately impact Black, Indigenous and racialized and vulnerable communities
- Enforcement of this order will be consistent with police stops standards.

- This order will not authorize police to stop British Columbian's on the streets and conduct inspections or investigations.
- As recommended by the PHO this order will prevent non-essential travel between three regions on the province. These areas are:
 - the Fraser-Vancouver Coastal Health Authority region;
 - the Northern-Interior Health Authority region;
 - the Vancouver Island Health Authority region.

- British Columbians will continue to be able to travel for essential purposes. These purposes include:
 - Moving to a new residence,

 - Receiving or assisting someone to receive health care services,
 - Providing care or assistance to friends or relatives that are sick, elderly or with a disability,
 - Receiving education at a post-secondary institution, and
 - Essential visitors will be able to visit seniors in long term care and assisted living facilities.
- I intend to make a further order that will authorize police to establish road-checks to stop vehicles. Police already have the authority to do this in context of impaired driving so being asked to stop when in a motor vehicle is not a new requirement.

- Once stopped operator^{s.13} of the vehicle may be asked to identify who they are, where they live and if they are traveling for an essential reason, what that reason is.
- If there are reasonable grounds to believe that they have entered a region in contravention of the order they will be ordered to leave the region and may be issued a violation ticket.
- This isn't likely to occur other than at transportation points linking the lower mainland to the interior.
- We may also see some police presence at BC Ferries should they need assistance upon declining bookings to non-essential travellers.

- Enforcement may also occur during the lawful course of an officer's duties. For example, if police are responding to a disturbance in a hotel and one of the persons subject to the complaint is clearly from another region police would be able to issue a ticket.
- I'm glad we are able to meet in this context to discuss some of these concerns and I hope this conversation can lend itself to informing our decisions as we develop these new travel restriction orders.

Thank you Sara. I've just confirmed with Melanie that the AG's Office are organizing the 845 briefing and our DMs are asked to join but no materials are required from EMBC or PSSG. As requested earlier, the Minister would like 5 minutes of spkg notes for 11 a.m. and I've confirmed with Melanie that Nikki has asked the Police Services Branch to prepare those.

s.16

s.16

It's possible the order will be released during the meeting with Treaty FN, in which case we'll e-mail the link.

- Agenda/format:
 - Carol to welcome and do acknowledgement
 - Dave to introduce topic, note that this does not constitute consultation
 - Heather – overview of order, including s. 6 (very brief)
 - Jamie – overview of enforcement, including issues raised in letter. Jamie says PSB is in a position to hear the concerns and address them to the extent possible.
 - Roundtable – questions/comments
- s.16
- There is a regularly scheduled FNLC call next week when the order and the questions in the letter can be discussed in more detail.

Hope this helps,

H.

Hi everyone:

Are any of you invited to this call on Road Checks this morning? I just got invited last night. I think my MO may have put together the guest list - we didn't give input but recognize a lot of the stakeholders from other anti-racism initiatives we have on the go.

Do you know if any other consultations are planned are on road checks with racialized communities? If they are, we're thinking it would be good to engage other folks who are active on some of the local police diversity committees - perhaps we could brainstorm on future lists.

Subject: RE: Roadstop Block with Community Stakeholders Meeting

Hi everyone:

Are any of you invited to this call on Road Checks this morning? I just got invited last night. I think my MO may have put together the guest list - we didn't give input but recognize a lot of the stakeholders from other anti-racism initiatives we have on the go.

Do you know if any other consultations are planned are on road checks with racialized communities? If they are, we're thinking it would be good to engage other folks who are active on some of the local police diversity committees - perhaps we could brainstorm on future lists.

Premier of BC John Horgan

Mike Farnworth, Minister of Public Safety and Solicitor General

David Eby, Attorney General and Minister responsible for Housing

VIA EMAIL ONLY

Subject: Proposed Travel Restrictions in BC and Accompanying Police Enforcement

Dear Premier Horgan, Minister Farnworth and Minister Eby,

We are writing to you today on behalf of the BC Civil Liberties Association, Union of BC Indian Chiefs, BC First Nations Justice Council, British Columbia Assembly of First Nations, First Nations Summit, Pivot Legal Society, Criminal Defence Advocacy Society, Coalition of Peers Dismantling the Drug War, Sanctuary Health, PACE Society, and the Pacific AIDS Network with serious concerns and questions about an upcoming provincial order on travel restrictions and accompanying police enforcement in BC, to be announced on April 23, 2021.

We absolutely believe there are urgent measures needed to be taken in order to curb the deadly spread of COVID-19 in our communities. However, we are deeply concerned about the overbroad and unconstitutional expansion of police powers that will disproportionately impact Black, Indigenous and racialized communities. Our key concern is with the proposed restrictions on a person's ability to leave their health-care authority and accompanying police enforcement.

It is concerning to us that the government would make two public announcements about a provincial order of this magnitude in such a vague way and with no accompanying details. We are also concerned that the comments of Premier Horgan and Solicitor General Farnworth are different from one another, which adds to the confusion experienced by the public. The lack of information and details about the order has raised many alarm bells, especially in the middle of a global and local reckoning about systemic racism in policing and policing powers.

Based on what we can gather from media reports, we have several concerns and questions for the provincial government regarding the serious constitutional issues at stake and potential harmful impacts of such a proposed order.

Definitions and Objectives:

1. What is “essential travel”? Will “essential travel” under the order be broadly defined to include, for example, access to support services, food delivery and mutual aid efforts in marginalized communities, care for a loved one, and work in criminalized economies? Indigenous, low-income and working-class people are often moving across local health authority boundaries to find more affordable or culturally-appropriate necessities.
2. How is the tailoring of the order to health authority boundaries connected to the objective of lowering COVID transmissions? What evidence is the Province relying on to inform the notion that the pending restrictions are reasonable limits on our rights?

Policing Powers:

3. What are the specific powers being granted to police that police will have to enforce this order?
4. What is the permissible scope of questioning that police will be authorized to conduct? Police do not currently have the powers to compel people to answer questions about where they are going and for what purpose. Would this order expand discretionary police powers to compel answers from BC residents suspected of traveling outside their health authority? All police powers, and especially discretionary police powers like police street checks, have a documented and indisputable history of being racist especially against Indigenous and Black people in BC.
5. What proof will police be asking for to ascertain if a person is leaving their health authority for essential travel? How are people expected to provide evidence that their mobility is essential? Will people have to produce sensitive personal information, such as proof of employment or medical information, to establish that their mobility is essential?

Due to a complex set of systemic institutional barriers, Indigenous peoples, migrants with precarious status, and those in criminalized economies are least likely to be able to provide the necessary evidence that might be demanded of them.

6. One of the many ways in which systemic racism in policing manifests is that racialized people, especially Black and Indigenous youth and gender-diverse people, are presumed guilty and have to prove their innocence. Can and how will the Province ensure that Black, Indigenous and racialized people are not subjected to increased police harassment, interrogation or surveillance during this questioning process by police?
7. Will people have access to legal counsel when stopped by the police at these checkpoints?
8. Will police have the authority to run people's names into police databases to, for example, collect information on outstanding warrants or check immigration status? Will the police be explicitly barred from enforcing other laws in the course of their questioning at these checkpoints? How will the provincial government ensure that police will not use these expanded police powers as a pretext for other law enforcement actions?
9. Will police be retaining or storing any information they collect in police databases? What are the restrictions on the collection, retention or disclosure of personal information? How will the provincial government ensure that any collected data is immediately destroyed?

Consequences:

10. What are the consequences for refusing to answer questions from the police? Will the police only have the power to issue violation tickets in the face of non-compliance with police questioning, or could the police obstruct people from continuing their movement (e.g. seize vehicles, detain people if they refuse to answer questions or provide identification documents, etc.)? Could it result in criminal charges such as obstruction?
11. What are the consequences for breaching the order? Due to the disproportionate levels of poverty that Indigenous, Black, racialized, and recent immigrant communities face, these communities will be less likely to be able to pay any fines that may be levied if they are found to be breaking the order.
12. Has the provincial government considered the potential and significant legal violations of constitutional and privacy rights and ensuing court challenges in drafting the order?

Consultation and Consent:

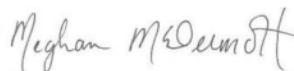

13. How are you consulting with diverse Black, Indigenous, racialized communities? Which organizations and individuals? It is a public process of consultation available to the most marginalized and vulnerable to police powers within diverse BIPOC communities?
14. How are you consulting sex workers and people who use drugs about the impact of travel on their access to services, travel to or from work, safe(r) supply, ethical substance use navigators, and services such as safe consumption sites, harm reduction distribution sites, peer support, and sex worker support services? Which organizations and individuals? Is it a public and safe consultation available to sex workers, people who use drugs, peer-led organizations, advocacy organizations, and harm reduction providers?
15. Indigenous peoples have been requesting full involvement in discussions regarding access to their respective territories since the COVID-19 pandemic began in spring 2020. The provincial government and all levels of government must recognize and respect First Nations jurisdiction and decisions in BC. Any introduction of orders that regulate movement of people throughout the province should have consent of all First Nations in BC. The Province has legislated the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People through the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples Act.

We welcome a response from your offices.

Thank you Sara. I've just confirmed with Melanie that the AG's Office are organizing the 845 briefing and our DMs are asked to join but no materials are required from EMBC or PSSG. As requested earlier, the Minister would like 5 minutes of spkg notes for 11 a.m. and I've confirmed with Melanie that Nikki has asked the Police Services Branch to prepare those.

Ministry of Public Safety and Solicitor General
EPA Order - Travel Restrictions

- I'd like to start out by providing reassurances that enforcement of the COVID related travel restrictions is going to be consistent with police stops standards.
- This order will not authorize police to stop British Columbian's on the streets and conduct inspections or investigations.
- The order will prevent non-essential travel between three regions on the province. These areas are:
 - the Fraser-Vancouver Coastal Health Authority region;
 - the Northern-Interior Health Authority region;
 - the Vancouver Island Health Authority region.

- British Columbians will continue to be able to travel for essential purposes. These purposes include:
 - Moving to a new residence,
 - Work and volunteer related purposes,
 - Receiving or assisting someone to receive health care services,
 - Providing care or assistance to friends or relatives that are sick, elderly or with a disability,
 - Receiving education at a post-secondary institution, and
 - Essential visitors will be able to visit seniors in long term care and assisted living facilities.
- The order will authorize police to establish road-checks to stop vehicles. Police already have the authority to do this in context of impaired driving so being asked to stop when in a motor vehicle is not a new requirement.

- Once stopped operator^{s.13} of the vehicle may be asked to identify who they are, where they live and if they are traveling for an essential reason, what that reason is.
- If there are reasonable grounds to believe that they have entered a region in contravention of the order they will be ordered to leave the region and may be issued a violation ticket.
- Police are not going to be conducting road checks in urban areas within the lower mainland as travel within this area is not being prohibited. They are going to be established in proximity to the boundary between the Fraser-Vancouver Coastal Health Authority region and the Northern-Interior Health Authority region.

- s.13

s.13 police may be present to support BC Ferries as they decline bookings to non-essential travellers.

- Enforcement may also occur during the lawful course of an officer's duties. For example, if police are responding to a disturbance in a hotel and one of the persons subject to the complaint is clearly from another region police would be able to issue a ticket.

I have a question related to BIPOC communities and the new order. Harsha Waila of BC Civil Liberties and several other groups say they were not consulted as per Farnsworth's comments that he held meetings with racialized groups Thursday to address concerns. I realize that he says they wanted privacy, but it seems many important groups were left out. Can you provide a comment on this?

Several people say they still don't know what to "expect" when pulled over, which is disturbing for racialized groups.

Hi team,

I'll reach out to Harsha on some of these concerns. I think her questions can help inform and clarify the order – especially in terms of what the order won't do.

Will/Mel, can your staff look into the bullet points on the scope of police powers?^{s.13}

Hi Naveen,

Thanks for reaching out and hope you're well. It's been a minute; didn't realize you were with the Office of the Premier now.

While I appreciate you are reaching on in your capacity with Stakeholder Relations, this is also a potentially significant constitutional issue and I would expect that the Solicitor General or Attorney General would be in touch with BCCLA, as well as other important organizations and communities.

Specifically, BCCLA would like to see the order. It is very troubling that the government would make an announcement – notably, seemingly contradictory in terms of the comments of the Premier and the comments of the Solicitor General - of this magnitude to the public that is so vague and with no accompanying details. I am sure you can understand and appreciate that this would raise many legitimate alarm bells for Indigenous, Black, and racialized communities, especially in the middle of a global and local reckoning about systemic racism in policing and policing powers.

And yes, we have many questions for the Province, most of which we have already noted publically:

- Has the Province considered the potential and significant legal violations of constitutional and privacy rights?
- What are the specific police powers being granted to police? It seems this order would increase police powers to question beyond the current powers of investigative detention.
- What is the permissible scope of questioning that police will be authorized to conduct? Police do not currently have the powers to ask people where they are going and for what purpose. It seems this order would expand discretionary police powers to ask a number of questions of BC residents suspected of traveling outside their health authority. All police powers, and especially discretionary police powers like police street checks, have a documented history of being racist especially against Indigenous and Black people.
- What exactly is "essential" travel? What about essential travel to access support services, care for a loved one, or work in criminalized economies?
- What proof will police be asking for to ascertain if a person is leaving their health authority for essential travel? How does one provide evidence that their mobility is essential? Will people have to produce sensitive and personal information, such as proof of employment or medical information to establish that their mobility is essential.
- How will the Province ensure that racialized residents are not subjected to increased police harassment, interrogation and surveillance during this questioning process? Will people have access to legal counsel when stopped by the police at these checkpoints?
- Will police be retaining or storing any information they collect?

- Why should we expect that police won't use this as a pretext for other law enforcement actions? Will police have the authority to run people's names into police databases to, for example, collect information on outstanding warrants or immigration status for migrants with precarious status? Will the police be barred from enforcing other laws in the course of their questioning at these checkpoints? How will the Province ensure this is not happening?
- What are the consequences for refusing to answer questions from the police? Could it result in criminal charges such as obstruction?
- What are the consequences for breaching the order?
- How are you consulting with BIPOC communities? Which organizations and individuals? It is a public process of consultation available to the most marginalized and vulnerable to police powers within diverse BIPOC communities?
- How is the tailoring of the order to health authority boundaries connected to the objective of lowering COVID transmissions? What evidence is there to base the policy underlying the order on? Is there clear evidence that the infection is being spread by leisure travellers who live in BC and who travel outside their health authority?

We believe there are urgent measures needed to be taken in order to curb the spread of COVID in our communities. However, we are deeply concerned about the overbroad and unconstitutional expansion of police powers that will disproportionately impact Black, Indigenous and racialized communities.

Thanks for listening in on the CBC and for being in touch, I look forward to hearing on the above.

Thank you,

“As government, we are aware of the concerns of representative groups and individuals and we are taking them into account. Government’s engagement is ongoing and our MLAs are in the process of holding multiple sessions with BIPOC organizations. If a group was not invited to a previous session that does not mean they won't be invited to a future one. Also, community groups have multiple ways of sharing their concerns. For instance, the BCCLA has sent an email and we will consider their concerns as we work to ensure marginalized and racialized are not adversely affected by next week's orders."

I have a question related to BIPOC communities and the new order. Harsha Waila of BC Civil Liberties and several other groups say they were not consulted as per Farnsworth's comments that he held meetings with racialized groups Thursday to address concerns. I realize that he says they wanted privacy, but it seems many important groups were left out. Can you provide a comment on this?

Several people say they still don't know what to "expect" when pulled over, which is disturbing for racialized groups.

For timing, Thursday 11am-12pm is our ideal timeslot. Wednesday is jammed, and we'll also have a lot more to share following cabinet and COVID cabinet. Perhaps when the meeting is set-up we can hint that a second piece will come next week?
